What can one think of the men, the party, the partisans, who then with as little concern as now, for the sake of party gain, prostituted our flag and railed against that of the United States—as good then as now—who would have "no truck or trade with the Yankees," who lowered the flag to the base level of partisan success; dragged it in the mire, and, to add injury to insult, took into the Cabinet as advisers of the King, men who had "shot holes through the flag?"

Then the United States flag, according to partisan claims, was only fit for a door mat; now is good enough to go to bed with. There is a great change, because the people have come to their senses; war has knocked a lot of flag-flapping nonsense out of a lot of partisans, taught them that the flag stands for something better than a political party; that it stands for all the people and all the people's best interests; that its protection, its symbolism, its might and meaning are all embracing; that it is the possession or ward of no party, but of all British people; that it was not meant to cover stacking of the cards in a political gambling game.

Times change; in good old Shylock's time, short shrift was the thing for the Jew; nor his Catholic Majesty of Spain is pleading for the persecuted Jews of Palestine.

WHAT WE HAVE DONE, AND CAN DO.

We don't know the extent of our ability till we are put to the test. Canada didn't think three years ago that she could do what she has done in waging war. We don't know what we can do in home production till we try. The home garden is a real home enterprise. There are perhaps more home gardens in Peterborough than ever before. We see at the street side a waiting automobile, opposite a vacant lot; we see, too, a group of three or four women or girls poking things into the newly turned soil. When the gloaming falls we see them gather up their rakes and trowels, throw the machine into gear, and go home happy with the sense of duty discharged, and hope for results.

These women, a type of thousands, are doing what they would have laughed at the idea of, two or three years ago. If someone had told the women of Canada that they would have been knitting up millions of miles of yarn into thousands of bales of socks for soldiers, no one would have believed it possible. Nor would any one have thought, not even the Canadian soldiers themselves, that Canadian soldiers on the battle front would have been fighting so bravely and successfully. We never before thought that our industrial capacity was as great as we have shown it to be in the production of munitions.

This war has made men and women of idlers and triflers. It has put into us a new spirit, created larger ambitions and given us a more reaching outlook upon things of the world at large and upon our own little world. Three or four years ago no one would have thought that the people of Peterborough would vote, almost unanimously, for a $300,000 bridge. We grumbled even then at the high rate of taxation; but since then we have in addition to high taxes for local interests, been paying, paying, paying for war work; for work that seems to promise no dividends. But the dividends, though not presently visible, are real—the salvation of our country and empire, the salvation of humanity's dearest interests. This war has been and is a dreadful experience, but it has had compensations. It has made us all more real men and women, with a bigger sense of our responsibilities, with a bigger faith in our capacity for meeting them, and a bigger capacity for service, which is after all what we all are put into the world to give. In a personal sense, and national sense, the world has taught us what we can do, what we can suffer and what we shall gain by doing our bit. In our climate the rigours of winter, the binding frost, the howling winds, are preparing the earth for the lush growth, the leafy beauty and sweet bloom of June. And our war troubles, our war trials, have a reinforcing influence upon our characters and our lives. We can do more, and bear more; we can even bear and face with equanimity—especially those not likely to be directly affected — the thought and fact of conscription or an election. We have done so much, and borne so much that we can do and bear a little more.

To make popular coal supply the real democratic thing, the aldermen should act as "coal heavers."

TITLES AND DEMOCRACY.

With the congratulations due a former citizen on his having been honoured by the King, comes the reminder that Sir Joseph Flavelle — though he may be thought worthy of a titular decoration by the Ottawa dispensers of nominations for knighthoods, etc.—is not exempt from criticism by the interests of labour. At the Dominion Labour Conference at Ottawa, complaints were made of the unfair conditions prevailing under the Imperial Munitions Board, of which the newly decorated baronet, Sir Joseph Flavelle, is chairman. He is charged by the labour interests with being "absolutely unfair and antagonistic to the workers." It is asserted that he declines to recognize organised labour, that he has lengthened the hours of work, and has not enforced fair labour conditions; circumstances which, it is claimed, have created a feeling that may result in a strike at a time when the demand for munitions may be greatest.

If these things are only partially true, the nation is concerned, for they affect national interests. The labour people are entitled to their opinion, and if they think Sir Joseph Flavelle is not meeting the demands of the nation's interests, and the interests of labour, they have a perfect right to say so. We can respect labour, to be extremely sympathetic with the distribution of knighthoods, etc., for none of them will ever come their way. The honours are reserved for money and political pull, not for any great distinction in service or character.

If these honours came directly from the King, inspired by his knowledge of the merits and character of the men honoured, it would be a different thing, but the King has not the slightest personal knowledge of the men presented him for decoration, if he even ever heard their names. The Government at Ottawa recommends certain names for the royal consideration, and these names must be those of the right party stripe and possess much money.

While no one disparages the men whom "the King (through government recommendation) delights to honour," or the honours themselves, yet there is much to be said for the claim that they do not match the simplicity of the democratic principles, which we and the best half of the world are fighting for. At Ottawa a few days ago, Mr. A. J. Balfour, by the way, plain Mr. Balfour, like Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George, without any "handle to his name," spoke of the urgent need of bending every effort to win the war in the interests of democracy. Either we mean this talk of democracy or we are living shams. Democracy is a simple, plain, unadorned, every-day thing, and does not comport with the tawdy tinsel of class titles and dress distinction. Honest "Joe" Flavelle, when he was a citizen of Peterborough, was as good a man as Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart.—or, according to the Labour Conference, a better man.

A prince can make a belted knight, a marquis, duke and a' that; but an honest man's aboon his might; a man's a man for a' that.

The British Genius for Discipline

The most distinctive characteristic of the British people has been said to be its genius for discipline. Immediately before the war this statement was regarded as almost ludicrous, in view of the acute differences and divisions which were apparent in all ranks of life. There was revolt, passive or active, in the political, religious and industrial worlds; it had extended even to the sexes, so that war between transient man and the eternal feminine had come to have a new and concrete meaning. But the instant a greater issue appeared and it was realized that the nation was engaged in a death struggle with Germany, these superficial cleavages and quarrels vanished; the genius for discipline instinct in the race reasserted itself, and the people willingly accepted the orders of their leaders, and of their own accord, as it were, fell into orderly ranks, resolute to march to victory. As we look back over the events of the last three years (for we are fast approaching that period of war) we can to-day discern how again and again the Government has relied implicitly on this quality. Even at this time when a new unrest is apparent in several quarters, it is obvious that the Government places its trust in "the good sense of the people," which is only another way of expressing the same truth, for as no army without discipline can hope to win victory in the field, so can no nation without discipline expect to win victory in this war of nations. This is more especially true in the light of Sir William Robertson's recent saying that a nation in its civil, political, industrial and economic elements represents 75 per cent. of the forces employed in modern warfare. This, perhaps, is the most important statement publicly made in recent months by a distinguished officer. The people have confidence in the Chief of the General Staff; they know he would not have given utterance to this opinion if he did not agree with it.

Discipline does not imply the harsh rule of the drill-sergeant, such as is and has been practised in Germany. When applied to a British regiment, good discipline signifies that the men are as well conducted off parade as on it; that they know how to enjoy rationally a large measure of personal liberty; that if under the accidents of military service a platoon finds itself in a tight corner it will carry on in the same spirit as though the battalion were in force. Loyalty between all ranks is a first essential of good discipline; there must be a mutual confidence between officers, non-coms., and men as between the varying grades of officers and the feeling must be engendered that the reputation of the regiment is the first thought in every man's breast from the C. O. downwards, and that not one is out to play his own game or to use his fellows as pawns for his personal advancement. But it will inevitably happen that now and again insubordination will occur. It must be instantly repressed with stern justice if discipline is not to suffer. But above all there must be good leadership; contradictory orders are fatal in that they denote a muddled mind or a feeble character. It is contrary to human nature to place reliance on a man whose actions and words constantly vary. All that we have written here about a regiment applies with equal force to the people as a whole.

The war is not over by any means. As much has to be done at home as on the battlefields if complete victory is to be won. The present industrial unrest causes perplexity to our Allies; they do not understand how at the very moment when the country is deriving the first full benefit of the strenuous toil of the last two years, the home workers should weary, and, as it seems, lose heart. It would appear to them as though this were the very moment when all other thoughts and considerations would be merged in the single resolution to finish even more brilliantly what they had begun so well. There are doubtless numerous complications in the strikes which only those intimate with the full facts can appreciate at their right worth; but we do not believe that national discipline will suffer if the Government behaves in a firm and sensible manner; but there must be good leadership on the part of Government and a complete clearance as far as it is possible of all misunderstandings and misconceptions. Never in the history of modern industrialism has popular sympathy been more entirely with the workers; we know what they have accomplished, both on the fields of France and in the workshops of these islands, but the public also realise that there is one paramount issue at the moment —the winning of the war. Nothing must be allowed to interfere with that, otherwise all the terrible sacrifice hitherto offered will be waste.—Land and Water, London.

CHEESE SOLD THIS MORNING AT 20 7-8 CTS.

2333 Boxes Were Boarded — One Buyer Took the Entire Lot

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held this morning in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. Mr. Robert Duff, who presided, read a letter from Mr. G. C. Publow, Dairy Commissioner for Canada, in which the writer urged all cheese makers throughout the country to pay particular attention to the manufacture of cheese. Owing to the submarine menace, the shipment of cheese is an uncertain quantity, and the keeping qualities of the product largely depends upon the method of manufacture. A letter was also read from the Commission in Montreal recently appointed, appointed by the British Board of Trade, outlining the conditions under which cheese manufactured in Canada is bought and shipped.

2,333 Boxes.

Two thousand three hundred and thirty-three boxes of cheese were boarded and the entire lot was taken by Mr. Morton of Belleville at 20 7-8 cents. The first bid at 18 1-2 was opened by Mr. Cooke, and the price was fractionally raised until the maximum figure was reached.

The following factories boarded cheese:

MILITARY NEWS

Every day, as soon as the sun comes out, the birds whistle and sing from morning until night, thus making time pass by so cheerfully. Some of the patients, as soon as they are dressed of a morning, are taken out by stretchers and mattresses, and then laid on the grass and left for the whole day, having their food brought out to them.

Here they lie beneath the beautiful sunshine, getting quite sunburnt, listening to the various kinds of birds singing in the trees and round about the grounds. Sometimes there is a cuckoo, which flies around the grounds, and then settles on the branch of a tree and cuckoos a few times, then flies away again.

To-day is another glorious day, and one can hear nothing else but the birds whistling and singing outside.

There are 2,400 patients in this hospital at present, and they say that they can get another 1,000 in yet if necessary.

In this hospital there are quite a lot of Canadians, Australians and English. We have also some Russian soldiers.

Love to all at home, and many kisses.—From your ever loving son,

Harry.

If Mrs. D. W. Gerow will communicate with the secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, Room 204, Barrie Building, she will obtain information in regard to her husband.

Mrs. John Quirie, 270 Euclid Avenue, has received the following letter from her son, Sapper David Carlisle, Canadian Engineers recently reported wounded.

Lord Derby War Hospital, Eng.
May 18.

Dear Mother,—On the 13th of May I was wounded, not seriously, but bad enough. In fact, I am peppered from head to toe with tiny pieces of shell casing which vary in size, big and little. The nurses have already christened me "spatters." I stood the operation, taking the pieces of metal out, well on the evening of the 15th and only this evening reached "Blighty" and here and I haven't had time to get an address yet, but I will write and let you know how I go on as often as I can and I'll have lots of time.

Did not see Murray before I left—these things all happen so sudden—but dropped him a card on the way, also one to Harold.

There is at least one nurse from Peterborough here and four from Brandon, so don't worry, I'll be looked after all right. Much love.

COALITION MOVE NOW READY

Premier Borden and Sir Wilfred Have Final Conference To-day—Statement Expected To-morrow

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, June 6.—At noon to-day Sir Wilfrid Laurier left his office in the Commons and proceeded to Sir Robert Borden's office in the east block. The two leaders, it is understood, will have a final conference and decision in regard to the question of coalition will probably be reached by one o'clock. It is not definitely known at the moment whether the announcement will be made immediately after the conference or deferred until the House meets at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

This morning Sir Wilfrid conferred with Hon. George P. Graham and Fred Pardee, the chief Liberal Whip, who returned to-day from Toronto. It is generally thought here that coalition is dead. Rumour is now busy with the names of men whom Sir Robert may take into his cabinet if he has to remake it out of Conservative material. Senator Lougheed is likely to have a place and C. A. Magrath is also mentioned. Of the sitting members Sir Hubert Ames, Montreal, and W. F. Nickle, of Kingston, are possibilities.

Later.—After half an hour's conference with the Premier, Sir Wilfrid came out. He referred the newspaper men to Premier Borden for a statement. Sir Robert emerged shortly afterwards and surveyed upwards of twenty press men. He said he was sorry that with so many newspaper men awaiting him he had no statement to make. He added that he didn't think a statement might be expected this afternoon either.

Almost any interpretation could be placed upon the announcement made by the two leaders after their conference to-day. Sir Wilfrid's intimation that he may issue a statement later is taken in some quarters to mean that all is over, but the formal announcement that coalition has been found impossible and that both Sir Robert and Sir Wilfrid wish to take time to prepare a statement reviewing the negotiations and placing responsibility for their failure. On the other hand, it may be that Sir Wilfrid has submitted a final counter proposition which Sir Robert will not accept off hand, but which he wished to take time to digest. It may be considered that Sir Wilfrid has gone as far as he intends to go and that the decision now rests absolutely with Sir Robert. To-morrow, the Premier will likely issue a statement and Sir Wilfrid will follow it with one setting forth the Liberal side of the case. There is a strong probability that both these statements will tell why coalition failed.

INITIATIVE PERMANENTLY LOST.

(New York Tribune.)

Everything that has happened since the British stepped out of their trenches on Easter Monday confirms the fact that the initiative has been permanently lost to the Germans on the West, that they are manifestly out-gunned and that they are compelled to fight a steadily losing battle. It is necessary, on the other hand, to recognize that in the last two weeks there has been a total refutation of any charge that German morale as a whole has broken down. German troops have never fought better in the war than they have fought in the last two weeks before Arras. But this is mainly due to the fact that the Germans have been obliged to use their picked troops, selected to make an offensive elsewhere, in endeavoring to bolster up a threatened line.

Application To Establish City Fuel Yard Etc.

paying the debt the city proposed to incur.

Mr. Gordon admitted that the city had not issued debentures nor had struck a rate for the $35,000 expected expenditure. The Council hoped to avoid the issuing of short term debentures which would be necessary in this case. They would prove too costly. Besides the city had no knowledge of the cost of the work.

Mr. McIntyre stated that if the city contracted a debt in 1917 it provide a definite legal means of meeting it.

Mr. Harrington suggested that in view of the city's indefinite plans the Board leave the matter where it stood without considering the practical side. It was merely supposed by the city that certain things could be done.

Mr. Gordon replied that the hearing he proceeded with subject to the amendment of the by-law as demanded by the Board. The city might eventually decide not to establish a yard unless conditions warranted it.

May Pledge Debentures.

Mr. McIntyre offered the suggestion that the city could issue debentures and hypothecate them, give them as security to the bank from which the money was borrowed.

Ald. Dobbin.

Ald. Dobbin stated that the Council had advertised on May 3rd for coal for the city institutions and buildings, but no tenders were received from the dealers. Retail coal selling was of the hand-to-mouth character. Ald. Dobbin related his own ineffectual efforts to obtain a supply for his home requirements, and although he was a customer of seventeen years, his dealer could not give him any quantity.

There was great anxiety in the public mind, he said, as to when coal was going to come in, and the Council's action intended to guarantee to the people that there would be a sufficiency of coal in Peterborough next winter.

At this season, in normal years, the dealers strove to persuade their customers to order their coal during the summer months. Now they are not accepting orders for future delivery.

Could Not Get Supply.

Mr. Clark Sweet, a local workingman, said he tried to buy coal here last Saturday at the offices of R. Hicks Co., Ltd., H. B. Taylor and Son, Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co., and Weir and McCarthy. The Taylor and Weir companies would not take an order; Hicks and Co. offered one-qurater of a ton at $2.75, and the Peterborogh Fuel and Cartage quoted $10 a ton, but had enough for only a few customers.

Witness said he had no coal and went to the dealers with the intention of supplying his needs.

Last Winter's Conditions.

Mayor Duffus was called when Mr. Ingram indicated the lack of evidence regarding local coal conditions last winter. He told of the emergency methods of sending automobiles to the coal yards for small quantities, when citizens reported to him that the dealers were unable to deliver to them on account of the pressure of business; otherwise many persons would have suffered severely during the coldest days of the winter.

Advised by Dealers.

The Mayor said he personally went to different dealers this spring, none of whom would accept his order for his private use. He held a conference with the coal dealers and one or two of them advised him that the city should take steps to secure coal for next winter. At the public meeting, attended by practically all the coal men, one of them strongly advised the Council to arrange for a local supply if it could be obtained.

Mr. McIntyre—"Do you think the city, by extra efforts, can obtain coal?"

Mayor Duffus—"Yes, Sir, I think we can."

Mr. McIntyre—"Why can't the coal dealers obtain it for themselves?"

Mayor Duffus—"I don't know; but they advised us to go into the market."

Mr. Harrington—"Did it not appeal to you that if the dealers could not get coal, the city would likely fail?"

Mayor Duffus—"To some extent. But that is no reason why we should gave up our efforts to get coal for the citizens next winter.

Not Actuated by Competition.

The Mayor assured the Board that the city was moved only by the desire to safeguard the interests of the citizens this year. It was hoped that the extreme conditions of last winter might be obviated by present provision for the scarcity the local dealers said they anticipated.

Mr. Robert Hicks was next called by Mr. Gordon, although he had not been summoned as a witness. He estimated the required tonnage of the city and suburbs for 1917, at 85,000 tons.

Up to the present his company had delivered more coal than was delivered to July 15th, a year ago. Mr. Hicks estimated the ordinary per capita consumption in Peterborough at 1 1-4 tons, fixed it at 1 1-2 tons this year, due to the shortage of wood. Referring to the cost of handling coal he explained that freight to Suspension bridge was based on gross tons and from the bridge to Peterborough on the net ton of 2,000 pounds The cost laid down in Peterborough was estimated at $9.04 a ton. The municipal coal yard would serve to educate the people in the real facts of the business. Many of them expected to get coal at $4 or $5 a ton.

"We have no opposition whatever to the municipal coal yard. As a war measure we are in favour of it."

Mr. Gordon—"Because of its temporary character?"

Mr. Hicks—"Yes".

How Market is Influenced.

The people want coal at once, and dealers recently flocked to the buying centres driven by their home demands. The bid against each other for supplies, the price soared, and afterwards dropped back, leaving them with a lo Mr. Hicks said he had some coal that cost him $7 at the mines and which is being sold at a loss.

To Mr. Gordon, he said he expected improved conditions during the next few months, but more coal would be needed for Peterborough than was used last winter.

Believes City Can Buy.

"I think the city can buy coal as well as I can," Mr. Hicks replied to Mr. Harrington, qualifying that with "from the independent companies."

"The people want to buy in 30 days the quantity of coal usually handled in 12 months."

Mr. Ingram—The people have rushed the dealers.

Mr. Hicks—We delivered until May 23rd coal sold in April. We had to keep something in reserve for the current requirements of the city.

Mr. Harrington—Are you doing all you can to get coal?

Mr. Hicks—We have a standing order with the D. L. & W. for all we can get. But I don't think we'll buy any more independent coal.

Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, next called, said that he had been in the coal business here seventeen years. In conversation with Buffalo yesterday, he was told that the coal shops are shut up there four days a week, and were doing business on only two days. The prospects were said to be more favourable, according to information from New York.

"I haven't taken an order on a guarantee to fill it," he said. "I lost considerable money that way last year."

Mr. Fitzgerald seemed dubious of the city's profitable entry into the coal business. If it wanted to take a chance he had no objection to the scheme. But he referred to Mr. Hicks' loss with the independents.

"The public is chasing the dealers and they are bidding their heads off."

Mr. Ingram—In other words, the public is in a panic.

Mr. Harrington—Do you think the city can run a business better than you are doing?

Mr. Fitzgerald—No. They will be taking a chance of losing money.

Mr. Cox Called.

Wm. H. Cox, wholesale coal dealer, Toronto, was called in opposition to the application. He stated that the supply and distribution of coal has been normal, but the demand is abnormal.

Is there any scarcity at the mines? Mr. Harrington asked.

Not sufficient for the present demand. The present supply is passing into the normal channels. The dealers are not receiving sufficient coal to meet the demand. The April production was 1,000,000 tons in excess of the output in the same month last year, and May would likely show another increase.

Mr. Cox admitted that many of the companies were giving the U.S. consumers a preferential treatment, hence the supply coming into Ontario did not reflect the increased output or show the effect of it.

Mr. Cox stated that there would likely be sufficient coal this year for the demands of Peterborough, "providing the railways are able to handle the coal." That was a danger that might arise. Mr. Cox said he really feared the railway situation.

Mr. McIntyre—Why is there such a heavy demand demand now?

Mr. Cox—The people were short of supplies last year, and were anxious to buy now for next winter's needs. Labour conditions at the mines in April and May, 1916, caused a large decrease in the production and, added to that, was the failure of the railways.

To Mr. Gordon he said he apprehended serious railway conditions next winter, due to the depreciation of rolling stock and the decrease of motive power and train crews.

"Your belief that the situation will be better is but a hope," Mr. Gordon commented.

Mr. Cox declared that municipalities could not buy as advantageously as dealers.

No Price Restrictions.

Mr. Harrington enumerated his objections to the application, but Mr. McIntyre declared that the Board had decided to approve it. The success of the venture would depend upon the business capacity of the men the city has entrusted with its affairs. He ordered that a complete accounting of the business, if any, be made annually on December 31st to the Municipal Bureau, Toronto.

Mr. McIntyre had announced the decision unaware that Mr. Harrington had not completed his objections. To them he replied by alluding to the acquiescence expressed by the dealers in their assertions to the Board.

Mr. Harrington—We must take those assertions in the way they are made.

Mr. Harrington asked that the city be prevented from selling at a lower price than that quoted by the dealers, but Mr. McIntyre refused to exceed the Municipal Act's provisions. He added that he was sure the city would deal fairly with the coal merchants, and complimented the city and dealers upon the sentiment exhibited in the hearing.

HOW I MADE MY HAIR GROW

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures, I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring gray hair to its natural colour, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in first-class condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all of his hair to its natural colour. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows:

Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Menthol Crystals, ½ drachm; Layons de Compoese, 2 oz. If you like it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. This, however, is not necessary. Apply night and morning rub thoroughly into the scalp.

A PAIR OF EYES SENT TO A GIRL FROM PRUSSIA

Joking Threat Against Kaiser Results in Death of Prisoner

NEW YORK, June 5.—A grewsome story of an almost incredible act of brutality perpetrated by Prussians was told by Peter Debrolles, a merchant returning from a business trip to France, and who stopped here en route to his home in Montreal.

"At Havre I met Mlle. Gabrielle Dalbret, whom I had known in Montreal," says Mr. Debrolles. "She had gone abroad to try to reach her fiance, Lieutenant Francois Bourdain, also of Montreal, who had distinguished himself greatly in many battles.

"When she reached France Mlle. Dalbret learned that her sweetheart had been taken prisoner and was being held in a camp somewhere near Berlin. In some manner she managed to communicate with him, and in his replying letter to the young woman he expressed the deepest sort of gratitude for the sacrifices she had made to try to see him. He closed his letter by assuring her that he would always be happy to be at her services, no matter what she might ask him to do.

"Half jokingly, Mlle. Dalbert told him in her next letter that she had often wished she might have an opportunity to meet the Kaiser. If my wish ever comes true, she added, 'I surely will scratch out his eyes. And here is a good chance for you to prove that you mean what you have written about being anxious to do my bidding. As you are so near the Kaiser's residence, send me his eyes.'

"It is poor policy to joke with the Prussians. Less than two weeks after Mlle. Dalbret had written that letter she received a parcel from the prison camp. It contained a pair of blue eyes. There was no writing with the grewsome present.

"The young woman's mind became unbalanced and for many weeks she hovered on the brink of the grave. I saw her after she had recovered her health and reason. She told me that her fiance had not replied to any of her letters since. He had blue eyes, she said."

For the second time this year the Fire, Water and Light committee has been called upon to grant an increase to the members of the Fire Department. Last evening the committee met and recommended that the salaries of the firemen be as follows:

	New Schedule	New Schedule
Chief	$1,600	$1,600

Assistant chief, captain and lieutenant were not provided for in the old schedule.

Entitled to Protection.

Ald. Worth said that as a ratepayer he would demand that the fire department be brought up to strength. At present the force is reduced to nine men, or about one half of the authorized number.

"We carry seven hundred thousand dolalrs worth of insurance on our plant and we are entitled to protection," said Ald. Worth.

Ald. Dobbin said it was a question of money.

"They have already received a ten per cent. raise this year," explained Ald. Stratton. "They took our money and laughed at us," he added.

OUR DAILY CALENDAR

Somebody said it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied,
That maybe it could, but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so, till he tried,
So he buckled right in, with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried, he hid it.
He started to sing, as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

At a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners held yesterday afternoon, Mr. G. N. Gordon was advised that the Board would be responsible for his costs in connection with defence of Chief of Police Thompson and Detective Meagher, who are named as defendants in an action instituted by William Quinn of East City for alleged malicious prosecution. The members of the Board made it plain that they would not be responsible for any judgment that Quinn might recover from defendants.

W. O. W. Hold Good Meeting

A large number of members of Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, turned out Monday, and under the leadership of Head Deputy Mr. A. E. Hubbard of Toronto, a large class of new members were initiated, including some persons from Campbellford. Two automobiles brought up twelve members from Campbellford and they were given a good Peterborough welcome. After the initiating ceremony was over Head Consul Dr. W. T. Harrison of London delivered an eloquent address, explaining fully the solidity and strong financial position of the Canadian Order of the Woodmen of the World. Following the Head Consul's address, Head Deputy Mr. Jas. Plowman of Toronto, who is coming to stay for a month here in Peterborough, gave a racy little speech and promised great results during his visit and wants the co-operation of all members.

After the meeting was over ice cream and cakes were served and the visitors entertained, and a glorious meeting closed at midnight with the singing of the National Anthem.

Protection of The Crops

Do Not Delay Reporting Insect Outbreaks

Crop protection means crop production. Canada loses over one hundred million dollars worth of her staple crops every year through the depredations of insect pests. A large portion of this loss could be prevented. As we cannot afford to lose the smallest portion of our grain and other food crops during the present critical period when the production of food is of supreme importance, the Dominion Department of Agriculture is making every effort to prevent, so far as possible, losses due to insect pests. Crop protection must go hand in hand with crop production.

Insect pests are not usually noticed or reported until they have caused considerable damage. Therefore it is urged that the closest watch be kept on all crops for the first appearance of any insect pests or damage. Immediately such damage is observed steps should be taken to control the outbreak in its incipient stage. If the pest or the method of control is unknown, specimens of the insect and its injuries should be sent at once to the nearest of the following sources of expert assistance: The Agricultural Colleges, the Provincial Departments of Agriculture, or their local District Representatives, the officer in charge of the nearest Dominion Entomological Station, or direct to the Dominion Entomologist, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for examination; and advice in regard to control measures will be furnished without delay. Letters and packages up to 11 ounces in weight may be mailed to the Dominion Entomologist, "Free," but postage will be required on letters or specimens sent to the other sources of above mentioned.

Do not delay reporting insect outbreaks or sending inquiries; delay may involve serious losses that could otherwise be prevented. Write immediately, or telegraph if the outbreak is serious. Clean farming, the securing of vigorous growth in young plants and good cultivation are the best protective measures against insect attack. Keep all crops constantly under supervision for the first appearance of any damage in order that it may be checked without delay. Increased crop production involves increased protection against pests.

Newspapers will greatly assist the Government's efforts by copying the above notice. Crop reporters and other collaborators are requested to co-operate with the Dominion Entomologist by immediately reporting to him any insect outbreaks in crops in their districts. The co-operation of all in protecting our crops is most earnestly solicited.

Annual Meeting of the Women's Missionary Society

Interesting Sessions Held in St. Andrew's Church—Address by Returned Missionary from China—Farming in China

At last night's session of the Women's Missionary Society, held in St. Andrew's Church, Dr. Menzies, who spent the past twenty-two years in Honan, China, gave a most interesting description of his harrowing life amongst the natives as a missionary. Rev. Mr. Rowland, who was in the chair, in speaking of the afternoon session, said that the giving to the Missionary Society had, during he past year, increased over $1,000. This, he said, was extremely gratifying in view of the heavy calls which had been made on all purses, through war conditions.

Mr. Pogue, who introduced the speaker of the meeting, said that he and Dr. Menzies were class-mates in '85, at Knox College. He said it would be a great education to the mission field to hear Dr. Menzies, who is a veteran from the front line of workers for Christianity.

Dr. Menzies.

Dr. Menzies, in his address, said that mission work had great drawbacks in China. The people are exclusive and intensely suspicious of foreigners, who, they are convinced, have come to spy upon their vast mineral wealth. They are industrious, frugal, and intelligent, but filthy in their home life.

Presbyterial Field.

The Presbyterial field lies in Honan, a densely populated section of over 8,000,000 inhabitants. In this section famine sweeps down frequently, always with a toll of thousands.

Medical Work in Honan.

He said a knowledge of medicine was essential to the worker in the mission field in China. There are three hospitals in Honan, and here gather vast multitudes of hundreds of thousands with every loathsome disease imaginable — tuberculosis, ulcers, gangrene, children with horrible abscesses, aggravated by the crude Chinese treatment. The poor creatures who come from a wide radius to the three hospitals there have absolute faith in the "Christian Devils." Here an operation is performed for two-thirds of a cent; chloroform, 30 cents extra.

Chinese Treatment.

One thousand years ago a book was written in China. Since then thre has been no progress, and the same book is used. Medical science has made no progress for it doesn't exist. The Chinese doctors prescribe for the most terrible ills strange doses consisting of grasshoppers, coffin nails, lizards, etc., boiled down.

Farming in China.

Farming has come to a fine point in China. Every inch is utilized and the land is very productive. There is no room for cattle and the men do the ploughing. In the cities the filth is indescribable. The street is as much one person's property as another's and is made use of in a strange way; hides are flaid in the open streets. Every home contains several generations, mostly vile, unhappy and unutterably ignorant. Fresh air is considered deadly, likewise water.

Satisfaction in Mission Work.

Dr. Menzies told the most revolting tales of Chinese cruelty and so-called justice. To blind a man or chop his ankles is common treatment of offenders, yet in labouring amongst these heathen people the missionary reaps great reward in spreading the Gospel to the lowest type of man, and gradually bringing him to the realization of the truth of the message.

Call for Mission Workers.

The need of mission workers is greater than ever in China. It is gratifying, the speaker said, to know that the hands holding the ropes of financial assistance were firm, but workers are needed, as well as nurses are in demand, and as yet there are none to represent Canada in the field.

Before closing Miss Helen MacLaren sang "Just as I Am" very beautifully.

Yesterday Afternoon.

In the afternoon addresses on Mission Work were given by Miss Thompson, Toronto and Mrs. Purdy of Cobourg. These proved most interesting, instructive and helpful to the delegates from other societies. A model mission band, held to illustrate how to conduct the newer societies was given by the members of the Junior Mission Band of St. Paul's church.

Treasurer's Report.

The report of the treasurer for the whole Presbyterial, showed very satisfactory conditions to exist. There are 29 auxiliaries of which there are 866 members this year. This shows an increase of 50. The amount contributed to the society during the year from the auxiliaries was $4,522.97. From the Mission Bands $318.39, or an increase this year of $624.84.

Officers Elected.

At this morning's session the following officers were elected.

Mrs. Roger, Peterborough, and Mrs. Craick, Port Hope, Honorary Presidents.

Mrs. Waddell, Peterborough, President.

Miss M. Dickson, Peterborough, 1st Vice-President.

Extra Man Will Be Added to Strength of Police Department

Mayor Duffus Favours Reduction — Chief Thompson Wants Addition During Vacation Period

At a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners held yesterday afternoon, Chief of Police Thompson was authorized to employ an extra man for the duration of the departmental vacation period.

'Has anything turned up whereby we can get along with less men?" inquired Mayor Duffus.

Chief Thompson reminded the Mayor that the summer season creates extra work in the form of traffic duty, in addition to the necessity of guarding twenty-five or thirty empty houses. As it is now, it is only possible to have three men on the night patrol. The Chief reports that he had taken William John Sandback on the strength. Sandback was a returned soldier, married and twenty-five years of age. He was taken on to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John Brown who went to Sudbury. The matter of appointing a sergeant in the place of John Brown will be deferred for a time."

Was Disappointed.

Mayor Duffus expressed his disappointment at the failure of the Chief to discover a means by which the police force could be reduced in strength. He was of the opinion that the work would be much lighter since the advent of prohibition.

Chief Thompson replied by stating that the convictions were more numerous this year up to the present time than they were for a corresponding period of last year. The Chief also pointed out that the demands on the department were greater during the school holidays. One reason for this was the many complaints made by people respecting children disturbing the public peace.

"Too bad about some of these people," observed His Honour Judge Huycke.

Mayor Duffus—"They forget it is the development of the country. We need every one of them."

"I haven't much sympathy with such people," commented His Honour, who suggested that the children be given reasonable liberty in their daily round of play.

In connection with the need for an extra man during the holiday period, Chief Thompson referred to the extra traffic duties that are incumbent upon the force at this season of the year.

Increasing Danger.

Judge Huycke —"There has been a lot of uneasiness about the traffic situation and its increasing dangers."

Chief Thompson said he stood at the corner of George and Hunter streets on Saturday afternoon last and he looked for an accident every minute.

Mayor Duffus said that his reason for seeking a reduction in the strength of the police force was not so much actuated by a desire to save money as it was to conserve man-power. One man less employed on the police force would release a man for some other necessary work.

Judge Huycke seconded Magistrate Dumble's motion to appoint another man for the summer vacation period. The motion carried.

BERLIN, June 6.—British attacks delivered yesterday only succeeded in penetrating the German position at the Roeux railway station, where fighting continues for small sections of trenches, says to-days army headquarters' statement. The artillery battle in the Wytechaete salient continued with only short interruptions.

VIENNA, June 6.—Capture of an important portion of Italian trenches south of Jamiano with 171 officers and 6,500 men, was announced in to-day's official statement. The ground regained was recently taken by the Italians in their offensive.

(By William Philip Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THF FIELD, June 6.—An artillery duel was thundering all the way from Vimy to the north of Ypres to-day while a hot sun blistered down on the waiting forces in the trenches. In the clear sky air fight was incessant. The British hammering from their field guns is having a perceptible effect on the enemy. Prisoners captured in the innumerable small raids that are occurring every night declare the stream of steel is playing havoc with the German front and support trenches and rendering elaborate entanglements useless as obstacles. The German nerves have been so badly shattered at some places that fresh divisions just arrived from the Russian front are replacing them.

The Bavarians were simply appalled at the lightning recovery which the Canadians showed when they struck back, and for the second time took the electric light station at Avion, near Lens. With the vigorous blow which the Bavarians struck Sunday, resulting in ejecting the Maple Leafers, the Germans evidently thought they had knocked most of the fight out of their adversaries. They were not prepared for the sharp fight with which the Canadians "come back."

PETROGRAD, June 6.—Radical leaders of three Allied nations joined in a letter to the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council to-day condemning any international Socialist Conference at Stockholm which would mean a meeting of Allied delegates with German committeemen who support Kaiserism.

The three Allied Socialists and near Socialists were Arthur Henderson, member of Lloyd George's War Cabinet and a Labourite (the British Socialist party), Albert Thomas, Minister of Munitions for France, a Socialist, and Albert Vandervelde, a Belgian Socialist of international reputation.

Their joint letter asserted surprise that the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council had appealed for an "international conference" in view of previous conversations on that subject.

WASHINGTON, June. 6.—In an hour and a half running fight between an American armed merchantmtn and a German submarine, the merchantman sank the submersible, according to official advices to the State Department to-day.

The submarine flying no flag, fired thirty-five shots and the steamer twenty-five, according to the State Department reports. The last shot pierced the U-boat, which reared out of the water, stern up, standing upright for a few seconds, then disappeared from sight.

The Navy Department is convinced that in this case there is no question that the U-boat was bagged.

U. S. SHIP MONGOLIA FIRES FOUR SHOTS AT SUB

Escapes Torpedo by Skilful Manoeuvring and Arrives Safely in Britain.

LONDON, June 6.— The American steamship Mongolia fired four shots on June 1 at a German submarine which discharged a torpedo at the liner. Neither vessel was damaged.

The Mongolia was 250 miles from the British coast when the submarine appeared and fired a torpedo. By skilful manoeuvring the steamer escaped the torpedo and opened on the submarine with her guns. Four shots were fired. The submarine fled, although unhit. The Mongolia proceeded on her voyage, and has arrived at a British port.

On a voyage to England in April the Mongolia fired on a submarine in British waters. On his arrival in London, Captain Rice said there was no doubt that the captain of the U-boat had been killed and that the craft had been damaged badly, but had reached Kiel.

Major Frederick A. Besty, of Chicago, and a member of the Northwestern University medical unit aboard the Mongolia, declared the conduct of the nurses aboard the vessel was splendid. The medical unit which arrived on the Mongolia will leave Saturday for France.

WOMEN OF ENGLAND SET EXAMPLE FOR AMERICANS

LONDON—This is not a new story, it is an account of a wonderful development which will bear repeating many times more, especially in view of the entry of the United States into the great war.

This is the story of how the women of England, just as domestic as those of the United States, have taken the places of men at work, releasing their fathers, sons and brothers for service in the army. The United States will see the same development within the next few months.

Everywhere I turn I find women doing the work, ordinarily performed by men. In the factories, which are pouring out big guns and tons and tons of shells and cartridges daily; in the railroad stations, selling tickets and taking them; delivering letters in the streets, operating the tram cars and the rumbling motor buses, operating elevators—everywhere, in fact—are women. Each of them has taken the place of a man so that he can shoulder a rifle and go to the front.

MORE THAN 1,000,000 EMPLOYED

How many women are thus employed I do not know. I doubt if any one knows. I have heard various estimates which place the figure at considerably more than a million. I have heard that no less than 850,000 women are employed in the manufacture of war supplies alone.

These women who are doing the ork of men in the munition factories get to work early in the morning, some of them at five o'clock. They wear overalls and take their places at great lathes and drills, at forges and riveting machines, operating them with marvellous skill—in fact, almost as well as the most expert machinists. Those who are less efficient are occupied with less important work, such as filling cartridges with powder, the adjustment of caps and the assortment and packing of the finished product.

They work long hours, but their pay is good. I met one man who told me that his daughter is working in a munition factory, not because she is compelled to earn a living, but because she wants to do her part for her country. She is engaged in packing cartridges and her pay is £3 10s a week, which is approximately $17 in America.

NATIONAL SERVICE ORGANIZED.

But, strictly speaking, almost all the work the women are doing in England now is war work. Conditions have changed completely, because of the need for men at the front. The women have enrolled in what is known as the National Service, and it is an honour for one of them to be wearing one of the neat little uniforms of a trade.

To the sojourner in London the most striking thing at first is the girls who take the fares on the huge, lumbering motor buses. Most of them are young and pretty. They wear skirts that come just below their knees, with tightly laced high boots. Their uniforms are of blue serge, and their hair is tucked up neatly under a chic turbin hat. Their ticket cases and coin holders are slung over their shoulders.

It is more difficult to climb to the top of a London motor bus up a tiny circular stairway, than one in Fifth avenue, but the girls run up and down constantly, never losing their balance, even when the bus turns and twists through the crooked streets. The buses are driven by men, older men, unfit for army service, because of the dangers of London traffic.

The uniforms of the women letter carriers are similar to those of the motor bus girls. About the only distinguishing mark is that the buttons, instead of being brass, are nickel, and, of course the coin holder is supplanted by a letter pouch. These women go the rounds of the business and residential sections in exactly the same way as men in America. And they are just as efficient.

War Department Ready To Select New Army at Once; 625,000 in the First Call

Men May Also Be Drawn from Registration List To Bring Regular Force and National Guard To Full Strength — Method of Choosing Not Disclosed.

SELECTION A STATE DUTY

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7. — From the ten million men between the ages of twenty-three and thirty who registered the War department will select at first approximately 625,000 men.

The men will compose the first national army, and 500,000 will be put into active service at the earliest possible moment, while the others will be held in reserve.

Furthermore, from the ten million men the War Department, if necessary, will select enough men to raise the regular army to war strength and to fill the quota of the National Guard.

Under the Selective Draft law the President is authorized to call for 500,000 more men. They also would be drawn from those who registered yesterday.

To Begin Selection Soon.

The selection of those who will compose the first army will begin soon. A sufficient number to make certain the full quota of 625,000 will he drafted. In order to accomplish that the first call will be for at least 900,000 men and may be as many as 1,500,000.

The exact method by which the draft will be effected has not been disclosed, but it is understood that arrangements for conducting it already have been completed by the War Department, and that its inauguration awaits only the command of President Wilson. It is probable that the jury wheel method of selection will be employed.

The law exempts legislative, executive and judicial officers of the United States and the individual States, persons belonging to religious organizations whose creeds are against war, and preachers.

Others Who May Be Exempt.

Furthermore, the President may exempt or draft for partial service Custom House clerks, persons handling mails, workmen employed in arsenals, navy yards and armouries, persons engaged in industries necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment, pilots and mariners of merchant vessels, persons having dependent families and all persons who are morally or physically deficient.

There were strong intimations in official circles that the first draft will be made at a much earlier date than had been expected.

The early completion of the arrangements for the draft was made possible by the fact that the quota to be supplied by the States does not depend upon the number of men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty who register in each State, but is based upon the estimates made by the Census Bureau. The percentage of men to be drafted represent so small a proportion of the estimated number of men of servicable age that the actual number who register is comparatively unimportant.

Selection a State Duty.

The work of drafting the men who will be called upon first will not be begun until the final returns are received in Washington by Brigadier General Crowder, provost-marshal general.

It is believed that the actual selection of the individuals will devolve upon the State authorities under systems practically similar to those in use in the selection of jurors. The law authorizes the President to "create and establish" local boards in the States which shall have authority to hear and determine all questions of exemptions. The boards will consist of three or more members, none of whom shall be connected with the military establishment of the United States.

It is expected that the inames of It is expeicted that the names of announced soon.

BORDEN WILL ANNOUNCE RESULT THIS AFTERNOON

Clash Between Leaders in Commons Does Not Look Like Coalition — Sir Wilfrid Laurier Objects to Rogers Enquiry — Contends Rogers Believes Galt Wants Revenge.

WILL TELL OF NEGOTIATIONS WITH LAURIER

OTTAWA, Ont., June 7.—Sir Robert Borden will make an announcement in the House this afternoon regarding the result of the negotiations which have been in progress between the two leaders during the past fortnight. The announcement will probably be made before the orders of the day are called.

The galleries were well filled yesterday afternoon when the House assembled. They expected an announcement from the Premier regarding the result of negotiations which have been going on between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Borden for the past few weeks. No announcement was made. On the contrary, the first incident which occurred resulted in a clash of opinion between the two leaders, which makes it fairly plain that there is to be no coalition.

The announcement of the Prime Minister was that at the request of Hon. Robt. Rogers, Minister of Public Works, Sir Ezekiel MacLeod, of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, and Hon. Louis Tillier, a retired judge of Quebec, had been appointed a commissioner under the Enquiries Act, to investigate and ascertain if there was any evidence to substantiate the findings of Mr. Justice Galt, of Winnipeg, in so far as these findings reflected upon the honour of Mr. Rogers. An order-in-Council had been passed to that effect. In the meantime Mr. Rogers desired to be relieved from his duties as Minister of the department.

Laurier Opposes Proposal.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier strongly opposed the proposal. He contended that the tribunal suggested was of no higher standing than the Galt Commission, and declared that Mr. Rogers' objections to the latter body had been based upon a belief that because Mr. Rogers had called Judge Galt a "Grafter," Judge Galt was seeking for revenge.

If Mr. Justice Galt was a grafter, then the same term must be applied to the members of the new tribunal. Mr. Rogers wrote to the Prime Minister on May 28. He declared that Judge Galt had been appointed in 1916 to investigate the work on the Agricultural Buildings at Winnipeg. This work had been undertaken, but only purely completed under Mr. Rogers' regime as Minister of Public Works of the Province. Two reports had been brought down. These reports reflected upon his conduct and honour as a Minister, it was in that connection that he felt justified in bringing the matter to the Premier's attention. Mr. Rogers had been called to Winnipeg to give evidence in the case.

Took Little Interest.

He had, he claims, while there, given a full and complete answer to all matters referred to in the telegram summoning him. "It was manifest to me then," the letter continues, from Mr Galt's demeanor and remarks that he purposed sharing no effort and rejecting no means, however unfair, of doing me all the injury in his power. I therefore, from that point forward took little or no interest in the proceedings of his commission, being absolutely certain not only that my own conduct in the premises had been straightforward and in the public interest, but that although it would be waste of time to make any attempt to influence the purpose of Mr. Galt, there would be no difficulty later in exposing and establishing before any fair and competent tribunal both the true facts of the case and the malice of this commissioner.

And Sevigny Sat Down.

Hon. Mr. Sevigny rose to a question of privilege in the House this afternoon to declare "absolutely false" the statement that he had intended to keep pictures, a victrola and other effects belonging to Canada which he had taken to Dorchester after the Parliament fire. In that fire his loss had been about $1,200. He had asked officials of the House if there was any objection to taking certain effects to Dorchester, and none had been raised. In January he was invited to join the Cabinet His election had later occupied the whole of his time and thus there had been a delay in returning the goods. "My intention was never to keep those effects and I can tell you they were returned to the Sergeant-at-Arms in perfect order," concluded Mr. Sevigny.

"Aha," mocked one Liberal member. "Next," exclaimed another. And Mr. Sevigny sat down.

CORN WAS A STRONG FEATURE

Cash Quotations Are Steady — The Cattle Markets

The feature of the grain market yesterday was the strength of the trading in corn. The Chicago board, having fixed a maximum price on future deliveries at $1.65, and the Kansas board at $1.62, there was a rush of shorts to cover at the opening of the market.

The result was a rapid jump in the July option up to $1.57, from the previous close at $1.48 1-4. Afterwards there was some reaction, the market finally closing at $1.53 1-4. The July option in wheat closed 4 1-2 cents up from the previous close. There was again scarcely any trading in the October option at Winnipeg, which was quoted one cent down from Tuesday at the close. Cash quotations yesterday were steady in all but corn, oats and rye.

Manitoba wheat, not quoted officially unofficial, $2.80; No. 1 northern, lake ports, No. 2, $2.77.

Manitoba oats—No quotations; unofficial, 74 1-2c.; No. 2 C.W.

American corn—$1.53 nominal.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.50 to $2.55; No. 3 winter, $2.48 to $2.53, according to freight outside.

Peas No. 2, nominal.

Barley—Good malting, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $2.00.

Manitoba flour— First patents, in jute bags, $13; second patents, $12.50; strong bakers, $12.10.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $11 to $11.10, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $41; bran, $35; feed flour, per bag, $2.70 to $2.80; middlings, $15.

Hay —Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $13 to $14; mixed, $9 to $11.50; straw, $9.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 47 cars, with 293 cattle, 271 calves, 1,286 hogs and 66 sheep and lambs.

Although there were less than 300 head of fresh cattle in yesterday's run, there were still several loads of heavy steers left unsold at the close, a sure indication of the weakness of the market, particularly for the heavy stuff. A few choice lots of handy butcher cattle sold about steady with the early decline this week, but prices generally were not any more than steady in any case. Stockers and feeders of medium quality share the general easier tone of the market.

Sheep dull, lambs steady.

Calves steady.

Hogs steady at the decline to $16, fed and watered.

FRANCE, NOT PRIZE-RING IS REAL ARENA

Place for Sportsmen on Firing Line—Testimony of Capt. Tom Flanagan to Boxing Fans

Capt. Tom Flanagan's homecoming was characteristic of the man who started and completed the Sportsmen's Battalion of Toronto, for the first thing he did upon reaching Canada was to organize an Athletic meet when the Intercolonial train carrying himself and many other returned officers from Quebec to Montreal, was stalled on account of a wreck near some little French-Canadian village, while his second act was to give on his behalf a message from one just back from France to the sportsmen of Canada, who were of the proper age to bear arms. Hearing of the big attendance of fight fans expected at a Montreal bout, he was aroused.

Puny, Shallow Fights

"Tell them," he said, "from a man who loves boxing, and who has been closely connected with it all his life, that while I don't begrudge them their fun, I want them to know that they will never realize what a fight is till they have been in France. These little boxing shows between highly paid professional pugilists are all right in their way, but they are puny, shallow things, unworthy of men with good red blood in their veins, compared to the real, the big fight that is going on there in France.

Not Real Excitement

"That is not excitement which they are going to get to-night, when they see these two men bestow lovetaps upon one another's faces and sidestep one another's heavy blows. That is only a shadow of it. If they desire to experience the substance, the real thing, something worthy to remember all their lives and to tell their children and grandchildren about, let them go overseas, where they are needed and wanted. They'll never be sorry for it.

"As to sport in general, my observations on the other side have taught me that it must be kept up at all cost. It is the only solid foundation for the future armies of the Dominion. The earlier the boys are put into it the better. There is no other preparatory training for a soldier's life in the least equal to it."

Was Anaemic FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

POINTS TO CONSIDER WHEN PURCHASING A RAILWAY TICKET.

It, in addition, provides the traveller with every comfort and convenience developed by modern railway science. "Safety First," with up-to-date equipment, unexcelled dining service, palatial sleeping cars, in a word, everything that a railway can provide for the comfortable transportation of its passengers, including courtesy.

WOMEN ORGANIZED FOR WAR SERVICE

Lady Londonderry's Great Work—The Women's Legion, Knowing Neither Rank Nor Class, Doing Its Bit

The Marchioness of Londonderry, whose object it is to provide a capable and efficient body of women whose services can be offered to the State as may be required to take the place of men needed in the firing line or in other capacities, works as hard as any hard-working housemaid.

The mighty hand "is entirely non-political and without class distinctions or religious restrictions." The uniform, described briefly, is a neat khaki norfolk coat and skirt, with khaki shirt and tie, brown boots or shoes and soft felt hat to match.

Cooks and Canteens

"My personal sections," said the Marchioness of Londonderry in an interview, "are cooks and canteens. The work is very hard. Some days 6,000 men pass through. The cooks always are ready for them. In peace time it would be called killing work, but these war time women never whimper. Often such stations are under-staffed, but the men never are under-fed, nor is the food ever underdone. The women frequently are overworked, but they thrive on it. Patriotism will keep a woman's spirit fresh.

Women in Agriculture

"The women's work in agriculture is developing along unexpected lines," said Lady Londonderry. "Among other things it has accomplished the real introduction of motor machinery into British agriculture, where previously it was practically unknown. Our women motor drivers never stop work until they have specific orders so to do. Their energy is amazing. We use every tractor which we have every hour when use is possible. In Rutland our women drivers are ploughing at night, their furrows illuminated by the great headlights on the machines. Our women workers are often as busy upon Sundays as they are upon weekdays.

"It is impossible," she continued, "to estimate exactly how many men have been released by women workers. Four thousand men have been released by women cooks, 1,000 by women motor drivers, thousands have been replaced in agriculture. I believe we now safely may say that the women have made good as the Canadian soldiers put it. There was doubt in the high places at the start, but now the head men of the army would not change back to men cooks. The women have come to be, as much as the machine guns or the drill sergeants, a part of the British army."

TOLD BY THE CENSOR

Some Really Tall Liars Among Tommies Cause Amusement

A Canadian officer in France, in writing to his wife, gives the following interesting description of how the censoring of letters is done: Right here were I am now, he says, I sit each morning with fifty other officers (like myself waiting to go up the line) censoring letters. We have many's the laugh, but the laughs are all over the funny things the Tommies write. The laugh is never at the loving sentiment expressed in the home letters. The chaps who send out lying letters are really funny. One Montreal man, in reply to the secretary of a "Soldiers' Comforts Club" who had sent him a parcel, described vividly how his letter was being punctuated by the crash of German shells. He said he was in a dugout writing on the top of his steel helmet. They had been bombarded ceaselessly for a week. The last shell had taken a chunk off the roof, and all that sort of rot. As a matter of fact, this chap had never been within sixty miles of the firing line, and the heavy firing he heard as he wrote came from the ranges beside the camp. If this lad was being shelled when he wrote, it was with peanut shells, or else the Huns have a gun that can heave them sixty miles.

DEADLY "SNOWBALL"

Hurl Missiles of Death as They Hurled Snowballs

The modern hand bomb, says a Canadian paper, is a very deadly "snowball." The trench takes the place of the snow fort. But otherwise the difference between the school boy fight with snow forts and snow balls is not very different from the bombing attacks and counter-attacks which take place now-a-days in France. Young men, only recently schoolboys, hurl deadly missiles in the same old way as a few years ago they hurled snowballs. A bomber has to be quicker about taking aim and getting his bomb out of his hands than he needed to be when it was simply a snowball he was throwing, for the fuse is lighted before he throws, and he only has a few seconds before the explosion. And when the bomb falls and bursts it shatters the earth, and men within range are blown to pieces.

Redmond: Sportsman

An amusing story is told of John Redmond, the Irish member:

One day in Parliament a young member, one of John Redmond's political opponents, rose to make his maiden speech. Although obviously suffering an agony of nervousness, he managed to say some bitter things about the Irish members. Whereupon one of the Nationalists started to punctuate his remarks with jeers, thereby intensifying the youthful member's nervousness to an almost pitiable degree. Redmond turned on his followers in fury: "Give the lad a chance!" he snapped. The jeers ceased.

OUT OF THE RUNNING AT 40 YEARS OLD

Men at 40 should be doing their best work. This is impossible unless health is good. Many a man at 40 thinks he is getting old and out of the running, because his back aches, his joints are swollen and sore, or he is the victim of rheumatism.

We have records on file of men who felt just like this but who took Gin Pills and quickly regained the young spirit and energy that goes with good health.

So much depends on the Kidneys, whose function is to carry away the poisons from the blood stream. If the Kidneys are not working right, though a man is only 20, the poisons will make him feel old before his time. Don't delay if you have a sore back, cannot lift weights, limp with rheumatism, suffer from Kidney or bladder trouble; lumbago, inflammation of the bladder, brick-dust deposits, or other urinary disorder. Try Gin Pills.

Gin Pills are noted, too, for their pleasant action as a laxative. If you are troubled with constipation, here is the remedy.

Try Gin Pills. We will refund your money if you fail to get results. All good druggists and dealers sell Gin Pills. Sample free upon request to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 97

INTERPRETER NEEDED

One of the many good stories Bairnsfather told, writes a London paper, concerns his hunt for a billet "somewhere in Flanders." "I went into the yard of a farmhouse," he writes, "and walked across to the front door. The people were most pleasant. I didn't understand a word they said; but when a person pushes a flagon of beer into one of your hands and an apple into the other, one concludes he means to be pleasant, anyway. At length Jean, our battalion interpreter, put in an appearance, and after a brief unintelligible talk with the owner of the farm, he turned to me and explained that they had spotted fever there, and the place was out of bounds. 'Oh, spotted fever- I see!' I said, and slid away out of that farm pretty quick. I went down the road wondering whether cerebral meningitis germs preferred apples to beer; or perhaps—awful thought—they liked both."

Cavalry Wireless Equipment

There are several forms of wireless equipment used in warfare, and under favourable conditions a range of from 150 to 200 miles is possible with one of them. The most portable "station," however, is the cavalry type, which weighs 440 pounds, and is carried about in equal proportions by four horses. Its range is not a wide one; it works over a distance of from twenty-five to thirty miles.

Italy's Veteran Chief

GENERAL COUNT CADORNA, the determined and wily Italian Commander-in-Chief, commands of the Italian forces in the field from the very first and made his name a steadily increasing terror to the Austrians.

"THE HEATHEN CHINESE"

Nothing had been finer in the whole course of the war, said Mr. C. Laws, at the meeting of the Chamber of Shipping in London, than the way in which the Chinese firemen had gone about their duties undisturbed by the dangers of a mine-infested sea. He gave an instance of a vessel which was peppered by gun-fire. They carried Chinese stokers, who—by all the rules of the game drawn up by their critics—when they heard the first shell should have thrown down their tools, thrown themselves into their bunks, taken out their pipes and opium, turned up their toes to the ceiling and resigned themselves to their fate. What they did was to turn to and work harder than niggers—they worked like Chinese—with the result that the vessel was able to get extra speed to gain the shelter of a fog bank before the submarine could overtake her.—London Chronicle.

Luckiest of Veterans

John Snape, 80, who went through the Crimea, Indian Mutiny, Zulu, and Afghan campaigns without a wound, and for 37 years drew a pension of 2½ cents a day, died in Ormskirk.

Queer Address of Church

The members of the Baltic Exchange attended a special service at St. Andrew Undershaft, St. Mary-axe, E.C. 3, to mark the entry of the United States into the war.

BRITAIN KEPT SEAS FREE

Ridiculous Charges of German Sophists are Reported, Debt Admitted

New York Times: Of all the fraudulent phrases invented by Germany to ignore the truth, "the freedom of the seas" was the most audacious, says the New York Times. Charged with a militarism which endangered and finally assailed the world, she retorted that England was guilty of "navalism." Charged with a desperate attack on the freedom of the nations, she retorted with an appeal for "the freedom of the seas." Uncritical minds accepted that glittering phrase without asking in what way the freedom of the seas was endangered by England, or wherein lay the menace of "navalism." What it meant was that England had the largest navy in the world, as Germany had the great, est army. But the German Army was built and finally used for purposes of aggression, while the British Navy was purely defensive. Great Britain being an island and without land defenses against invasion by an army, she built a great navy. But that navy has never been used for purposes of aggression on her neighbors. She is called the mistress of the seas, but she has left the seas of which she is mistress free to all. In time of peace any ship of any nation can traverse all the seas of which Great Britain is called the mistress as free as any British ship, and transact the same kind of business as her ships. Great Britain has kept the seas open and free.

RECORD OF PERSHING

First United States General Ordered to Command in France

A journalist says: Of Pershing's merits as a soldier there can be no question. He has seen more field service than any other general officer in the army: two or three Indian campaigns, the campaign in Cuba in 1898, two campaigns in Mindanao, and the Chihuahua expedition. His army career has been a record of hard and constant service: he may well be termed a regular of regulars. While General Pershing has always been an aggressive soldier when fighting was in order, he has shown good administrative ability and tact in emergencies when fighting was not in order. He won the confidence of the Moros by treating them as men and never breaking faith with them. When Pershing put the finishing touch to his rule in that savage province by disarming the Moros, a bold and dubious stroke, Governor-General Forbes cabled to President Taft that Pershing's management of affairs had been "masterly." He holds a lawyer's degree.

42 WOUNDS BUT CHEERY

"Best Wounded Man in Canadian Army" Described

The remarkable cheerfulness of the wounded in this war is exemplified in the case of a young officer who has been called the "best wounded man in the Canadian army." He writes from a London hospital to friends a letter, from which the following are extracts: Having nothing better to do—I started counting scabs. At forty-two I gave up in disgust. Of that number there were three about the size of a nickel. There was another gash about two inches long which by now is only a scar. On the left ankle there was a very nasty gash of fearful proportions. It is almost healed now, and my ankle is quite all right. On the right leg there are two places of any account. One is only a scar and the other place, above the knee, where a piece of shrapnel went through the thigh. My left hand was smashed up some and I may have to get the middle finger off, as a matter of convenience, as it can never be bent and will always be in the way. I was hit by a bomb after we had obtained our objective, and being carried on a stretcher, was, and will always be a horrible nightmare.

Dentist Went in Ranks

After being turned down three times in his efforts to join the colors, Raymond Brewster, 22, son of Premier Brewster, was at last successful and departed with an artillery draft from Victoria, B.C. The young man was a dentist, but was not permitted to join the dental corps, which is such an important part of the military forces. The cause given for young Raymond's failure before was his subjection to inflammatory rheumatism, but during the few weeks prior to enlistment his physical condition had been excellent.

Famous Hockeyist Fell

Captain C. H. Belcher, noted Winnipeg hockey player, killed in action, played right wing for the Winnipeg Victorias when they won the Allan Cup and also had won many trophies as an oarsman. When slain he had just returned to the trenches after recovering from a wound.

Tall Tales from the Sea

William Prescod, 21, a torpedoed sailor, who pretended he was in the naval secret service and backed his story by sending mysterious telegrams to Plymouth naval base, all of which were returned, was sent to prison at Bristol for three months, for obtaining £40 from an innkeeper by false pretenses.

Something Left to Live For

There is the French soldier who, having lost a foot, both hands and the sight of one eye, still can smile. For whomsoever has the courage and the common sense to look for it, there is always something left to live for.

Too Enthusiastic

A man was remanded at Highgate, England, on a charge of stealing rose bushes and lettuce plants from another man's allotment for his own.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the big of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

HOME-MADE CELERY SALT.

Do not throw away the leaves of celery, but spread on a pie plate and dry on the back of the stove. Then place on a large sheet of paper and roll very fine with rolling pin, add salt and pack in glass jar. Cover closely and keep to season soups, meat loaf, salads, etc., also an excellent condiment for cold meats; kept salt shaker filled with it on the table.

When the price of celery soars, it is very convenient to have this celery salt on hand.

A delicious cream celery soup may be made quickly by scalding a pint of milk with enough of this celery to flavour strongly, then thickening with a little flour dissolved in cold milk and adding a generous lump of butter.

The bones left from lamb, veal or chicken may be stewed and flavoured with celery and make a nice clear soup.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

GABRIELLE'S WOOING

By IZOLA FORRESTER

When Put Mandego came down the straits from Chicago way, every girl from Mackinac to Moose Island sent out her heart to greet the dirty gray sails of his schooner.

Not to greet Put; no, indeed. For fifteen years he had passed through the straits once a week from May to November, and not a girl had waved her hand to him except Joe Nevaire's Gabrielle. She had watched for him from the first year when he had swabbed the decks of the Bon Ami, and now the last year he returned her master, steering her as captain and owner both. The word had gone before him like a silver tongued herald that with the schooner had also come to him as an inheritance from old Scott Mandego, his father, the little house down on Mandego point and a matter of $2,000 or $3,000.

So Put sailed as a conqueror, and of all the bright eyes along the shore that glanced to greet him the only ones which lured him on belonged to Gay Nevaire and were the only pair that had no welcome for him.

It was the first time in all the fifteen years. As a boy he had rowed over to the island to chat with Joe and watch him mend the great sails that were sent to him from the twin shores and weave and knot his fish nets. Joe's deft fingers were as noted along the straits as the black eyes and red lips of his five daughters.

And Gay was the youngest. She was eighteen now, slim and dark eyed, with the poise and step of a demoiselle of Gascony and a wondrous trick of the eyes, a sidelong look between narrowed lids, with long curved lashes to cast a shade. All of Nevaire's girls had it, but little Gabrielle had it worst, and it took the heart out of a man.

Only a mile to the southeast of Moose island lies Mandego point. From his shore on a sunny day Put could catch the flash of a pink petticoat here and there around the old weather beaten cabin, but the courage never came to him to seek her and tell her what had been in his heart all the way from Chicago.

"You forget old friends when the good luck flies your way. Is it not so, Put?" laughed old Nevaire when they met at the half breed Petit Jean's place on the mainland. "Is it Marie? Fanchon? Babette? Elise? No? Mon Dieu it is the little one, them?"

"It is Gabrielle," said Put stolidly. However he might fear his love, he had no fear for Nevaire himself nor ten like him. "But she has no smiles for me this year," he added moodily.

Joe laughed more. Did the wild duck flutter near until she heard the decoy? Was they a girl to lay her heart bare before she was wooed?

Put listened and smiled as he awakened to his folly.

"I will woo her," he said, and he kept his word. He sent Danny Dermot, his successor to the deck swabbing question on the Bon Ami.

Danny was blue eyed, the best dancer along the shore and still a winter's length from twenty. He listened to Put's instructions of what he should tell his love and straightway forgot Put and all else as he leaned across the open window sill at Nevaire's chatting with Gabrielle and catching the trick of her long dark eyes.

The dreamy golden days of summer passed, and the sumac flaunted scarlet banners on every hillside that dipped to meet the straits, and still the Bon Ami swung idly on her ropes at the old half sunk landing at Mandego point. Put's pulses leaped every time he looked from her to the broad sweep of blue water that called to him to come back, but every breeze that circled around the point bore the love of his heart to Gabrielle as it danced on down to the island, so he stayed on and trusted his fate to Danny's soft tongue.

Under the rose vine Gabrielle would listen, a rose stem between her teeth, while Danny spoke of Mandego point.

"He's too old for you, Gay, darling. It's thirty-two he is if he's a day, and the old devil thinks you'll fly like a bird to him if he only whistles. And it's lonesome down there on the point. You can't see the Mackinac lights dancing a jig with themselves in the water the way you can here. And it isn't a thousand at all, Gay, darling. It's only a hundred or so, and the old man will soon drink that up over at Petit Jean's. So you see it won't be riches at all that Mrs. Mandego will be getting, but old Put himself. Do you mind me, Gay, darling?"

Gabrielle's white teeth closed over the heart of the rose, and she ate its sweet petals in silence, but her eyes looked sidelong at Danny.

"And the Tidy Adly of Petoskey sails on Tuesday, Gay." Danny reached up and plucked a rose that touched the girl's bowed head. "I've the promise of a berth on her at the wheel. It is better than the deck on the Bon Ami, Gay, and if you say the word you can kiss your sweet hand to Chicago as Mrs. Dermot in a week. Could you be ready by Tuesday, Gay, heart?"

Gabrielle looked off up the straits to where Mandego point lay like an amethyst shadow at the curve of the Michigan shore line, and her eyes were tender and dreamy.

"Tell Put Mandego to come for his answer himself like a man, Danny," she said. "Tell him that from me today, and if he is not here on the island by Monday night then I will sail on the Tidy Adly."

"It's at sunrise I'll come for you, Mrs. Dermot," laughed Danny, and Gabrielle smiled and waved her hand to him as he passed jauntily down the clover bordered path to the beach. But she was thinking of Put—Put in his strength and shyness—and of how he would come that very night for his answer.

But the twilight passed, and the moon rose above the pines on the headland, and no boat put out from Mandego point until daybreak, when Put pulled over to the mainland with never a backward glance at Nevaire's island.

Never once did Danny go near the island. He was too busy keeping Put's head turned toward the mainland, and day by day the fire flashed in Gabrielle's dark eyes and her little pointed chin tilted higher as she looked toward Mandego point and waited.

It was a night of early autumn glory, Monday. The September moon rose like a great flame colored flower above the crest of Mackinac, and by the time it had reached midheaven the glamour of its golden witchery spread over the face of the waters like a magic spell.

Gabrielle watched it from the tall sand dunes, the ones where Put had borne her on his shoulder to watch the boats came up the straits. There was no light on Mandego point, but the night was clear and bright, and she caught the sparkle of dripping oars as a boat shot out from the shadows of the mainland into the broad path of moonbeams that bridged the way to the point. There were two figures in the boat. She held her breath, striving to catch the sound of voices on the still night air, but instead from out the darkness toward Mackinac came three long deep signals. Gabrielle started to her feet at the sound. It was the North Queen bound for Buffalo, and in her course lay the boat.

Suddenly she saw that Danny had shipped his oars and was standing. She knew his slight form instantly, but the man at the rudder never stirred. Danny bent over him a moment as if to reassure himself, then slipped overboard into the water and made for the mainland with long, sure strokes.

An instant and Gabrielle hesitated. Again the North Queen signaled, and her port lights showed bright and clear as she swept past the great, shadowy Mackinac island and came on like a phantom ship of the night.

And, for the rest, they tell it at Petit Jean's, and blind Louis made a song of it and of Gabrielle, who sailed a bride on the Bon Ami, with Put Mandego captain. They show the wreck of her boat where the North Queen crushed it like a crumpled autumn leaf, for out into the waters of the straits went Gabrielle that night, with only the hope of her love to give her strength, and in the drifting boat she found Put, dead to the world from Petit Jean's brandy and left to drift to his death by Danny Dermot. Leaving her own boat in its place, she had rowed the other out of the moonbeam path just as the great steamer bore down upon her course.

At dawn next morning Put stood on the sand dunes of Nevaire's island and watched the Tidy Adly put out for Lake Michigan, but no farewell was waved from her decks by Danny. The North Queen caught him fairly as she rounded Mandego point, and blind Louis stumbled over what was left when he walked the shore below the point after the Bon Ami had sailed on her honeymoon trip.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

COLDS.

A COLD IS LOOKED UPON as a trivial complaint. A neglected cold used to be regarded as a forerunner of consumption, but it is now well known that a cold is but an incident in a disease which is due to a specific cause, namely the bacillus of tuberculosis. But a cold, especially "a cold in the head," is really a serious trouble not so much for the annoyance it causes one but for the dangerous conditions which frequently result from it.

For example, a "cold in the head" may start an earache in a child. The earache, if neglected—as it often is—may result in mastoid abscess; that is, a collection of pus in the honeycomb structure of bone just behind the ear, which can be cured only by a severe operation. This, if neglected, may cause an inflammation of the brain structures and the death of the patient.

The neglected earache may cause trouble in another direction. It is a common occurrence that the ear drum from the force of the pus behind it breaks and there is a long course of discharging ear or deafness which if neglected may persist for life. The earache can be readily relieved and all danger and after sequelae referred to prevented by a timely opening of the ear drum. "Laudanum drops," "warm sweet oil," etc., are of no value in the treatment. Puncturing the drum is a simple, rapid, and effectual treatment of the affection which soon secures complete recovery. The other day one of our district health officers had a conference with the reeve and members of the Board of Health of a township not very far from Toronto. The reeve was objecting to the cost of Board of Health work, and incidentally remarked that "he thought it better that children should get all these diseases such as scarlet fever, measles, and have done with them." In the course of conversation the local doctor asked him how his boy was. The boy had had scarlet fever. The father replied that he had become very deaf, the result of the scarlet fever. So the district officer asked him how many dollars he would be willing to pay to have the boy's hearing restored, which a more careful protection against communicable diseases might have prevented. The father had no further argument to offer.

"Spitting" is considered disgusting and dangerous, and signs are put up warning the public against expectorating in public places. "Sneezing" is a habit which still occupies a polite place in people's manners, yet the one is probably as dangerous as the other. How can one expect to avoid colds with their consequences in riding on the crowded street cars of our cities?

PLUNGES AND SWIMMING POOLS.

Fresh and salt water plunges may carry widespread infection, especially during the season when nasal and throat affections are common. Many colds, cases of ear trouble, and mastoid abscesses occur from dirty swimming tanks. Ninety per cent. of cases of middle ear abscess and mastoid disease result directly from ordinary "colds in the head" and "sore throat." Nearly all cases of suppuration of the sinuses of the head (hollow spaces in the cheek bones, frontal and other bones of the head) result from colds. A cold is an infection just as diphtheria or measles or scarlet fever are.

HOW TO PREVENT COLDS.

(1) A daily cold bath or a cold sponge bath of the face, chest, neck, and shoulders.

(2) Fresh moving air in one's bedroom. Don't be afraid of outdoor air.

(3) Avoid public plunges and swimming tanks.

(4) If one member of the household has a cold the others should avoid too close contact such as kissing. Soft cheesecloth which may be burnt should be used as handkerchiefs.

(5) Keep the feet dry.

(6) Have plenty of outdoor exercise.

The best protection against infection of the ears in children is the timely removal of adenoids and tonsils. It is astonishing how the croupy, always-with-a-cold child gets rid of these troublesome symptoms after the removal of adenoids and tonsils. If there is earache get a competent physician and have the ear drum given a slit. This lets out the penned-up secretion and the only thing remaining is to keep the ear clean and dry for a few days.

Douches of the nose, forcible blowing of the nose while it is closely held, and diving in the tank should be avoided.

Eat plain food; eat slowly; chew the food well, and rest after eating, is good advice for everyone.

A New Machine.

A contributor to Popular Mechanics tells of a recently invented machine for use in sensitizing blue print paper. This apparatus is valuable in climates where the moisture in the air makes it difficult to store blue print paper. The machine easily can turn out between 150 and 200 yards of paper in one hour.

A New Sink Strainer.

A new sink strainer has a revolving centre plate that can be closed over its holes to retain water in a sink.

"DRIVING MEN INTO THE WAR"

The use of the bagpipes as a means of encouraging recruiting, has been proposed to Jay E. House of the "Second Thought" column of the Topeka (Kan.) Capital, and it is difficult to refrain from admiring the high ground upon which he bases his argument against such a step. "We don't believe," he says, "it is going to be necessary to drive men into the war." It might be well enough, perhaps, to see what the selective draft will do before going to extremes.

SEEMS EVERYONE HEARD ABOUT IT

All Want to try new drug that dries up corns so they lift out

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will present thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

AEROPLANE MAKERS

Women are Very Deft in this Delicate Work

Women are proving themselves accurate in measurements and testing and gauging, says a London paper. That is one of the surprises of war time occupations. They not only do the hand-sewing and machine-stitching of the wings of the aeroplane but they do the painting or "doping" of the framework. They also are entrusted with the milling and one of the most important processes—the oxy-acetylene welding, and the testing of delicate parts of the machines, which have to be true to the one-thousandth part of an inch. They drive engines and work on the metal parts of the aeroplanes, tasks which a few years ago aeroplane manufacturers would have declared they could never accomplish. All classes of women are working side by side in the aeroplane factories, and they are just such homes of democracy as the munition factories are. The titled lady and the ex-'tweeny are doing the same kind of work.

ATTACKED FOUR DAYS TOO SOON FOR BOCHES

Canadian Faking Kept Foe in Frenzy While Victory Was Rehearsed from Model

A correspondent recounts details of the careful preparations which preceded the capture of Vimy Ridge by the Canadians. These were on the most elaborate scale and much enhanced General Byng's already good military reputation. No operation in the whole history of the war worked out so admirably. Every move came off as planned. Results obtained were even more than looked for. It was a complete success. The affair had been worked out long beforehand with the strictest attention to details. Not only was a model Vimy Ridge moulded in cement—a ridge constructed from air maps, showing every ridge and hollow to exact scale, but practice manoeuvres far back of the lines were carried out in anticipation. Every commander knew the lay of the land before him.

Enemy on Tenterhooks

Lastly, several days before the real attack mock attacks were started. Furious barrages were opened on the enemy positions, as though the Canadians were just going over the top. In a frenzy of expectation the Boches were assembled to meet the invaders. Then, when the Germans were crowding their fire-steps to meet the invaders suddenly every rifle and machine gun along the Canadian front raked their line. Not a single Canadian appeared. In their stead a shower of gas shells burst among the enemy.

Fooled the Foe

This trick repeated fairly got the Boche on edge. It was a cry of wolf! Thus when the real thing came on that cold dawn of Eastern Monday, 1917, the Germans were taken completely by surprise. "We knew you were going to attack," stated one German prisoner, "but we did not think the attack was due for four days."

WATERLOO MUSKET

"Brown Bess" of Waterloo Useless at Two Hundred Yards

The musket used at Waterloo, says a London paper, was a flint-lock, very unlike the Service rifle of to-day. Being a great improvement on the wheel-lock musket, Wellington's men thought a great deal of "Brown Bess," by which nickname the musket was known, on account of the color of the barrel. But it would be absolutely useless in modern warfare, as the following description, by an expert of the period, shows clearly: "This musket might shoot a man," he said, "if he were only 200 yards away, but a soldier would be very unfortunate indeed to be wounded by one of these muskets if the enemy was firing from a distance of 150 yards—provided his antagonist aimed at him. To try to shoot at a man 200 yards away would be as ridiculous as to try and shoot the moon."

HEN, EATING OUR BREAD

Eggs Produced Do Not Balance Cost of Grain

A writer in a London paper says: The hen, by artificial feeding and selection, has become a large producer of eggs, three-fourths of which consist of water and shell. Her standard ration of corn is 4 ozs. a day, or briefly 91 lbs. a year. This just exceeds 1½ imperial bushels of wheat or its equivalent in maize, barley, or oats. At an average price of 5 cents, each egg pays its way, but little more. However, the food value of the corn consumed is a more serious question, for 91 lbs. of wheat will make 86 lbs. of bread, or sufficient to provide a ration of half a pound a day to one person for 172 days. At 5 cents a pound the wheat or oats which the hen consumes provides 85 per cent. of actual food costing 5 cents a pound, so that the egg is 26 times dearer than grain. Putting price on one side, the food value of a pound of grain is three times as great as that of a pound of eggs. To supply corn to hens, therefore, is not robbing Peter to pay Paul as the poultry-keeper supposes, but robbing the whole twelve Apostles!

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

As pretty a little dress as ever you saw for a small girl is shown in this picture. Just adding a tab to the top of a box plait made in each half of the front and back gores makes the two gore skirt a model of beauty; an embroidered belt passed under the tabs proves its use and decorative worth where the plain waist is joined. The collar and cuffs have pronounced style, and rows of braid to trim them add still more to the style merit of the frock.

There is big opportunity for hand embroidery on this model in silk or wool threads, if one prefers this to the braid finish. Braid is fashionable and will be the choice of the woman who has not the time for hard work. While the collar and cuffs, also the belt, are of contrasting goods, all one material may be employed. In this case the braid or embroidery will be in opposing color for effectiveness.

Wool mixtures, serges, gabardine, wool poplins and like fabrics are fashionable materials from which to make selection for this model. Serge with white bengaline or broadcloth in pale shades for collar and cuffs is decidedly pretty. You can be certain of an exact duplicate in copying this design, for it is simplicity itself.

The dress pattern, No. 8,112, cuts in sizes 4 to 10 years. To make in size 8 requires 2¾ yards 36 inch material; ⅛ yard 36 inch contrasting goods, 4 yards braid. Or 2⅜ yards 36 inch all one material.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

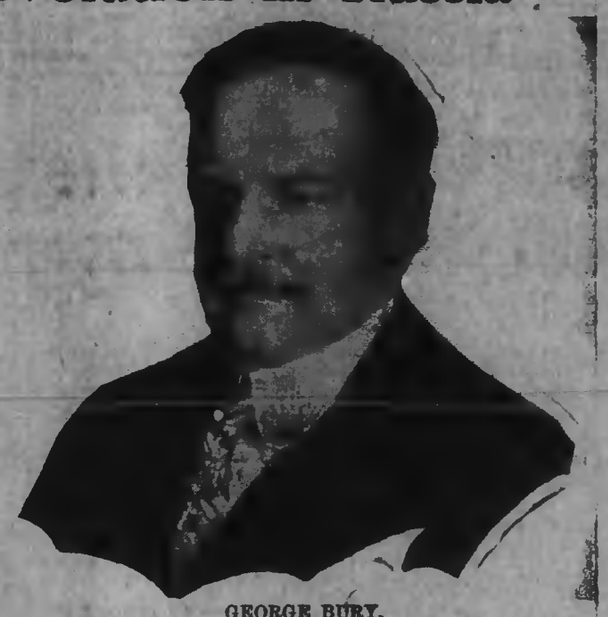
The Revolution in Russia



GEORGE BURY,
Who has just returned from Petrograd.

AFTER an absence of a little more than three months, Mr. George Bury has just returned from Russia, which country he visited at the request of the British and Russian Governments in connection with transportation.

Mr. Bury was accompanied throughout his trip by Mr. W. H. Winterrowd, Assistant Chief Mechanical Engineer of the Canadian Pacific. Mr. Bury and Mr. Winterrowd travelled from London to the north of Scotland, from where they were carried to Norway by a British destroyer. They proceeded through Norway, Sweden and Finland to Russia.

Mr. Bury states that his experience gained by close personal contact and association with Lord Shaughnessy enabled him to make recommendations which were accepted by the old Russian Government as well as by the new, who are now putting them into force with great vigor.

"Russia," he says, "is, of course, an immense country. It has a population of 176 million people. The last time they took the census the papers had to be printed in seventy-two languages, or dialects.

"In Russia I travelled from a point where I saw reindeer caravans to a point where I saw caravans of camels —that is, from Lapland to the Caucasus.

"There is no doubt whatever that after the war Russia will have to build several hundred thousand miles of railway. Canada has ten times more railway mileage per unit of population than has Russia. Then again, Russia made the mistake of patterning her railway transportation after that of Europe rather than America. Traffic in Russia moves vast distances in great bulk. The country lends itself to low grades and easy curvature. If that great country is to achieve the destiny in store for her she will have to come to the large train and large car, because those two factors make for economical transportation, and economical transportation is essential if a producing country of wide distances is to hold her own in the markets of the world.

"Had Russia been equipped with railway transportation, say as in Canada, she would have been able to have played a much greater part in the war.

"The impression gained during my two months stay in Russia is that they are a brave, self-sacrificing, kind, and capable nation. The educated classes are remarkably well informed and I came in contact with some of the really big men of the world.

"I happened to be in Petrograd during the revolution and saw perhaps as much of it as anyone. The casualties in Petrograd were heavy as were they in the navy amongst the officers. Foreigners were not molested deliberately and any killed was due to accident.

"When the revolution was at its height, in company with a British officer, I went to the Duma. It was rather a long walk from the British Embassy, so we asked some soldiers to take us on a sleigh filled with revolutionists. They did so. Arriving at the Duma we had to make our way through a dense mob of soldiers, sailors, workmen, etc. Recognizing the British uniform cheers went up for the Anglieki (English). It would make the heart of the least emotional man beat faster to think he belonged to an Empire that would be cheered under such circumstances.

"In England, Scandinavia and Russia, everywhere I travelled, food restrictions of varying degrees were in force and rail travelling curtailed. War or no war, it was time that a halt was called to the food wastefulness that had been going on.

"No one who has had the slightest opportunity of learning all that Great Britain has done in this war for humanity can help being proud of the Mother Country. With the proverbial modesty of the Englishmen but little has been said of the big things that have been done and much has been said of the mistakes, mistakes inseparable from any undertaking and but to be expected in an undertaking that dwarfs anything in history, authentic or mythical.

"Everywhere we travelled in Great Britain evidences of sacrifice, willingly made, were visible.

"Our past mode of living is at an end for some time and we will have to come down to a more simple form and economical conditions will compel the elimination of waste.

"The trade possibilities with Russia after the war are illimitable and those nations who will study the needs and the Russian character will succeed. Up until the time of the war it would appear that the Hun appreciated the possibilities of Russia and the trade statistics of that country show what our enemies accomplished.

"One has to travel around the world to see how well off we Canadians are.

"The Canadian soldiers covered themselves with glory in the recent advance. They took a strong position which had been tried twice before by other troops, and their deeds were in the mouths of everyone in London."

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 7.—Sixty shots were exchanged by the American steamer Silvershell and a German submarine in the Mediterranean, May 30, the Minister of Marine announced to-day. The submarine suddenly disappeared.

GERMANS NEARLY STARVING

But Collapse of the Enemy is Not Yet in Sight.

LONDON, June 5.—The Times to-day prints the first of a series of articles written by Frederick Sefton Delmer, an Australian, who, before the war, held a lectureship in Berlin university, but was interned until March, 1915. Later he was permitted to reside in Berlin, but recently was permitted to come to London.

Delmer expresses astonishment at the abundance of food, taxicabs and horses in London, as compared with those in Berlin. He ridicules the grumblers he has met here. "They have no idea," he says, "how ridiculous such grievances sound to any one coming from a land on the verge of hunger, if not actual starvation. The consumption of food in Germany is now reduced to a point below which it cannot go without disaster to public health. What a shock the German public would get if they only knew how often the boats from Holland will cross.

"The German papers for months past have been reiterating that food is becoming scarcer in England."

Delmer, in concluding, says: "It would be utterly misleading to think any German collapse is yet in sight. That it will come in time if we continue to strain every nerve, I am assured."

Crop Prospects Are Fine, So Writes Correspondent

KINMOUNT, June 6.—Lovely weather, and everyone who has a garden, even of the smallest compass, has every corner full and all places are looking splendid. If frost does not visit this Kinmount of ours during the summer months, the prospects are fine.

Rev. G. A. Williams occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church last Sunday. He has decided to remain with us for some time and his family have arrived and are living in the manse. The church has been very unsettled during the time we were at the mercy of ministers coming and going, but like the school, everything will go on smoothly now if the congregation and the choir are good, and are helpful to their minister.

Mr. Roy Hopkins, of Toronto, is home spending his holidays.

We regret to learn that Mrs. James Dawson, a life long resident of his village, is very unwell. It is to be hoped that she will soon recover, as there are none who would be more missed by all who know her. She has always been kindness itself to all who were sick or in any way needing help.

Mrs. Coben, who so lately lost her husband, Mr. Henry Coben, has decided to live in Kinmount, and is now comfortably settled in the home once owned by Mr. Bruce Molyneaux.

Little Earle Askey, who was so very ill that his life was despaired of, is now recovering, very much to the delight of his parents and friends. His little sister, Mary, who also was ill, is now convalescent.

Very soon our school will close for the holidays. Miss Vanderberg's room will close on June 20th, and the Entrance examinations will then proceed with their work. The School Board will then be able to have the school rooms thoroughly cleaned, new seats put in the room where they are much needed, and the old ones looked after and repaired, so that they will not wear or tear the children's clothes.

Mr. N. Crowe left here a few days ago to assist his son, Mr. Cecil Crowe, in preparing for the guests who will soon be arriving at "The Cedars," the well-known and famous "Farm House Summer Resort" on the north shore of Pigeon Lake, four miles from Bobcaygeon.

ENEMY ATTACK WAS REPULSED

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 7.— An enemy attack over a front of 800 yards northwest of St. Quentin was broken down in the French barrage fire. The official report asserted that the Germans were forced back to their own line, badly punished. North of Chemin Des Dames, the War Office reported mutual artillery.

Barber Cured of Eczema

GENEROUSLY TELLS OTHERS HOW CURE WAS EFFECTED.

TORONTO, Ont., June 7.—No one is better qualified to judge of treatment for skin troubles than the barber. He finds his customers bothered with barber's itch, pimples and eczema and has his own difficulties in treating these conditions after shaving.

Mr. Lewis learned from a customer about Dr. Chase's Ointment and when he contracted eczema, applied this treatment with most satisfactory results. He is naturally enthusiastic now in recommending this ointment to any one suffering from similar skin troubles.

Mr. George Lewis, barber, 202 1-2 Wellesley street, Toronto, writes: "I was for some time troubled with an eczemic eruption on the scalp and obtained temporary relief by the use of a tonic. About six months later little blotches broke out on my face and the doctor pronounced the trouble to be eczema. I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment through a customer who was cured by this treatment after trying many remedies in vain, so I began the use of this Ointment and in a short time the eczema entirely disappeared from my face and scalp. You can imagine my relief, as I am a barber by trade and having a face covered with pimples or blotches was not conducive to good business. I shall take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Chase's Ointment to any customers with facial or other troubles of this nature."

BETHANY, W. Va. — The Bethany town jail is to be used as a corn-crib. He had a band of boys roll it down hill to his stable, where he will use it for storing corn.

EARLY GENERAL ELECTION IMMINENT

Coalition Wrecked On Rock of Conscription

NEW OFFENSIVE BY BRITISH SOUTH OF YPRES RESULTS IN GAINS ON ONE MILE FRONT

General Haig, at 3.10 o'Clock This Morning, Launches A Terrific Drive on Germans in the Messines-Wytschaete Sector --- "Everywhere We Captured Our First Objectives," Announces Official Report --- Prisoners Are Already Coming Into the Collecting Stations.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, June 7.—Field Marshal Haig's resumed offensive swept forward victoriously early, to-day over a front of nine miles in the Messines-Wytschaete sector. "Everywhere we captured our first objectives," the British Commander-in-Chief reported. "Further progress was reported satisfactory on the whole front. A number of prisoners are reported already reaching the collecting stations from the fighting in the section where the big gains were made," General Haig reported. "We attacked at 3.10 this morning the German positions on the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge, on a front of nine miles, and everywhere captured our first objectives."

The Messines-Wytschaete Ridge is located in the small triangle of Belgium just below Ypres, which still remains in British hands. Save for raiding sallies and occasional artillery fire, this particular sector has been quiet nearly a year. During the last two days the British suddenly began almost continuous raids in this sector, and by day and night British artillery roared continuously. The Germans figured the raids were to acquire information as to the forces opposing the British there, and the artillery preparatory to an assault. But General Haig crossed them by hitting a tremendous blow yesterday far to the south around Lens. He kept the action in this resumed offensive going furiously all day yesterday, and then suddenly early this morning delivered his biggest blow of all in the Messines-Wytschaete sector.

Front despatches to-day indicate the complete success in the secondary, but initial move, making the complete resumption of the British offensive around Cruenard Hill, south of Lens. Here all the objectives were gained by the British attacks, and the enemy swept from the western slopes of the height. The advance was over a front of about a mile. Until to-day the British offensive, starting coincident with the German "strategic retreat" early in April, had been stayed for over twenty days. There were isolated struggles back and forth, but no massed attacks such as those with which Haig pounded the Germans to-day.

LONDON, June 7.—British seaplanes carried out another successful bombing expedition yesterday over the German aerodrome at Neumunster, an Admiralty statement reported to-day. "Several bombs fell close to two machines and the aerodrome. Our bombing machines were attacked on their return journey, but returned safe."

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Returns filtering into Provost Marshal-General Crowder's office to-day indicated that exemption claims may exceed 50 per cent. of the war registration. This, however, did not far surpass the official expectations, inasmuch as a large share of the claims are based on the dependency of relatives. All exemption claims will be carefully examined to determine whether or not they are bona fide.

VIENNA, June 7.—Ten thousand two hundred and fifty prisoners, including entire regiments, were taken by the Austrian counter offensive in three days' fighting over the battlefield near Jamiano, stream with Italian corpses, to-day's official statement declared. "Between Wippach Valley and the sea the enemy's assaults were shattered," the War Office reports. "We enlarged our successes by storming a height near Jamiano, retaining all the ground won."

PETROGRAD, June 7.—The Russian Workmen's and Soldiers' Council wants America to bring about an early peace — whether the end can be achieved through fighting forces sent to the front, financial, industrial or other aid, President Thiesseidze, of the Council, so declared to-day in an interview with the United Press, the first this head of Russia's invisible government has granted. "To American workers and democrats I would say, You can best help Russia, and thereby help the democratization of the world, which is now impending, by bringing pressure on all governments of the world to end the war as soon as possible," he declared.

LONDON, June 7.—"The British Government, the House of Commons and the country are in complete accord with the war aims, as announced by the French Chambers of Parliament," declared Sir George Cave, Secretary of State for Home Affairs in the House of Commons to-day.

Cave was interrupted in his speech by Philip Snowden, Pacific member, who asked whether the Allies' purpose is to fight regardless of all other considerations until their objects are obtained. "You must regard the previous answer as absolute," Sir George replied.

PETROGRAD, June 7.—The Democratization of Russia's navy was undertaken by Minister of War and Navy Keremsky to-day. He issued formal orders of the day declaring that naval cadets henceforth must learn all the duties of a seaman as well as those of an officer.

$17,000,000 SHOE CONTRACT AWARDED.

Twenty-Seven Firms Will Produce 3,460,000 Pairs for Army and Navy.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Contracts for 3,460,000 pairs of shoes for the army and navy have been awarded, through the National Defence Council. Delivery is to be completed within eight months, and the average price per pair will be $4.85. The contracts, awarded on competitive bids, were distributed among twenty-seven firms.

The army will get 3,000,000 pairs of the shoes and the navy 460,000. The contracts represent the largest shoe purchase ever made by the Government, their total value reaching nearly $17,000,000.

Bidders submitted their estimates on the basis of options on vast quantities of leather obtained some time ago by the Defence Council's Committee on Supplies, of which Julius Rosenwald is chairman. If they cannot purchase leather as cheaply directly, the Committee on Supplies will turn over the options to them. The main purpose in getting the options was to stabilize the leather market against heavy purchases for Government account.

The purchases were made through the Committee on Supplies, in co-operation with the Quartermaster's Department of the Army and the Navy Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. The army purchases include three styles of marching and field shoes. The navy buys the regulation black calfskin high cut design.

MOVE TO LIMIT CLOTH FOR DRESS

LONDON.—In order to maintain the supply of clothing for the essential needs of the civilian population and to prevent extravagance in dress, the Central Wool Advisory Committee recomends that a limited number of standarized cloth should be manufactured for the home trade and be made only partly of wool.

It has been ascertained from a recently taken census that there is enough cloth in the country to clothe the population with reasonable economy for a year.

TECHNICAL SCHOOLS WILL BE SUPPORTED BY THE ASSOCIATION

Education Committee of the Greater Peterboro Association Will Outline th Work It Hopes To Undertake.

DR. MORRISON, CHAIRMAN

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Education Committee of the Greater Peterborough Association was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening, June 6th, with Dr. M. A. Morrison in the chair. Some interesting addresses were given by the chairman, Dr. Morrison, Mr. A. Mowat, Dr. McNulty, Dr. Neal and others. The chief topic of discussion was as to the prospects of securing industrial and technical schools for the City of Peterborough, and some valuable information and statistics were submitted by Mr. Mowat who, as Public School Inspector, takes a deep interest in this subject. At the close of the discussion, the chairman, at the request of the Committee, instructed the secretary to notify the chairman of the School Board that this Committee was prepared to support him in any way possible to secure these ends.

It was moved by Dr. Neal, seconded by Mr. Mowat and carried that the chairman appoint a sub-committee to outline the work to be undertaken. This sub-committee was appointed as follows: Dr. McNulty, chairman; Dr. Morrison, Dr. Neal, Lieut.-Col. Walker, and C. H. Pennefather.

Oak Hall Windows Show Summer Suits

The Oak Hall display windows of summer clothing for men and boys should induce the weather man to wake up to the fact that the first week of June has ended with conditions that feel like April. The wash suits for children in the south window will particularly appeal to mothers, while the north window presents an innovation in men's clothing. Palm Beach suits made for summer comfort that has been long overdue to mere man will surely receive a "warm" reception. The coats are unlined, light and dressy and designed to afford a maximum of cool comfort when summer is at its height. The colours are attractive in various light shades and grays that range to a dark colour that business men may prefer.

SUCH IMPORTANT POINTS AS BATTLE WOOD, LEUFER WOOD, MERAY FARM, PEASANT WOOD, AND THE VILLAGES OF HOSPICE AND ZARABBE HAVE BEEN CARRIED AND THE PLACES WERE FIRMLY HELD BY THE BRITISH.

THE BRITISH USED MORE THAN A MILLION POUNDS OF HIGH EXPLOSIVE SHELLS IN PREPARING FOR THIS OFFENSIVE TO-DAY. VAST MINING OPERATIONS WERE MADE AND THE GERMANS WERE VIRTUALLY THROWN INTO A PANIC BY THE TERRIBLE BOMBARDMENT FROM ABOVE AND BELOW. AT SOME POINTS THE GERMANS UTTERLY DEMORALIZED AND UNABLE TO FORM NEW LINES. THE BRITISH ARE CONTINUALLY POURING FRESH TROOPS INTO THE ADVANCE.

EARLY GENERAL ELECTION WITH CONSCRIPTION AS MAIN ISSUE

A Summary of Premier's Proposals

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 7.—The correspondence handed out to-day shows that coalition has broken to pieces on the rock of conscription. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in a letter to Sir Robert Borden, outlines the latter's proposals, which included: (1) A Coalition Government; (2) The passing of the Conscription Bill; (3) An appeal to the country by the coalition, the Government bill not to be enforced in the meantime. Sir Wilfrid rejected these proposals on the conscription issue, at the same time assuring Sir Robert that he would advise obedience to the conscription measure if the same were approved by the people. Sir Robert, in his reply, declared that conscription is an absolute essential to any coalition. This plainly means immediate dissolution and an early general election, with probably a new "Unionist" party, composed of conscriptionists from both the old parties, led probably by Sir Robert Borden. It is expected Borden will press the conscription measure in the Commons in the meantime, and, whether it passes or not, will forthwith appeal to the country on this issue.

WOUNDED.

Pte. G. W. Carr, late of 93rd Battalion, Apsley.

Pte. Frank Smith, late of 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Corp. Wm. Lyburn, formerly of the 57th Battalion, 220 Wolfe street.

PTE. ROBERT DONALDSON

Mrs. R. Donaldson, 327 Burnham street received an official message from Ottawa yesterday giving her the tragic news that her husband, Pte. Robert Donaldson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion was killed in action on May 25th. Pte. Donaldson enlisted here with the Peterborough County unit in May of last year and on going overseas was transferred to the 52nd Canadian Battalion at the front. It was not his first experience on active service as he saw two years' campaigning with the Black Watch in the South African war. Pte. Donaldson had been a resident of Peterborough for five years and was employed by the Calcutt Brewing and Malting Company before enlisting. His wife and one daughter residing in Peterborough survive him. They will have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

PTE. C. B. HOULIHAN

"Missing" is the tragic heading over the name of Pte. C .B. Houlihan of Peterborough in last night's official Ottawa casualty list. Pte. Houlihan enlisted in the 50th Battalion at Belleville and after going overseas with Lieut.-Col Ketchenson's unit was transferred in a draft to another Canadian battalion.

PTE. G. W. CARR.

Pte. George Washington Carr, an Apsley boy who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion in November, 1915, and went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit is officially reported wounded in last night's list. Pte. Carr left England with one of the first drafts from the 93rd, going to the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles at the front.

PTE. FRANK SMITH.

Pte. Frank Smith, formerly of the 93rd Battalion has been wounded, according to last night's official list. Pte. Smith enlisted here with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit in October 1915, and on going overseas was transferred to another Canadian Infantry Battalion. His relatives live in England where Pte. Smith was born.

The past week has been one of considerable activity at Petawawa camp. Trains loaded with troops horses and guns arrived daily and there are now about 2,000 men in camp. It is expected that there will shortly be about 6,000 men in training here. Lieut.-Col. Leslie, Kingston, is officer commanding this year, and Lieut.-Col. Roy observing in England and at the front, will shortly return home to resume his duties as camp instructor.

CORP. WM. LYBURN.

Word was received this morning by Mrs. Lyburn, 220 Wolfe street, that her husband, Corp. William Lyburn, had been admitted to No. 3 Canadian General Hospital, a Boulogne, on May 31st, suffering from a gunshot wound in the left leg. Corp. Lyburn left Peterborough with the 159th Battalion.

Mrs. Percy Bertrand, 631 Union street, has received an interesting letter from her husband, Pte. Percy Bertrand, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was wounded some time ago. In part his letter reads as follows:

"It is with pleasure that I write to you again, hoping this will find you all well as it leaves me well at the present. I got back to the battalion last night, May 14th. I am feeling pretty good again, only my shoulder bothers me when I have my pack on or any weight on my shoulder. I got good care while I was in hospital. It was a treat to get into a good bed for a while and have a good rest, but I think I would just as soon do without that kind of a rest. I received three parcels this morning.

There was an awful change in the battalion when I got back. Some had been killed and others wounded and away to hospital, so it leaves a lot of new faces now. A good friend of mine, a Peterborough boy who came over with the 93rd, was killed while I was in hospital. I am very sorry. He leaves a wife and three or four small children. His name was Pte. J. D. Wiskin, and he lived at 276 Thomas street. I wish if you or mother are down that way that you would call and give Mrs. Wiskin my deepest sympathy. He was well liked by all the boys who knew him. He was hit by a heavy shell in the morning and died in the evening about 8 o'clock. He was conscious all day, but worried all the time about his wife and little children.

Mrs. Geo. Barrell, 718 Harvey street, is in receipt of several interesting letters from her husband, Sapper Geo. Barrell. The latter enlisted in Peterborough on May 31, 1915, went overseas with a draft from the 50th Battalion on November 12 of the same

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Rejects Premier's Coalition Proposals — Correspondence Between the Two Leaders Made Public To-day — Liberal Leader Opposed to Conscription Policy.

NEGOTIATIONS ARE OFF

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 7.—With coalition definitely side-tracked, it is conceded on all sides that dissolution of parliament followed by general elections has a clear track and the right of way and will be given full speed orders as far as possible. Having declared in his negotiations with Sir Wilfrid Laurier for confirmation of conscription by the people, before putting it into effect, the Premier, Sir Robert Borden, will now proceed to have the measure passed by parliament, then reconstruct his cabinet, whether wholly Conservative or partly Liberal timber, and then go to the country for endorsement on his conscription policy. It is not quite clear whether last year's rolls will be used for the election or whether new lists will be made out. These latter would include Ontario women's vote and this vote alone might easily turn the scale in an election. In any event it will be two months or more before the election can be brought on. In the meantime parliament has much to do in passing the conscription bill, militia estmates supply and other measures. Sir John Willison, Conservative, Hon. George P. Graham, Michael Clark, Carvell and McCraney, M.P., Liberals, are to-day mentioned as possibilities for "Unionists" Cabinet.

THE CORRESPONDENCE.

The text of the letters between the Premier and Sir Wilfrid Laurier follow:

Sir Wilfrid wrote:

Dear Sir Robert,—On the 12th day of May you asked me to meet you on the following day, which I did. After explaining fully the conditions of the war in the light of the knowledge acquired during your recent visit to Great Britain, you stated reasons which had led you to the conclusion that compulsory service was necessary and you explained to me the provisions of the military service bill.

You then proposed the formation of a coalition government upon the basis that, outside of the Prime Minister, each of the two political parties should have an equal representation in the Cabinet and you emphasized the importance of avoiding, if possible, an election, during the war. I told you at once that if my co-operation was desired, I regretted that I had not been invited before you had announced a policy of compulsory service, as I feared very serious difficulties if a conscription law was passed by the present parliament. You rejoined that you had thought it preferable to invite me after the policy had been enunciated rather than before. At an interview which took place on Tuesday, the 29th of May, you suggested to me that you thought it necessary to hold a caucus of your supporters, but desired to consult me before doing so. I suggested to you that to hold a caucus pending negotiations would not likely tend towards the object to be attained. At the same time I suggested that as I wanted to consult particularly Sir Lomar Gouin and some other friends I would like to have a clear statement in writing of your proposal, which you formulated as follows:

That a coalition government should be formed. That the military service bill should be passed. That a pledge should be given not to enforce it until after a general election. That parliament should be dissolved and the coalition government should seek a mandate from the people. At the conference on Friday, the first of June and again on Monday the fourth, the possible personal of a coalition government was considered. Some not insuperable difficulties in that personnel were anticipated and the subject

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1917

POSSESSION SOMETIMES PALLS.

The people, that is, some persons, have been clamouring for improved car service on the Canadian Pacific Railway between Peterborough and Toronto, and vice versa. This demand has been met by attaching a cafe parlour car to all local trains, so that the Peterborough traveller can eat and ride luxuriously from city to city. Now to demonstrate that the improvement will be appreciated, and used. It should not fall into the class of things described by Byron—"Tis an old lesson, time approves it true; and those that know it best deplore it most; when all is won that all desire to woo, the paltry prize is hardly worth the cost." We are building great expectations upon a municipal coal yard; we are living in hopes of seeing another hard winter, and having access to a coal supply that will not add the shivers of dread of shortage, to the shivers developed by zeroic temperature. We are often disappointed with the "pie" built by our obliging spouse upon "mother's pie" plans and specifications. There is hardly one thing that we think we want badly and strive strenuously to get, that when obtained, meets expectations or fills the want we thought we had. Will it be so with the cafe-parlour car?

We are growing slack; we haven't manufactured a honourary colonel for a long time—even the Sam-ples have disappeared.

A BUSINESS CONCERN.

The Hydro-electric principle, as an applied practice, seems to be the thing. It is succeeding, and will continue to succeed, by virtue of its merits as meeting a public want and serving public needs. This chief virtue has depended, depends and will continue to depend, upon keeping the Hydro enterprise free from political tanglements; depends upon preventing its being made a donkey engine to any political party, or any party government. It is a truly democratic feature of our national governmental equipment. It is a concretion of the idea of Abraham Lincoln as expressed in his great Gettysburg speech, over half a century ago—"government of the people, by the people, for the people."

The purchase of the plant of the Ontario Power Company at Niagara Falls, for twenty-two and a half millions, is a big undertaking, but it is computed that it will pay for itself in 25 years. When we add the fifteen millions that is to be spent on the Chippewa-Queenston scheme, to develop the enormous quantity of 600,000 horse power, we see how the people spend money for themselves. The total expenditure including the Chippewa-Queenston scheme, is 84 million dollars on Hydro-electric account, to be met by the people but paid for by the profits resulting from the operation of an immense utility for the people's own benefit.

The great success is in large part, if negatively, due to the scheme being kept free from the embarrassing benefits of political or party influence or entanglements. Of course, necessarily, the government of the province of the day is the agent or agency through which some details of the enterprise are worked out—cooperating but not controlling—but in essence, in fact, the Hydro-electric is a people's enterprise, which it is safe to say, would never have gained the place and importance it has done, or won the success gained, if it had been a government enterprise, under the best conditions possible in this party-ridden province.

Another element in the success of the Hydro-electric as a business enterprise, is that so far it has been conducted on business principles with the sole object of giving the people its benefits at as near cost as possible without any political hangers-on taking toll at the people's expense. Its comparatively smooth running is due that it is run as a business concern, without political expediency bedevilling its efficiency or political parasites living upon its juice, or political busybodies putting sand in the bearings of the machinery.

If we had at Ottawa a government doing business on business principles with the singleness of purpose of the Hydro-electric Commission, the work of the war would not have been muddled; recruiting might not have been killed, conscription might not have been considered necessary, and confessed failure of the government would not have found expression in the movement for replacing it with a win-the-war government, a government that would do business for the sake of having it done without any side glances at party gain.

Would an election — short and sharp—be less distracting from war work than the present uncreative crisis? Like a thunderstorm, it might clear the air and decide something.

HELPING HIGH PRICES.

One would hardly have thought of the curvilinear banana being an element in helping solve the provisioning of armies and peoples in this war. Yet the United Fruit Company of Boston has issued a six-page six-coluran sheet in glorification of the banana as a cheap food, of high nutritive value, and a substitute for other scarcer and high-priced food articles. These qualifications, and many others, are claimed for it. The banana is pronounced the cheapest food in the market. Its edible portion retails at two and a half cents per pound. A pound of this contains 460 "calories," while a pound of porterhouse steak contains 1,800 "calories." That is, according to an official authority, in the United States two and three quarter pounds of bananas peeled, about 8 cents worth, are equal to a pound of porterhouse steak, which costs from 32 cents to 35 cents. There are many other claims made for the banana as a food, but its chief benefit will be derived from its more general use and the saving of other food that can be exported for our allies and our armies. And if some of us can bring ourselves to eat bananas and eschew other foods, the supply of the latter will be increased and prices reduced. We can't get the Minister of Labour or the Government to take any effective official interest in dealing with the food situation. We may be forced to substitute the banana for official supineness. Anyway, we shan't quite starve; we can afford to buy a banana when we can't afford a beef-steak. The Health Department of New York in view of the high price of vegetables, fears that the health of the people may suffer from lack of their use, and recommends bananas as a cheap and effective substitute.

After the war six thousand Canadians are to be employed to build roads. Good. After showing the way to victory and making it, they are to show the way to market.

LEADERSHIP NEEDED.

We do not wish to regard, and shall not regard, the United States as being superior to Canada, except in size and the length of its purse. We don't believe United States soldiers are superior or even equal to Canadians as fighters. We do not believe our Yankee cousins are any more patriotic than our own people, and we don't believe that they have any better statesmen than we have. But some way the United States has a knack of doing things. This applies especially to its war work. The United States, after a mighty long time making ready, has been in the war some three months. It has already a hundred thousand soldiers at the front, and has got its conscription machine for gathering 500,000 more men, well started. The first day of registration for the selective draft, brought a total of ten million names to select from. This is one day's result of a few days' business like preparation for enrollment. The United States has ten million men to choose its half million from and if the selection is made as proportionately rapid as registration, we may look in a few days for the announcement of the enrollment of the first half million.

It took Canada nearly three months to apply its futile and ludicrous post card campaign for registration, from which nothing came, and more time was wasted on the "Canadian Defence Force," and now we are holding conscription in abeyance while the Premier is getting nowhere with the reconstruction of his Cabinet — that should have been shaken up months and months ago, and provided with elements that would take the momentous interests of recruiting seriously. This is a crisis in our history—in our war-making history — when patriotism is called for; when resolution and prompt action are called for. Every day's delay and hesitation compromises the national interests. If we are going to have conscription, let us have it, and have it over. If not, we want something done to take its place. If worthwhile registration of Canada's manhood had been made months ago as a potential if not declared agency of conscription, there would have been an end of hesitation, and largely of opposition; if the application of the Militia Act had been applied as sure evidence of the government being in earnest, the country might have responded to leadership that leads instead of balking the leadership that stands still, shivering on the brink.

Two things hanging over us—coalition or dissolution; one thing hanging fire—conscription.

War Veterans Lay Their Requests Before Ottawa Government

OTTAWA, Ont., June 5.—Twelve members of the executive of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada were present before the Returned Soldiers' Committee of the Commons this morning and afterwards waited upon Sir Thomas White and Hon. W. J. Roche before whom they went into further details as to their wishes with regard to land settlement and pensions.

Before the committee this morning, Major Robinson, of Vancouver, presented a resolution on compulsory legislation based upon the claims of the comrades of the veterans in the trenches and the need of reinforcements.

COMB OUT THE CIVIL SERVICE

The resolution demanded that all departments of the Government service be searched for all eligible single and married men without children between the ages of 18 and 45, and that they be immediately attested and put in training for overseas service, their places to be filled by competent returned soldiers where possible. The resolution further asked that all officers and men fit for overseas service, who are now employed on guard or home service duty be immediately sent overseas in drafts, provision being made for men in the Canadian defence force who are physically fit to be discharged and brought under the new order.

The resolution also asked that wherever possible the places of men of military age employed in the various industries in the country should be filled with older men, or with women, and that these men be taken to supplement the overseas forces; also that all aliens, enemy or otherwise, be conscripted for whatever service the Government deemed fit.

TAKE OVER WAR INDUSTRIES

The resolution also provided that all factories, public utilities, and general industries necessary to the winning of the war be taken over and conducted by the Government with adequate compensation to the present owners; that all incomes and wealth in excess of the holders' reasonable needs be placed at the disposal of the Government so that the principle may be carried out that one citizen shall not give more than another.

The concluding provision of the resolution is as follows: "That if any general system of compulsory service is put in force the Government, which is the body corporate of the people of Canada, make ample provision for those who may be disabled in the service and the dependents of those whose lives have been or may be sacrificed in their country's cause, and that a definite and comprehensive understanding be given to this effect.

Norman Knight, secretary-treasurer of the Association, presented the views of the veterans re demobilization. He declared that there was great overlapping in the present machinery connected with the returned soldiers' problem, and advocated the formation of a department of mobilization presided over by a director with wide powers and independent of party influence. He urged that the returned soldiers be employed as clerks, secretaries, etc., in this department and that branch offices be conveniently located throughout the country.

THE PENSION SCALE

Captain MacPherson, of Ottawa, presented the resolution on pensions which was based upon statistics of the Labour Department in connection with the cost of living. The resolution advocated the increase of the total disability pension from $480 to $840 per annum; the fixing of a pension to a widow or a widowed mother, without dependents, at eighty per cent of the total disability pension; the increase of the pension for children of widows from $6 to $12 per week; and of orphan children from $12 to $20 per week, the pension to continue until the children are eighteen years of age.

TO MAKE LAND ATTRACTIVE

Capt. J. Finn, of Prince Albert, advocated community land settlement in Provinces which own their own domain, with the granting of 160 acres of land and a cash advance of $2,500 at five per cent. for twenty years. Individual land settlement with a grant of 320 acres on the same terms would be suitable for the Western Provinces.

Major Anderson advocated the adoption of the French system of functional training for disabled men.

A. C. Hay of Manitoba presented a resolution to the effect that instead of sending orphaned children of soldiers to institutions, homes be found for them, and that a record be kept by the Government of their fathers' deeds.

Many people when granted favours, shy at gratitude as if it would bite them.

year and was transferred to the 4th Battalion at the front. After considerable service with that unit he was wounded on October 8th last and invalided to England. He has volunteered for France again and is now attached to No. 3 Co., C.B.T.

In one of his letters Sapper Barrell mentions several Peterborough men who are in the same unit, including Pte. Dutland and Pte. Geo. Burton, the latter formerly employed in the Quaker Oats Co.

Sapper Barrell says: "I see by the papers here yesterday that you are going to have conscription. That will make them go. It is a shame that the men would not enlist without being made. I am glad I am not one of them. The weather here is good. I expect it is over in Canada too. I wish I was back, but I feel that I shall be doing more for my country by offering myself again for France. I was before the Colonel and he accepted me. I was glad."

In an earlier letter, Sapper Barrell says: "They treat the men better here that have not been out to France. It is a big shame to see the strong, healthy men that have been here for months and get all the best of the jobs. If I only had myself to think of I would sooner be out in France with my own battalion. They do treat you as men out there. It is easier to get back to Canada if you have not been out to France. I have seen lots go back here that have never been out.

Sapper Barrell's brother died of wounds in France last year.

Mrs. Barrell has also received the following letter from Pte. J. Sandson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, acknowledging the receipt of a parcel sent him:

Dear Friend,—A line or two hoping they will find you all in good health as this leaves me at present. I received the box you sent me all O.K. and it was very kind of you indeed. The tobacco and socks were acceptable indeed, also the rest of the box as well."

A recent letter from England shows that Lieut. Vincent Eastwood is at present the only subaltern left on duty with the infantry in France. Capts. Hubert Eastwood, C. B. Widdifield, T. W. B. Marling and Mowat are also in the trenches as lieutenants, but Lieut. Eastwood is the only one of the original lieutenants of the battalion left. Lieuts. F. S. Duputy and A. A. Richardson, of the 93rd, are in France with a construction battalion, and Lieut. P. G. Migirt, who is suffering from bad ears, is on duty at the base in France. The following are in England after seeing service in France:

Lieut. Stuart, permanent base, suffering from rheumatism.
Lieut. A. P. Stock, wounded.
Lieut. B. N. Sexton, wounded.
Lieut. H. C. Gillham, wounded.
Lieut. J. M. Watt, injured ankle.
Lieut. J. Ketchum, trench fever.
Lieut. J. A. McNabb, permanent base, appendicitis.
Lieut. N. C. Hatton, suffering from bronchitis.
Lieut. E. R. Hughes, wounded.
Lieut. W. G. Worth, wounded.
Lieut. A. R. Stevenson, observer in Royal Flying Corps.

Of the other officers, Lieut. Milburn was killed in action, and Lieut. Hannaford is missing and believed killed. Lieut. Crisp, with the Royal Flying Corps, had a bad fall a few months ago. Lieut. Armstrong is now assistant adjutant with the 258th Battalion, 5th Division, and Lieut. Gardiner is signalling officer at Seaford.

OTTAWA, June 6.—Single men of military age employed in Ottawa by the Imperial Munitions Board, with no dependents, have been requested to present themselves for medical examination at the base recruiting office here. Any physically unfit for service overseas will be retained on the staff, but the others will be notified that their services are no longer required. The Board will also order 5,000 out of the 6,000 on its inspection staff throughout Canada to present themselves for examination. The other 1,000 are returned soldiers.

Medical examination of the staff in Ottawa began to-day.

TORONTO, June 7.—Returned soldiers or sailors who decide to settle on the land in Ontario will be paid $1.10 per day for every day spent at the training farm at Monteith, and in the case of married men their wives will get the same separation allowance as they got while the husbands were serving in the forces, while each child under 16 years will get $6 per month, which is slightly more than is allowed by the Patriotic Fund. The wives also will get the same amount as they got from the Patriotic Fund. Single men will receive $1.10 per day, and those with dependents will get an allowance at least equal to that of the Patriotic Fund.

Negotiations are being carried on with the Dominion Government to see if they will contribute the separation allowance. If not, the Province will bear the entire expense.

The present capacity of the training school at Monteith is 32 men. A party of 30 returned soldiers will go north in the course of a few days for the purpose of learning farming at the Monteith School, which has a staff of graduates of the Ontario Agricultural College and after graduating they will be given 80 acres of land each in Owens or O'Brien township, 70 miles west of Cochrane. All of the men selected are cut out for work in New Ontario, and will make excellent settlers, it is believed. Some of them have had experience in farming before the war.

CAN YOU PASS THIS EXAM. FOR PERFECT WOMAN?

LIVERPOOL, England. — "The perfect woman" has just been defined by a conference here of teachers from girls' schools throughout England. Here is the result of their united efforts:

"The perfect woman is 40, is married, and is the mother of five children. She is in happy circumstances, living in a beautiful part of the country a few miles from a big town. She is the centre of a big home, in which there is a high standard of cleanliness and comfort and where good taste is everyhere visible in furniture, carpets, curtains, wall paper, ornaments and clothes.

"The ideal woman is sensible and business like and her home is a place of peace. She is patriotic and interested in politics and does all she can to remove the causes of sufferings among the poor. She is delightful companion and has a gift for friendship. She is religious and tries to fulfill her duty toward God and toward other people.

"She takes walks, rides bicycles, climbs, swims, dances, skates, rows, and plays games. She can ride a horse and drive a motor car. She is proficient in many branches of practical knowledge. She can do anything and everything about the house. She has some knowledge of the law; knows how to invest money, can use a typewriter. She is a great reader; everyday she reads some serious book as well as a newspaper and a novel. She speaks three languages besides her own."

ANOTHER APPEAL TO HON. MR. COCHRANE 4 FOR CANAL OPENING

Deputation from Trent Municipalities Recommended by Meeting Here To-day

The municipalities along the Trent Canal decided this afternoon to organise a new drive on Ottawa for the purpose of renewing their demand for the removal of the obstruction at Campbellford, caused by the G.T.R. bridge.

Mr. R. R. Hall moved, seconded by Mr. W. H. Bradburn, that Mayor Duffus communicate with the heads of the Trent district municipalities to arrange for a deputation to visit the Minister of Railways and Canals, asking the immediate removal of the Campbellford obstruction.

Among those present were Reeve Kylie, of Lindsay, Reeve Fowlds of Hastings and P. M. Howard, C. R. Fowlds and A. Wilson also of Hastings, Mayor Duffus, Col. Miller, G. A. Gillespie, W. G. Morrow, B. D. Hall, W. H. Bradburn, R. R. Hall, W. S. Campbell and others. Communications were read from Campbellford, Orillia, Fenelon Falls, the Warden of Victoria County and other municipalities conveying their approval to any action intended to bring about the opening of the Canal.

Mayor Duffus presided and reviewed the recent efforts to arouse the government to individual action.

The following telegram was received from Capt. Burnham this morning:

"Please tell the meeting that Cochrane's extraordinary and unexplained course re Campbellford bridge has no support from the rest of the government and that a lively deputation from Trent Valley to the Premier would soon bring Cochrane to reason and help canal on materially."

COL. J. W. MILLER.

Col. Miller stated that he had received a telegram from Capt. Burnham this morning, who stated that it was extremely important that action be taken at once to overcome the opposition of Hon. Mr. Cochrane. It is a crime, Col. Miller said, to allow this large amount of money invested in the canal to lie idle because of the minor expenditure required to raise the G.T.R. bridge at Campbellford. It might be advisable to send another deputation to Ottawa urging immediate removal of the obstacle.

MR. R. R. HALL.

Mr. R. R. Hall observed that Mr. Cochrane's letter did not sound unsympathetic. It was well known that the finances of the G. T. R. were not in the best condition, and representations from that quarter apparently impressed themselves upon Mr. Cochrane, who probably considered that he was not justified in taking the G.T.R. by the throat and forcing them into this expenditure while the Company was short of funds. Mr. Hall, therefore, did not encourage the proposal of badgering Hon. Mr. Cochrane, whose sympathies were evidently behind the proposal to open up the canal. He suggested that a communication be made to Mr. Cochrane requesting that a swing be put in the bridge at Campbellford.

REEVE WALTER FOWLDS.

Mr. W. Fowlds, Reeve of Hastings, stated that the people of this entire district were anxious to realize the full fruits from the large sums of money various Governments had invested in the Trent Canal. He endorsed the proposal that a deputation from this district should go to Ottawa providing it could be made sufficiently strong.

MAYOR KYLIE.

Mayor Kylie remarked that Mr. Burnham was on the ground and knew what he was talking about. It would be a great mistake to handicap the Government this time, but they proposed to spend ten millions on highways and apparently had the time and money for public works. Hence the Trent municipalities were justified in demanding this comparatively minor expenditure. It would result in throwing open the Canal to Lake Ontario traffic. Mayor Kylie gave the assurance that Lindsay would get its full support to Peterborough in any plan that they decided upon.

SUGGESTS CREATION OF BOARD WITH CONTROL OVER COMBINES

Cost of Living Commission Says Such A Body Would Be of National Service

OTTAWA, June 6.—Several recommendations are offered by Mr. W. F. O'Connor, the cost of living commissioner, in a report which has been presented to Parliament by Hon. T. W. Crothers, the Minister of Labour. Mr. O'Connor suggests the establishment of a trade and industrial board, which might have jurisdiction over trade combines and trade methods in Canada. He is of opinion that such a body might perform two useful services. It might supervise those necessary combinations of merchants for the purpose of extending Canada's export trade, and at the same time make more easy price fixing at home. Mr. O'Connor points out that Canada's' equipment for industrial effort is said to be of a capacity twice or three times greater than domestic requirements demand. Increased export trade or an influx of immigrants, preferably of the agricultural class, he says, is therefore necessary to keep this equipment in operation and to give employment to artisans, particularly afte. the cessation of munition making and the return of the soldiers from the front. "Having in mind the demand for the establishment of a board or commission to deal with the legal and other aspects of inland trade," says Mr. O'Connor, "my suggestion is that such a board is as much necessary for the purpose of foreign trade."

Provinces Are Lax.

The cost of living commissioner points out that the provinces have exhibited little or no interest in the enforcement of laws against accumulations of products, unjust prices and combines. He holds that the Provincial authorities are primarily responsible for the enforcement of the substantive law respecting the cost of living. He therefore proposes "the getting together of Dominion and Provincial authorities." He also advocates an amendment to the cost of living Order-in-Council to provide that municipal investigations into the cost of living be instituted by mayors, wardens, reeves or other head officers of municipalities, only after application to the Minister of Labour and with his consent, and that once instituted the whole responsibility for the investigations to that end be upon those who instituted them. At present, Mr. O'Connor stated, municipalities commence enquiries, carry them on while any eclat is to be derived from them, and in case nothing is discovered to justify the charges which preceded them to unload responsibility upon the Department of Labour.

Getting Results.

Mr. O'Connor speaks of investigations which have been made, or are being made, by his branch of the Labour Department. That into the cold storage business and the monthly reports being made, he states, will permit quick discovery in future of how much of a given commodity is held in storage, where it is, its cost and value. It will also provide comparison with previous years as a check upon undue accumulation. Mr. O'Connor asserts that it is as impossible to say how such enquiries have reduced prices as it is to say how many lives health regulations have saved. He has, he continues, sought out evidence of undue accumulation of commodities and warned against it, has many times insisted upon the right of a proper buyer to buy at fair prices, has located many trade combines and caused them to dissolve, and at times has been able in specific instances to prevent rises in price. Moreover, he expresses himself as sure that the knowledge that prices are undergoing constant supervision has done much to restrain undue inflation.

Tobacco Dealer Very Unpopular Over in England

LONDON.—The most unpopular persons in England at the present day are the retail tobacco dealers. They are the retail tobacco dealers. stroke of war profiteering that has yet been achieved. The budget introduced last week raised the tax on tobacco by forty-four cents a pound. Thereupon almost all of the dealers announced a raise in prices averaging on all forms of tobacco about sixty-four cents a pound. The dealers take advantage of an extra tax and also an extra profit of twenty cents a pound. The consumers are indignant, but as the dealers generally hang together, the consumers have no remedy except to stop using tobacco. There is an additional grievance in that a large proportion of the tobacco used in England is consumed by the soldiers in training, on leave, or in hospitals, and purchased by people to send to their soldier friends at the front.

The profits resulting from this increased tax really work out at more than twenty cents a pound, because both the tax and profit are charged on all the tobacco in stock which paid duty at the old rate. So that, on the stocks in hand when the duty was raised, the dealers are making a new profit of sixty-four cents a pound.

The tobacco trade will make about $55,000,000 a year for collecting the new duty which is expected to yield $30,000,000 revenue, according to the estimates of a correspondent of the Daily Mail. He figures so that the traders have about 44,000,000 pounds in stock on which they will charge the new duty to consumers, without having paid it themselves.

FRED. FRANK. RAE.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fowler, Carberry, have given four sons to King and country. Ptes. Rae and Frank, twin brothers, enlisted with the 45th Battalion and were transferred to the 1st C.M.R.'s and went into the trenches on June 8th, 1916. Some time later Rae was stricken with appendicitis and died on July 30th, 1916, four days before his 19th birthday. Frank was wounded in the left arm on October 3rd, and is now in a convalescent training camp and is again about fit for the trenches. Fred., the eldest son, went overseas with a medical corps on December 10th. Stanley the fourth son while at Camp Hughes, was taken ill and died suddenly with appendicitis on July 13, 1915, aged 19 years.

The Fowler brothers are well known about Peterborough, their father, Mr. John Fowler, being an old resident of Fowler's Corners, Smith Township. Mrs. T. R. Kennedy, 382 McDonnell street, is an aunt.

EARLY GENERAL ELECTION

was not concluded. On Wednesday the sixth of June, the final conference took place, at which I announced that I had not seen my way clear to join the government on the terms proposed, to which you replied in the affirmative. At this and previous interviews I always stated to you that whenever conscription was adopted after a consultation of the people, I would certainly urge in every possible way obedience to the law.

Believe me, yours very sincerely,
WILFRID LAURIER.

THE PREMIER'S REPLY.

On June 7, Sir Robert Borden replied as follows:

Dear Sir Wilfrid Laurier,—I beg to acknowledge your letter of yesterday in which you set forth the substance of the recent negotiations respecting the formation of a coalition government. At our first interveiw you had expressed the opinion that compulsory service should not be enforced utnil it had been approved by a referendum or at a general election. It was for this reason that I submitted a further proposal on the 29th of May, which is described in the fourth paragraph of your letter. I agree that it was the policy of compulsory service which, in your judgment, made it impossible for you to join a coalition government. I was convinced that compulsory service was necessarr and must be included in the policu of the proposed coalition. You on the other hand decided that you could not accept such a policy and that you could not join a government which adopted it,

Yours faithfully,
R. L. BORDEN.

CONSERVATIVE CAUCUS.

Conservatives held a full caucus this morning. The conference was opened on the entry of the Prime Minister, with a burst of cheering, and ended an hour later with another burst of applause which was audible al lover the building

The Prime Minister explained the stand he had taken throughout the negotiations with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. At the conclusion a resolution endorsing the stand of the Premier was moved and passed.

700 FARM HANDS BROUGHT IN.

Ontario Secured Good Farm Labour in United States.

TORONTO, June 7.— Seven hundred farm hands were secured from the United States for labour upon Ontario farms by the agents of the Ontario Government since the month of February. This is an increase of 200 over last year's total. The agents have now been withdrawn from United States territory, as it was deemed advisable to draw upon the men-power of the republic since the United States has entered the war on the side of the allies.

CHEESE WILL BE PAID FOR ON BASIS OF QUALITY AT MONTREAL

Graders Appointed To Inspect All Cheese for Export—Factorymen Urged To Be Careful.

DETAILS OF INTEREST

The new regulations respecting the purchasing and shipping of cheese is the subject of a letter Mr. G. A. Gillespie has received from Hodgson Brothers and Rowson, exporters, Montreal, that will be of interest to factorymen and patrons. After referring to the price of 21¾c a pound, f.o.b. steamer Montreal, they state that this is for the finest grade.

"The freight and cartage from country points," they continue, "together with the packing in accordance with the British Board of Trade requirements and all expenses incurred after arrival and putting the cheese into shape landed at the steamer, involve considerable expenditure, and it will be necessary for the merchants to buy their cheese at a margin sufficiently large to cover these various and several expenses.

"Now we want to impress upon you to emphasize upon the factorymen that it is more essential than ever that they pay the closest attention to quality. Graders have been appointed by the Commission, who will inspect and grade according to quality every lot of cheese that comes into Montreal. Any and all factories that are graded No. 2 by the inspector will only be accepted by the Commission at ½c reduction below the price of the finest, and anything graded No. 3 will only be accepted at 1c per pound below the price of the finest. Culls will also be accepted by the Commission, but the price paid will be on the merits of the cheese. We are giving you this information to pass on to the factorymen, as we shall have no voice whatever in the grading, and can only abide by the results of the graders appointed."

Press on Speech of Austrian Emperor

"Attempt to Prevent Victory."

Boston Post: "Whatever of good may have been obtained in the speech of Emperor Charles to the Austrian Reichsrath on Thursday must be counterbalanced in the opinion of sensible people by the monarch's clear and indefensible attempt to pervert history."

"Will Have to Make Good."

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: "Emperor Charles' pledge to rule justly in 'the spirit of true democracy,' if intended as lip concession to a popular aspiration that is growing throughout the world, is one that he and all other kings will have to make good hereafter if they retain their thrones at all."

"Unfamiliar Language."

Philadelphia Press: "Unfamiliar language this from the House of Hapsburg and a new indication that popular sentiment needs to be handled gingerly. Internal unrest has made Kaiser Wilhelm cautious and Emperor Charles both humble and conciliatory."

"No Definite Proposition."

Albany Argus: "There is nothing in the shape of a definite proposition anywhere. But it should be remembered that the poor fellow is in a 'tight place,' though he seems to mean well."

"Orators Will Speak Mind."

St. Louis Republic: "But such frankness is not to be found in speeches from thrones. The really significant thing about the whole affair is that the Parliament is now in session and that orators under less restraint are likely to speak the mind of Austria before long."

"Anything to Win War."

Chicago Herald: "Militaristic Hohenzollerns and reactionary Hapsburgs are perfectly willing, in case of necessity, to talk about democracy and reform and the like. Anything to keep the people to the sticking point —anything to win the war!"

MORE FAKE BREAD CARDS.

Berlin Police Arrest Counterfeiters with a Supply of 40,000.

German newspapers recently received in London show that the Berlin police have emulated their confreres of Munich and discovered a gang of bread-card counterfeiters. The Munich case was told of in a special cablegram from Berlin, printed in The New York Times of March 20.

The Berlin police have arrested eight persons, headed by an ex-manservant and a lithographer who is an army deserter. The gang maintained a fully equipped printing shop for the manufacture of ration cards, 40,000 of which, in various stages of completion, were seized. Their organization also included a regular street and coffee house traffic in the counterfeit tickets, which were sold to "wholesale dealers," and by these peddled out to "retailers" in various parts of Greater Berlin.

The police expect to arrest scores of other implicated persons, who include women, before their investigations are finished. The gang was also preparing to deal in fat cards.

Automobile Cases in Lakefield Court

At a session of the County Police court in Lakefield yesterday James Hendren was fined $2 by Magistrate Langley for driving his car with the tail lamp unlighted.

Mr. R. Hunter, of Peterborough was charged with driving his car with the headlights out, but this charge was dismissed. There is something of a suspicion among some Lakefield automobilists that they have been singled out by the police of this city for special observation under the traffic by-law. Of course, the idea has no foundation in fact, but it is understood Lakefield's police will not overlook any chance to even the score with Peterborough.

MR. BURNHAM OBJECTED TO INCREASE FOR JUDGES

The following is an extract from a report of the daily grind at Ottawa:

Messrs. Kyte and Barnard put in pleas for higher salaries for county judges, pointing out that they could not keep up the dignity of their positions on $3,000 a year.

This was objected to by Mr. Burnham, of Peterborough, who declared there was altogether too much idea of surrounding these offices with solemnity and dignity. "We have too much of this sort of decoration and it ought to be cut out," he declared.

The resolution was then adopted and the bill given its first reading.

THE ONLY MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Mrs. Timothy Bowes, Blissfield, N. B., writes:—"I have always used Baby's Own Tablets for my three children and I can speak very highly of them as I could not get along without them. Baby's Own Tablets are the only medicine I would use for my children." The Tablets cure all the minor ills of little ones and the mother who always keeps a box of them in the house may feel reasonably safe against the consequences of sudden attacks of illness. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BUCHAREST'S SUFFERING.

Has the Record of Victims of Aeroplane.

Bucharest holds the record of victims of bombs dropped by German Zeppelins and airplanes. Over one thousand persons have been killed or injured —three hundred in a single day. Airmen, descending low, subjected men working in the fields to machine gun fire. Two German airplanes, perceiving a carriage going along the road, chased it. The horses bolted, and the airmen succeeded in killing the occupant, driver and horses. The Roumanian press recalls also the bombardment of the royal palace, where Prince Mircea, the infant son of King Ferdinand, lay dying. The newspapers also publish information from Bucharest of the razing to the ground of the houses of absent people, the requisitioning of all supplies found in the possession of the inhabitants, savage looting in the neighbouring villages, the violation of young girls, and numerous fires, all of these outrages being perpetrated by the German, Turkish and Bulgarian soldiery. The Hungarian Honved troops stabled their horses in the churches, profaned the altars and lit fires with the holy images.

What Is Value In Your Brassiere?

Value is intrinsic quality of fabric, together with accuracy of fit, durability of wear and wash, and daintiness of appearance. Isn't this what you expect in your Brassiere? A "Model" Brassiere, at each price, has better quality of embroidery, or more embroidery or lace per inch and per dollar, than any other make. As for accuracy of fit, note the difference between a "Model" and the one you used to think was best.

Good Water Pressure An Absolute Necessity When Fighting Fires

A Chemical Unit Would Be A Valuable Acquisition to the Fire Department, but It Is Hard To See How the Council Can Overlook the Need of a Pumping Unit—Combine the Two

To-day is the last day for receiving tenders for a combined motor-driven chemical and hose wagon. Now that the capability of a pumping car has been demonstrated to the Aldermen, it is hardly likely that they will recommend the purchase of a chemical unit in preference to a pumper with a chemical attachment. A pumping car with a chemical attachment is a whole fire department in itself. Fire Chief Howard says that eighty per cent. of the fires in Peterborough can be put out with chemicals. Eighty per cent. of the fires in Peterborough are grass fires, chimney fires, etc., and there is no question about the necessity for having a chemical unit that will extinguish such fires with a minimum of damage to the properties concerned. The other twenty per cent. of the fires in Peterborough are of varying proportions, and it is here where the larger property owners, such as the manufacturers, should have a claim on the services of a pumping car that will get to all fires in much less time than horse-drawn apparatus and do much more efficient work. Some people will say that the present steam pumping engine is rarely if ever used. That is quite correct. The only thing that stands in the way of it being used on more frequent occasions is the fact that it is so cumbersome. To move it to a fire it is necessary to hunt up a team of horses. The fire engine did not arrive at the Quaker Oats fire until about three-quarters of an hour after the fire had started. The initial explosion broke the water main and the firemen were helpless. Had a pumping engine been on the ground at the outset, water could have been pumped from the river and a large part of the plant might have been saved.

$700,000 FIRE INSURANCE

At a recent meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, Alderman Worth made the statement that the plant of the Bonner-Worth Company was insured for seven hundred thousand dollars, or nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. Protecting this property, is a couple of fire hydrants and a horse and buggy fire department. If fire broke out at the plant two pieces of equipment would be sent to the fire, namely, a hose wagon and ladder wagon. Lines would be laid to the hydrants and the hydrant pressure would have to serve the purpose, whereas a pumping engine would raise the water main pressure from seventy-five pounds to as high as four hundred. The effect of such pressure on a fire has to be seen on a fire has to be seen to be appreciated.

HIGH PRESSURE NEEDED.

What applies to the Bonner-Worth Company's plant applies to other factories situated throughout the city as well as the business section of the town. If pressure is not an essential requirement at a fire, why do the larger cities, such as Toronto, spend thousands of dollars installing high-pressure systems throughout the city? There are many occasions when the mere water pressure of a hydrant is insufficient and a supplementary pressure service is necessary. This, to some extent, can be supplied by the pumping station, but it is not nearly so effective and direct as when a pumping engine is brought into play. Increasing the pump pressure at the waterworks station means that the water pressure all over the city must be raised, whereas a pumping engine in the vicinity of the fire would have the more direct result of raising the pressure in the area where it was most needed. There are times when a fire breaks out in an outlying section of the city and it becomes necessary to lay a thousand feet of hose. On such an occasion as this, the water pressure is seldom adequate. A number of the factories have all too few hydrants, but this deficiency would be more than made up by the acquisition of a pumper that would handle four lines of hose at any pressure from sixty to two hundred and seventy-five pounds pump pressure.

COMBINE THE TWO.

Admitting that eighty per cent. of the fires in this city could be handled by means of a chemical engine, why not spend six hundred dollars more and have the chemical attachment placed on a pumper? A chemical engine is no good to the manufacturer or big property owners. A chemical ceases to be of any value once the fire breaks out into the open. It is only good for fires that are closed in, such as the interior of a building. Once the fire breaks out where the air can get at it the chemical is done, and it remains for the fire fighters to bring the water service into play. A pumping car carrying a chemical attachment would constitute a unit that would be of service at both small and large fires. It would be speedy and one hundred per cent. efficient. The hydrant pressure fluctuates according to the location of the hydrants. A pumping car insures a constant pressure at all points. Buy a chemical engine without the pumper, and when you get to a fire the most valuable part of your equipment—which is the engine—is shut down. In the case of a pumper the engine never stops once the fire is reached but is connected with the pump by means of a lever and is ready to raise the water pressure to three hundred pounds if necessary. water per minute onto a fire, drawing from the hydrant at normal pressure. to raise the water pressure to four hundred pounds if necessary. to be appreciated. An efficient pumping outfit will pour several tons of

Small Boy Doesn't Miss Bathing Places He Might Have Had

The small boy and his older brothers, and perhaps some of his sisters, haven't yet experienced the need of the bathing beaches. The Councils thought twice of providing for them in snowball time last January. Some of the gang leaders have shown the way to the water, but they haven't yet induced their youthful followers to take the first plunge. June usually finds the most cautious and cold-blooded youngsters accustomed to the water, and the more daring have led the way early in May. But here is summer rapidly advancing and only the hardiest can brag of their first ducking, and even they admit that the experience was far from pleasurable.

There is something pathetic in the hesitation of the gang these days. Like forbidden fruit in an exposed, but well guarded orchard, or candies in a store window, the water invites and repels them. With a firm display of spirit they have approached the old summer haunts, every one of them determined to break the ice. But a foot that has been warmed and softened by wool contact since last October and now dipped appraisingly into the water is quickly withdrawn. In that sensation their swimming ardour has suddenly cooled, and though the most daring stump the rest of the gang there are few imitators. Enthusiasm has congealed under the unseasonable chill, and the bunch is content to wait for more comfortable conditions.

The "Hey Skinny" call to the Lake and River has yet to be sounded with all the old time appeal, and parents who regard the swimming season with more or less dread have no cause for worry while the cool weather continues.

Germans Now Mix Prisoners Together

Canadians Get Parcels More Regularly Than Any Other Class of Prisoner.

LONDON, June 6.—The Canadian Associated Press yesterday met Sergt. Mammorsley, of Winnipeg, who has just reached here after being two years a prisoner in different parts of Germany. He was captured at St. Julien, and once before unsuccessfully attempted to escape. He was consequently kept in close confinement for a considerable time. The Germans nowadays, he says, mix prisoners together, English with Russians, etc. English non-commissioned officers are never now selected to superintend prisoner parties.

Four others started with Mammorsely to escape. They began by digging under the foundations of the place where they were located. Two of the party were caught almost directly, but Mammorsely and the other two pushed on by night, and by day, the journey taking four days. They were received very kindly in Holland. Mammorsley says he has seen prisoners flogged, knocked with the butt of rifles, and kicked. He refused to work on one occasion, but was compelled to march for hours with others in a wide circle of fields. Mammorsley says that Canadians get parcels more regularly than any other class of prisoners.

GROWING BOYS AND GIRLS

It is a mistake to think that anaemia is only a girl's complaint. Girls show the effect of it more plainly than boys. Delayed development, pale faces, breathlessness, sick headaches, attacks of dizziness, and frequent pain in the back or side call attention to them. But many boys in their teens grow thin, weedy and have pimples on the face, showing that they have not enough blood. The anaemic boy is just as likely to become a victim to ill-health or consumption, as the pale, breathless girl, with headaches and worn-out look. Both need new, rich red blood to bring them back the health and activity that naturally belongs to the growing youth or maiden.

To prevent serious disaster to those of the rising generation, let both boys and girls be given the new blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are famous for making. Watch how soon the appetite improves, how the languid girl or the apparently lazy boy becomes full of activity and high spirits. Remember that the boy has to develop, too, if he is to make a strong, healthy man. Give both the growing boy and girl a new chance for future health and strength by giving them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the medicine that actually makes new rich blood, strengthens the muscles and the nerves, and brings abounding vitality.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Peterborough, June 6th, 1917.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—As it was at my suggestion that Mr. George Keen, general secretary of the Co-operative Union of Canada, was billed to address the public meeting held on the Market Square Monday night, June 4th, owing to the eagerness of the parties responsible to have the meeting held at that date, which was only allowing themselves three days to complete all arrangements, and working on the assumption that Mr. Keen would accept the invitation, the dodgers were placed in the printers hands. I wrote Mr. Keen stating that this was a meeting being got up by the organized workers of the city, and owing to the Co-operative Society not being in the coal trade, were unable to release the situation. In fairness to Mr. Keen for not being present, and all interested [illegible], I enclose a copy of his letter to me, dated June 2, and was received June 5th.

A. MURRAY.
471 Sherbroke street.

Brantford, Ont., June 2, 1917.

Dear Mr. Murray,—I am this morning in receipt of your favour of the 31st ult. Yesterday Mr. Gordon 'phoned me asking me to address a meeting in Peterborough on Monday night, and agreeing to pay my expenses. He told me he was acting in the interests of labour people in your city, and I was expected to address them on the coal question with the view of offering some solution to the difficulty. He apparently had the impression that I was responsible for some such solution in this city. I told him that while I was prepared to go to Peterborough if I could be of any service, I did not wish to put them to any expense and find the same had been uselessly incurred. The coal question can only be relieved in my judgment by negotiations between the Federal and American governments. It would seem that certain brokers control the output from the mines and Canadian coal merchants compete for possession of the limited supply by offering premiums upon current prices. I may say in conclusion that the difficulty your society is meeting with, as well as other societies, is the fact that our national movement is so small and inconspicuous. If we could get a number of societies organized successfully and able to work together through the union and developing along national lines all would make much greater headway. Unfortunately successful societies seem to concern themselves exclusively with their own local affairs, leaving national work entirely to me. They ought to awake to the dangers and possibilities of the future and by concerted effort take steps to make more rapid progress. If I can be of any service, kindly let me know.

Yours faithfully,
GEORGE KEEN,
Home Secretary.

FAST DRIVERS FOR PERSHING.

Middleton, Jennings, Linthicum, and Brain to Handle His Cars.

WASHINGTON, June 6. — Four expert automobile drivers—Ray Middleton, John J. Jennings, George Linthicum, and Elgin Brain — will drive the motor cars of Major General Pershing and his staff at the front in Europe. The first two are successful business men of Detroit. Linthicum is a racing driver, and Brain an aeronaut.

The men were recommended at the request of the Government by the Society of Automobile Engineers, and have volunteered their services. They will be rated as Sergeants in the army.

Army orders show also that a headquarters troop of cavalry has been organized to accompany General Pershing, so that the American officers will have their own men in charge of the forces and all other matters connected with American headquarters in France.

Dr. Gerard Douglas Allowed To Go on Suspended Sentence

LINDSAY, June 7.—Dr. Gerard Douglas, who has been relieving different parties of lumps and incidentally large sums of money in this district, came up for trial before County Police Magistrate Moore. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence on promising to make full restitution, paying all costs and keeping out of the province.

Police Magistrate Moore gave the prisoner a severe lecture before he was allowed to go.

County Crown Attorney Stinson, who had been looking into the accused's record, read letters from the mayor and postmaster of Quyon, Quebec, where he resided. These letters gave him a good record. It appears that he was a qualified doctor in the old country and took the name Haig because the family estate of that name had recently passed into his hands, and in order to hold it, he had to adopt the name. He claimed to be a cousin of Gen. Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces on the Western front.

A resident of Emily township named McConnell informed the police that he was a patient of Douglas Hyde, having had a lump removed, paying the man a tidy sum of money for the treatment.

ROUMANIA'S NEW ARMY.

Troops Rested, Re-organized and Equipped Now.

JASSY, Roumania, June 7.— Roumania's national feast was celebrated with enthusiasm behind the front. I visited various districts where the new army has been reorganized, and was astonished at the quick recovery of the much-tried troops. The units visited were those placed under the severest ordeal in the autumn campaign, and since exposed to pestilences during the winter. It would be almost impossible to guess they were the same troops. They are longing to be sent as soon as possible to the front. The enemy will have to face a new army, adequately equipped and seasoned, and imbued with deep hatred for the invaders of their homes.

Use Experience of Park Street Sewer in Prince St. Obstacle

In the construction of the nine-inch sewer on Prince street the city's employees have experienced the same difficulties from quicksand that impeded the progress on the trunk street trunk sewer. The trench is being dug nine feet deep, and to hold back the sand and water interlocking steel piles have been requisitioned to permit the laying of the mains. But these piles have to be driven by hand, a slow process, according to certain officials, who state that the steam pile driver, which is standing idle, would greatly facilitate the work and obviate the slugging that is now required. It was recently asserted in Council that this work would probably cost as much, if not more, than the trunk sewer. It was also remarked that only one of the men who were employed in the Park street work are now on Prince street. It may be that they were dispersed after the other sewer was completed and are not now available, but it is claimed that these would be valuable men, experienced in just this kind of work that Prince street presents. In other words they were educated in the Park street school and as graduates should be useful in the present work. And another consideration that has been mentioned is that the experience cost the city considerable money, and as trained men in meeting quicksand difficulties they should, if possible, be engaged in the Prince street work.

Sergeant Edwards in Collegiate Hall To-morrow Night

A large audience is expected to hear Sergeant Edwards relate his eighteen months' experience as a prisoner of war in Germany to-morrow (Friday) evening. Mr. G. H. Lesie, Manager of the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, will take the chair at 8.15 p.m. prompt, and the audience is asked to be in its place before that time so that all may hear without disturbance. Sergeant Edwards gives a plain, unaffected account of his experiences, and will have many interesting things to relate which should tend to bring us into closer touch and create a keener and more practical sympathy with those who are still prisoners. A short musical programme will be given and a collection taken up for the Prisoner's Department of the local Red Cross Society.

Nation-wide Advertising for "National Service"

A Practical "Win-the-war" Campaign of Publicity With a Message for Every Canadian

OTTAWA, June 4. — Never has the power of national publicity been so convincingly demonstrated as in the great British advertising campaigns, first, for recruits, then for supplementary supplies and equipment and later for thrift and the purchase of War Savings Certificates.

Along the latter lines and the allied one of production, the National Service Board of Canada announce the beginning of a series of advertisements which should have the earnest consideration of every loyal citizen of the Dominion. To produce more—to waste less, particularly of food—to eliminate extravagance of every kind—to save intelligently and systematically—and to lend the savings to the nation through the purchase of War Savings Certificates — these are the key-notes of these call to service. There is nothing academic about them, nothing overdrawn or melodramatic. They are plain, straightforward, intensely practical, and in deadly earnest, explaining why, and particularly how, everyone should help instead of perhaps unconsciously hindering.

The need for such a rousing campaign is only too evident, particularly to men who have recently been overseas and had an opportunity to compare the willing service and sacrifice so general in Great Britain and France with the detached, almost apathetic attitude of so many Canadians. Though the war has been going on for almost three years, and though our gallant Overseas contingents have won undying fame for Canada most of us here at home have hardly yet waked up to the real nature of the struggle in which we are engaged, and the necessity that we, too, "do our bit" in whatever way lies open to us.

It is just this detached attitude which has prevented Canada's whole weight being felt behind our divisions in France. From it the National Service Board hopes to arouse the nation, using straight-from-the shoulder advertising as a potent means to the desired end.

LABOR MEN DISCUSS THE COAL SITUATION

Favour Having the Matter Referred to the Dominion Government

The regular meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held last evening. An unusually large number of members were in attendance. Mr. J. J. Hartley, President of the Council presided. One of the items on the slate concerned some remarks respecting Socialists alleged to have been made by a clergyman of the city. This was not taken up as the time at the disposal of the members was occupied in discussing the coal situation. The speakers, of whom there were a number, were not, as a whole, very enthusiastic over the City Council's efforts to secure a supply of coal. Nothing definite was adopted in the way of a resolution, although the members were in favour of a move to memorialize the Government in the hope that influence could be used with the American Government and an adequate supply of coal secured for Canada.

ONE DAY WITHOUT A SINKING

LONDON, June 6.—The weekly report of losses of British merchant vessels in the submarine campaign will again show a favourable total when it is issued to-morrow. In some respects the last week has been the best since unrestricted submarine warfare was inaugurated. Last Friday was a blank day on the records, that is, no losses of British merchantmen occurred. It is the first time this has happened for along period.

British naval people believe the improvement is cumulative, and that there is not the slightest chance with the improved allied organizations, that the Germans ever will repeat their performance of the "black week" when nearly sixty boats were sunk. The weather continues to favour the boats which are fighting the submarines, and the co-operative organization of the patrols, aircraft and other anti-submarine services is improving constantly.

Numerous Encounters.

Progress of the technique of the anti-submarine campaign includes more careful supervision, together with various vigorous offensive measures, which it is impossible to detail. In the last week there has occurred numerous encounters, the results of which have been entirely satisfactory to the Admiralty.

PUBLIC OPINION

QUAKERS IN WAR.

(Public Ledger).

"The Quakers may be depended upon, however, to prove loyal to the nation and to human liberties," writes Horace Maher Lippincott, "even if they show it in as peculiar a way as one of their number who was a ship's captain and lay at anchor in a foreign port. Espying a piratical-looking fellow coming up a rope over the side of the ship, he said:

"Friend, if the wants that rope thee can have it, and he cut the rope, letting the marauder down to a watery grave, quickly and quietly."

THE REAL PROBLEM.

(Vancouver News-Advertiser).

It is frequently said that the question of the returned soldier is the most serious one before the country. It is serious enough, but there is a more urgent matter. That is, the question of the departing soldier. What shall be done after the war may now be properly considered. But what we shall do during the war to win the war is a more urgent and insistent question.

A BOOST FOR PROHIBITION

Farm bureau managers and officers of agricultural associations, representing more than 25,000 farmers, recently held a meeting at the College of Agriculture of Cornell University to demand the total prohibition of the manufacture of liquors made from grain, the object being to save the grain for foods. Mars needs bread, not beer.

THE WINNING SPIRIT.

(Chicago Tribune).

We need the spirit of Ty Cobb and Hughie Jennings and Joan of Arc. We do not care how good the pitching is—and the Germans are wonderful pitchers—we intend to make the seventh inning rally and get in the winning runs. Let the other fellow go dejected to the clubhouse. We shall not need our end of the ninth inning. The game will be over when our time comes for that.

KITCHENER'S PREDICTION

There may be nothing to it, but in seeking for the explanation of the slow German retreat on the Somme there comes to the recollection of the Waterbury American Earl Kitchener's oracular utterance in the fall of 1914, after the trench warfare had begun. "The army that first leaves its trenches," he said "will be beaten." If this prediction is justified it will deserve to be set alongside his then startling prediction that the war would last three years.

DRAIN OF NON-ESSENTIALS

(From the Springfield, Mass., Republican).

There ought to be economy of expenditure by the people in certain lines. Heavy taxation for war purposes will tend to force economy and thus eliminate extravagance and waste. A great modern war necessarily involves a transfer of wealth from private persons to the government for public uses and taxation brings it about. The transfer of wealth should be, as far as possible, a drain upon the non-essential industries rather than the essential industries, upon the production and sale of luxuries rather than upon the necessaries of life. This process cannot go on, of course, without a readjustment injurious probably to a certain number of individuals, but in the broadest sense the national welfare will be promoted by the transfer of labour from non-essential to the the essential occupations.

RIOTS AT STOCKHOLM.

Police Clash With Crowds Around the Parliament Buildings.

LONDON, June 6.—Clashes between crowds of workers and the police and soldiers in Stockholm during a debate in the Riksdag on Socialist interpellations are reported in a despatch to Reuter's from the Swedish capital. During the debate the streets near the Parliament Buildings were barred by a double line of soldiers and police. Considerable crowds gathered and stones were thrown. The police used their swords and batons, and several persons were injured.

Horses Die By The Thousands Of Mysterious Malady Which Sweeps Over South of France

Bordeaux, Toulouse, Albi, Narbonne and Perpignan Are Ravaged by Epizootic, Which Results in Loss of Sixty to Seventy Per Cent. of Affected Animals

THEORY OF POISONING AT SHIPPING CENTRES DIVIDES VETERINARY SURGEONS

PARIS, June 8.—There is great perturbation in horse dealing circles in France over the great mortality among horses in the southern regions of this country, notably in Bordeaux, Toulouse, Albi, Narbonne and Perpignan. The Matin states that the loss amounts to sixty to seventy per cent. of the animals affected.

The animals arrive apparently robust, but die after their arrival at the cavalry centres. Death comes to them so rapidly that treatment is useless and, indeed, impossible.

Horse dealers in Toulouse have confirmed the statement contained in the Matin and have acknowledged their inability to suggest the cause of the mortality.

Out of fourteen horses despatched from Finistere seven died during the journey or immediately after their arrival.

Veterinaries are divided in opinion on whether the animals were poisoned previous to their start from the shipping centres.

At Albi the losses have numbered thousands of horses during the last fifteen months. All of the deaths have occurred under identical conditions.

Some veterinary surgeons have expressed the opinion that the horses are dying of an infection of the grip. Whatever may be the cause the opinion is unanimous that nothing similar was experienced before the war.

The epizootic began in 1914, after the outbreak of hostilities. It culminated in the spring of 1915 and has continued since then with fluctuating intensity.

A virulent septicemia, which was first observed in a shipment of cavalry horses from Canada, probably is causing the deaths of thousands of those animals in France, according to Dean W. Horace Hoskins, of the State Veterinary College of New York University. Experts of this institution in conjunction with experts from the Bureau of Animal Indusry of the Department of Agriculture and other veterinary colleges are seeking a vaccine which will render horses immune from the bacilli.

The disease, a form of blood poison, which runs its course and kills and indirect contact, and while in a formative state cannot be detected even by a blood examination.

"There have been sporadic outbreaks of the disease in this country," said Dean Hoskins, "but they have been stamped out by isolating the victims and a thorough sterilization of the quarters they occupied. Remedies also have been applied to the animals who have come in contact with those infected, but so far no specific has been discovered, although we now are experimenting with the aid of veternarians from the Bureau of Animal Industry in the hope of discovering a vaccine which will make a horse immune.

"The disease is very fatal, running its course so rapidly there is no chance of stopping it. The first cases in New York city appeared here in a shipment of horses, which came by way of Canada, bound for the Allies. The close crowding of the animals destroys their only safeguard, which is segregation, and direct contact spreads the disease rapidly. In this instance the horses affected were removed, the others being quarantined and closely watched and the quarters that had been occupied were thoroughly sterilized. Vessels which have been used as horse carriers should all be thoroughly sterilized and the animals should be kept as clean as possible.

"When they are examined here by veterinarians employed by the shippers the animals are aparenthpy in perfect condition, but one affected animal will infect the whole shipment by the time port is reached. Then when they are given freedom of movement the virus spreads rapidly and kills them. The symptoms generally begin to show while the horses are en route, but there are no facilities for treatment or quarantine."

IMPROVEMENT IS NOTED IN THIS WEEK'S REPORT OF FARM CONDITIONS

Spring Grains Are All in With the Exception of Some Late Millet and Buckwheat—Clover is Picking Up—Live Stock Market Improving.

THE LABOUR SITUATION

The weekly crop reports made to the Ontario Department of Agriculture by District Representatives are to the following effect:

Field Crops.

The seeding of spring grains is completed, with the exception of some late millet and buckwheat. The catch was never better, and the young fields are looking most promising, although a week or more later in growth han usual.

Fall wheat is improving, but it has been thinned out nearly one-half in places by adverse spring weather.

Clover is also picking up, but it has not grown very high, although quite stocky, waiting for really warm weather. Alfalfa is doing much better than red clover, but there is no first cutting yet as the season has been so late.

A good deal of corn has been got in already, but the cold, wet weather of the week has greatly delayed planting, which is likely to be much greater than usual.

Beans will also be extensively planted in some quarters where they have not been raised before as a field crop.

Orchard prospects are looking better as blossoming unfolds. Apples and peaches are likely to be light in yield in most cases, but pears, plums and cherries will be more generous in bearing. Bush fruits and strawberries promise good yields.

The rainy and otherwise backward weather of the week has arrested the growth of vegetables, but townsfolk are still busy with spade, rake and hoe, and are hopeful of great results. Large areas of early tomatoes have been planted during the week for field culture.

Live Stock.

The market for horses has been improving. Some heavy animals have been sold during the week at from $175 to $250.

Nearly all cattle are out on pasture, but the grass is still too short for the best results. Prices for market animals range from 9c to 12 1-2 per pound, according to quality. Many calves are selling at from 7c. to 8c per pound.

The milk supply keeps well up to normal. The latest offering for cheese in Oxford County was 19c a pound, but little is being disposed of at that figure.

Hops are scarce, but have been slightly lowered in price, being bought at from $15.75 to $16.25 per cwt.

Sheep are slightly on the increase and are in good general condition. Wool is now selling at 42c a pound.

Fodders of all kinds, except hay, are very scarce, but the heavy drain has been largely lifted by most of the live stock being turned on the grass.

Labour.

The labour situation has been much eased, largely by the help of youthful laborers. Some boards of trade, clubs, etc., in towns and cities are rendering good service in arranging for help during the coming rush of hoeing, haying and harvesting.

We advertise and commend Semi-ready Clothes not because of a better profit, but because our customers get better service from good clothes like Semi-ready Tailoring.

Regretfully we state that the percentage of profit in a Semi-ready Suit is lower than the average, but our profit averages up in the satisfied customer who comes back again and yet again.

It has always been the custom for high-class makers to get bigger prices and profits—but the Semi-ready Company have secured the largest volume of high-class trade in Canada by insisting that their clothes shall be sold at the label price in the pocket—and at the lowest profit percentage of any clothes sold in Canada.

WOMEN'S STOMACH TROUBLES

The Great Woman's Medicine Often Just What Is Needed.

We are so used to thinking of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy exclusively for female ills that we are apt to overlook the fact that it is one of the best remedies for disorders of the stomach.

For stomach trouble of women it is especially adapted, as it works in complete harmony with the female organism, since it contains the extracts of the best tonic roots and herbs. It tones up the digestive system, and increases the appetite and strength. Here is what one woman writes showing what this medicine does:—

Newfield, N. Y.—"I am so pleased to say I can recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as an economical and beneficial remedy in most ailments pertaining to women. At least I found it so by only taking two bottles. I had indigestion in a bad form and I am now feeling in the best of health and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BURR WILLIAMS, R. D. No. 29, Newfield, N. Y.

Many women suffer from that "all gone feeling," and "feel so faint," while doing their work. Ten chances to one their digestive system is all out of order. A tablespoonful of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after each meal should completely remedy this condition in a few days.

Hard to Drop Meat?

All depends on what you eat as a substitute. It is a good time to study "food value." You may be eating the wrong foods, the foods that cost most and give the least nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains more real, body-building nutriment, pound for pound, than meat, eggs or potatoes and costs much less. Two of these Biscuits with milk and a little fruit make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents. Make Shredded Wheat your "meat." A satisfying breakfast on which to start the day's work. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Made in Canada.

Germans Destroy Even Fruit Trees in the Aisne District

Barbarity of the Hun Shocks U. S. Ambassador Penfield on Way Home from Austria — Catholic Churches Picked Out for Destruction.

AMBASSADOR CALLS SPOLIATION OF FRANCE "SYSTEMATIC MURDERING OF NATURE."

MUCH DISTRESS IN AUSTRIA-HUNGARY, BUT DUAL MONARCHY NOT NEAR END OF ITS RESOURCES.

NEW YORK. — Frederic Courtland Penfield, Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, who left Vienna a month ago, after the breaking of diplomatic relations between that country and the United States, arrived in New York on Wednesday night and gave a statement yesterday with regard to his personal observations in the zone of northern France evacuated by the germans. The trip, which took him to the firing line was made only two weeks ago; and Mr. Penfield characterized the behaviour of the Germans toward the population as "barbarity and fiendishness," and their destruction of fruit and shade trees as "systematic murdering of nature." With regard to conditions in the Dual Monarchy the Ambassador is unwilling to speak at present, for he has not yet reported to Washington; but he does not hold out any prospect of immediate collapse in Austria-Hungary.

"I cannot speak of conditions in Austria-Hungary," said Mr. Penfield, "before seeing Secretary of State Lansing and conferring with the President. But while it is no secret that the distress in the Dual Monarchy is very great it must not be assumed that the people are at the end of their resources. The masses know little of what is transpiring in the outer world, because the censored press tells them nothing that is detrimental to Teutonic interests.

"The people are fed daily with statements meant to prove the military and political strength of the Central Powers, while England and France are always described as in a state approaching collapse.

FEW AMERICANS IN AUSTRIA.

"Few Americans remain in Austria—fifty or sixty I should say. These include representatives of American insurance companies and commercial houses as well as a few persons dwelling in the Tyrol, whose long absence from America amounts practically to expatriation. All received the chance to come away on the embassy train. Few bona fide Americans remain in Hungary, but there are hundreds of naturalized citizens dwelling in the Magyar land. The government announced weeks ago that no American remaining in Austria-Hungary, who conducted himself properly would be troubled.

"Our journey from Vienna to Paris was made in special saloon cars attached to express trains, and throughout the journey my wife and I received every official courtesy that could possibly be shown us. At the Swiss frontier we were met by a military delegation representing the Swiss government who escorted us to Geneva. It seemed strange to find ourselves in a neutral country where every second man was not in uniform. The most interesting thing I was told in Geneva was that the cost of the Swiss mobilization forced upon a people not engaged in war, was 250 francs per capita. This means a cost of a billion francs for a war in which Switzerland is not a participant.

"In France my wife and I were almost made the guests of the nation, so great was the satisfaction over the United States entering the war. I saw the United States acclaimed in Paris, and at the Hotel de Ville took part in the session of the city government called to do honor to Ambassador Sharp as the representative of President Wilson and the American Government.

"That day and for a week following Paris was gay with American flags and the enthusiasm seemed to be boundless.

"By invitation of Premier Ribot I went to the French front to witness the great drive slowly but surely forcing the German invaders from French soil, and to view the area recently evacuated by the Germans. Secretary Frazier of the American Embassy and I were sent in a military automobile in charge of a high official from the Foreign Office. We had been told much of the ruthless devastation prompted by military necessity or custom; but no oral account could give more than a suggestion of what we saw that day.

GERMAN WRATH V'SITED ON CATHOLICS.

"We travelled practically all over the Department of the Aisne, and approached to within eight miles of the lines of the German Crown Prince near St. Quentin. A terrific artillery battle was in progress. Many observation balloons were above us and military fliers seemed battling as fiercely in the sky as were the artillerists from their hidden positions. It was a sight never to be forgotten.

"We visited Noyon, Peronne, Ham, Coucy, Chauny—in fact practically every town between the British front on the west and Verdun on the east. Scores of towns and villages, isolated chateaux and factories were razed to the ground. The entire Aisne Department seemed destroyed beyond repair.

"The Germans appeared to have an antipathy to Catholic churches, for battering had reduced all to shapeless masses of debris. The destruction everywhere was complete, outrageous, fiendish. During the da we saw no living thing native to the land—no cow, sheep or horse; no dog, cat or fowl.

"We visited many stately chateaux that had been destroyed beyond man's ability to repair. At one place we found the private chapel of a historic family of France whose coffins had been opened by vandals searching for plunder. Everywhere French soldiers told us that it had only been five weeks earlier when the rout of the Germans had become so urgent that they hastened through villages plundering and burning as they went—but not until all art objects and furniture of value had been despatched beyond the Rhine.

"Critics of Germany claim that one has but to visit the northern department of France to learn that the refinement of barbarism is not confined to Germany's programme on the sea, for it is expressed in the invaded zone of France in a manner causing revulsion to witness. From every village and town men and women have been driven into Germany like animals by the infuriated and beaten Teutons.

BESPEAKS AID IN REBUILDING.

"As I saw the destruction and thought of the generosity of my country people I wondered if liberal Americans would not be glad to rebuild or assist in restoring some of the ruined towns and villages of the Aisne and Champagne. There can be no form of charity half as useful at this time.

"The most ruthless and revolting thing that a visitor to the evacuated area perceives is the total destruction of all trees, fruit bearing and ornamental. Nearly every tree in the Aisne department has been felled, and for what purpose? There can be one: to cripple the restoration of northern France to usefulness. Men and money can rebuild the homes and the factories in a year or two, but to restore the orchards and other useful trees will call for half a century. What the Germans did to tree life in Northern France was the systematic murdering of Nature—nothing less.

"Our automobile broke a tire near a village that had been the site of a once splendid chateau, and when the chauffeur was making the repairs six or eight children gathered about the machine to witness the work. Two lads were better dressed than the others, and wore neat suits of cotton corduroy. I engaged the elder of these two brothers in conversation by asking where the garments came from, and he promptly replied, 'From the American Relief Clearing House Committee, which has fed and clothed us since the Boches were driven away.'

"'Have you any relatives?' I inquired. To this the boy answered: 'My poor mother lies sick in that cottage there,' pointing to a poor peasant house. 'Have you sisters?' 'Two, aged 19 and 21. Both were outraged by the Germans and carried off by the retreating army. Our poor father who tried to protect our sisters was shot dead by the Boches, who said he was disobedient, and his body lies buried there by the roadside.'

CONVINCING PROOF OF BARBARITY.

"To me this incident in an Aisne village was more convincing of the barbarity and fiendishness of the men of military Germany than all the newspaper exposures and books I had ever read. I returned that night to Paris decided in my belief that God would never permit the ferocious Kaiser William to succeed in his mad assault upon civilization. As an illustration of German Kultur Belgium may present brutal instances in excess of those of the evacuated regions in France, but not many, I am sure. The deportations have been fewer from France, but fully as cruel in character.

"In Paris I had a long conference with Mr. Lloyd George, and found that his enthusiasm over America's entry into the conflict was equal to that of the Premier of France."

PIMPLES and BOILS
ALL OVER FACE AND BODY

When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples and boils will break out all over the body, and although they are not dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Miss Sylvia Swanson, Theodore, Sask., writes: "I am letting you know what great value your B.B.B. has been to me. A year ago I started to grow pale and weak, the cause being bad blood. I got so many pimples and boils all over my face and body that I would not let strangers see me, and I used to avoid company. I tried many remedies but all seemed a failure. I read about how good your B.B.B. had been to thousands of people so I got a bottle and after I had finished the second one my pimples and boils had all disappeared. People thought it a miracle how well I looked.

"Your grand old remedy sure has been as good as gold and better, to me".

Burdock Blood bitters has been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

No Cause for a Panic in Hard Coal Outlook

Market will be Strong for at Least a Year, says Publication.

SUMMER BUYING IS ADVOCATED

Demand for Soft Grades is Unprecedented—Labour is Scarce.

"Strenuous conditions still continue in the coal trade. The unprecedented demand is greater than the supply and outlook is for a strong market for at least a year to come."

So says the Retail Coalman in its June issue which says that there is a hopeful sign "that the government agencies will be able to prevent a runaway market and by stimulating production, facilitating transportation and equalizing distribution relieve the situation sufficiently to head off any actual suffering from lack of fuel.

"The greatest handicap in the anthracite fields is the shortage of labour, owing to decrease in immigration since the European war began. This added to the depth of the mines, accounts for the fact that the anthracite production is at the maximum figures and cannot be greatly increased. In the present emergency some progress is being made by lessening the many holidays taken by the miners and doing away with the numerous strikes which close down the mines and interfere with production.

"The operators are working in close co-operation with the Government and everyone may well feel gratified that an earnest effort is being made to do everything that is humanly possible to increase the production of coal.

Increased Production.

"The April figures show an increase of a million tons of anthracite over the corresponding month of a year ago and while it is impossible to keep up this percentage throughout the year, it will all be a great help in relieving the situation next fall and winter.

"Retailers have had so many orders placed with them that in comparison they feel that they are unable to get any supply at all, but the figures show that a considerable tonnage is being moved and if this distribution can be kept up steadily throughout the summer months there will be a sufficient amount stored in the consumers' bins to materially reduce the normal demand in the fall and winter months and enable the companies to take care of their entire trade.

"The Federal Trade Commission made a report last month, in which they caution the public against a panicky condition and express confidence that the needs of the country will be taken care of in due season.

"The larger producers of anthracite are doing their best to hold down the price, and while there are some jobbers in different sections who are asking a premium the large majority of the tonnage is being moved at circular price.

Holding Down Price.

"Without lessening the credit due to those producers who are encouraging this policy, it must be admitted that the hand of the Government in the background is having a wholesome effect. The Federal Trade Commission plainly states that effective steps will be taken if necessary to hold down the price of anthracite, and publicity will be given to any operator, wholesaler or retailer who tries to make an unreasonable profit on his coal. The larger companies and individual operators are already being obliged to report all sales with the details of price, and distribution to Washington, and it is to be hoped that this will be sufficient to keep anthracite out of the hands of speculators.

"An additional help to retailers and consumers is the higher prices prevailing for the steam sizes. This makes it easier for the companies to produce domestic sizes and saves them from having to make enough profit on their domestic orders to offset the usual loss on the smaller sizes.

Although there is little cause for a panic, there is no question but that every effort should be made to move as much as possible to the bins of consumers during the summer months."

Demand for Soft Coal.

Regarding the soft coal situation the publication says:

"The demand for all grades of bituminous coal continues at an unprecedented rate. Manufacturing in practically every line is at a maximum and the need for coal to keep all these plants running at full time is so urgent that prices for spot delivery are almost what the seller wishes to ask.

"Prices are getting so far out of reason that many expressions are heard of the Government's being called upon to fix a maximum price and many coalmen themselves think that this would be a relief.

"Arbitrary fixing of prices might relieve an emergency, but the law of supply and demand always has been and always will be the strongest influence in adjusting the price of any commodity. In this connection, it is well to remember that a difference of only ten per cent is sufficient to bring an abnormally strong market back to normal.

Nerves Weak Had Hysterics

Orillia Lady Tells of Her Pitiable Condition when the Nerves Gave Way and She Became Sleepless, Irritable and Excited.

ORILLIA, Ont., May 30.—There is an abundance of proof found right here in Orillia that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is unrivalled as a means of forming new, rich blood and building up the exhausted nervous system

At this season almost everybody feels the need of restorative, tonic treatment to keep up vitality and ward off the tired, languid feelings. This letter will give you some idea of the splendid results to be obtained by using this great food cure:

Mrs. Percy Moulding, 28 West street, Orillia, Ont., writes:

"Some years ago my nerves got the better of me. I became so bad that on one occasion, during a thunderstorm, I had a severe attack of hysterics. Then I became anxious about my condition. It was sleeplessness and nervous debility that were my trouble. Some nights it would be 1 o'clock before I could get to sleep. Knowing the good results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I commenced a treatment. I took about seven boxes, gradually I could feel my nerves becoming steady and my appetite returning. I could sleep well, and stay alone without any difficulty. Some little time ago I commenced losing in weight, and I began using the Nerve Food again as a tonic. I used only two boxes, and recovered the weight I had lost. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and when I see anyone looking ill or nervous I say, 'Get busy and use some Nerve Food.'"

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Fought Duel on Field Before Armies

FORMER FRIENDS SETTLE A QUARREL IN MIDST OF REAL WARFARE.

A remarkable story was told in the Paris Figaro, which was taken up by French newspapers and magazines. Capt. Henrici, of the French army, was attache to the French embassy at Berlin, and on his stay there became acquainted with Capt. von Roeder, of the Prussian Guards. In the course of time they became close friends. In fact, when not on duty or otherwise occupied they were always found together and were called by other officers "the inseparables."

The close friendship had lasted a year, when war clouds appeared on the horizon, which both deplored, for it meant parting of the ways. The French Embassy staff was recalled, and the guard officers gave all the foreign military attaches a farewell dinner, at which speeches and wine played a conspicuous part. When the merriment was at its highest the French captain, excited by wine, went so far as to say that when the French army would be in Berlin, the officers of the guards should be his guest. There was an uproar among the Prussian and foreign officers at this outspoken insult, and Capt. Henrici was taken to task by his host, von Roeder, who slapped his face. The result was a duel being arranged, but as duels are not allowed while the country is in a state of war, the affair was postponed.

Both officers met at Thiepval, at a time when a battle was in progress between the French and the Prussian Guard. Here the two former friends met. Henrici had not forgotten the slap in the face, neither had von Roeder forgotten the insult. French line men and Prussian guardsmen stood aghast when the two officers crossed swords, and the battle became fierce between the two men who had once been friends. After a fight of ten minutes both were exhausted from the loss of blood, but neither would give in. The French officer, being the better fencer, planted his sword into the Prussian's heart. When Henrici saw his former friend fall he rushed to his side, but there was no help—he was stabbed to death.

Eighty-one Thousand American Doctors To Do Bit To Win War

NEW YORK, June 7.—Eighty-one thousand American doctors will do their bit to win the war. That is the membership of the American Medical Association, ten thousand of whose members met in annual convention here to-day; and everyone of them is pledged to answer the nation's call. Already two anonymous members of the association have saved thousands of lives to the Allied armies on the western front by their new method of sterilising wounds.

Not only will thousands of these men serve with the American armies in the field, but other thousands will engage in military-medical and surgical research work in this country.

Dr. Geo. H. Simmons, of Chicago, is chairman of the committee on medical and surgical preparedness of the council of national defence.

Dr. Simmons, it was announced to-day, is co-operating with Surgeon-Gen. Rupert Blue, of the army, who also is president of the American Medical Association, to subject the 81,000 members to a selective draft to get the best men the nation possesses for army surgeons.

The task of classifying and listing these men is proceeding now. The association began its preparedness programme in 1916, and is to-day in a position to mobolize medical and surgical specialists very quickly. The medical and surgical committee of the Council of National Defence interlocks with the National Committee of the Red Cross Medical Service.

Medical students will be urged to remain at their studies until they are fully trained. An effort will be made to enlist unmarried men, or married men with independent means, first.

The most available doctors and surgeons, the association feels, are the classes of 1914, 1915 and 1916. They probably will be called to the colours first.

NEW STERILIZING METHOD

With regard to the American discovered method of sterilising wounds, it was said to-day that the old methods discovered by Drs. Lister, Pasteur, and the original foes of infection, utterly failed on the western front.

Men with great wounds torn in their bodies fell on the over-fertilized soil of Belgium and France, in the heart of the truck gardening country, and lay for hours, sometimes days, and their wounds were infected from the soil. Exterior sterilisation was not effective.

Dr. Carroll, of the Rockefeller Institute, and an associate evolved a solution which, by a hollow rubber tube with tiny holes punched in it and inserted the full depth of the wound, kept the wound thoroughly irrigated. The nurse had orders to pour two quarts of the solution through the wound every two hours. When there were no longer signs of infection in the cultures from the wound, the tube would be removed and the wound sewed up, after which it healed automatically, without further attention.

America and the Great Alliance

(Brigadier-General S. A. E. Hickson, C.B., D.S.O.)

Finally convinced of the real danger to civilization from the vicious combination and the unprincipled methods of German and Turk, the United States resolved to join the Grand Alliance. No doubt the Russian Revolution had done much to rouse that enthusiasm with which her people are entering on a war that all feel more than ever to be for the cause of freedom, justice and honour. We see now a union of all the truly free and democratically governed nations of the earth, ranged on one side, against the only remaining governments in which autocracy and absolutism still prevail.

Both the President and Congress have been careful to discriminate between the government of Germany and the German people. The government of Germany is essentially Prussian. At the head of it stands the King of Prussia and it is the caste of his domineering Prussians that to-day more than ever govern and terrorise all the more civilised parts of Germany. For their ruling principles as openly declared are hatred and fear, not Christian love, and they carry these out amongst themselves, especially in times of internal danger, as unscrupulously as they apply them to their enemies. Thus unlike the Russians, the whole peoples of Germany are kept under a military and police subjection so severe as to crush their spirit to the utmost.

SUPERMEN AND SLAVES.

According to the philosophy of the Prussian the world is divided into two classes, the Supermen or Rulers, and the slaves or ruled. To-day mankind is asking itself what would become of liberty, what would be left to make life sweet and desirable, if such a principle gained the mastery? What chance would there be under such a form of government for mankind to benefit by the skilful brains and experience of the great men which democracy has shown itself capable of producing? What, if instead of that spirit of national unity which is the fundamental basis of constitutional government, a spirit of deliberate schism between rulers and ruled, as maintained by Prussia were to become the governing principle of the nations of the world? Have we not been shown only too plainly the unrestrained tyranny, bestiality and cruelty which a governing class, such as Prussia, has raised up, would inflict upon the nations of the earth? What if the world allowed Supermen and Overlords like these to terrorise and dominate it?

No one who has seen the extravagant and pitiful exhibitions of vanity made by the Prussian officers after their first conquests in 1864 and 1866 could be surprised at its more recent developments. They talk of culture! We have indeed heard of German music, poetry, philosophy and art, but these are not Prussian acquirements. On the contrary, Prussia has only diverted the splendid attainments of the German nations into ignominious channels. To culture of a kind the Prussian has indeed given the closest attention but it has been to the culture of deceit and of overbearing arrogance, of the worship of material success. He has made the same exhibition of himself wherever he has ruled or trodden; in China, in Africa, wherever in the world he has been he has shown himself merciless and tyrannical. Thus those who long and patiently watched him, and still more those who have suffered under him, are not surprised to-day that everywhere men of judgment declaim against this Prussian "bestial ferocity and mean spitefulness, such that only a system which repressed the good instincts common to all humanity could make it possible for men to indulge in such an orgy."

UNIVERSAL HATRED

Nor are they surprised that the effect of this Prussian practice (now become apparent to all the world) of repressing and perverting all that is best in human nature in every colony and country where he has ruled has been to make him veritably, heartily and inwardly hated with a hatred has been excited with no artificial propaganda such as the Prussian has used among his own people to incite hatred against England, but because all the world has now had full opportunity of witnessing the diabolical actions of which he can be guilty, not only the nations of Europe, but those of Asia and Africa, and now the peace-loving Americans themselves are one and all inspired with the same hatred of his methods, the same desire to see them destroyed.

The United States of America has been slower than Great Britain to recognize the full danger of this evil that is threatening the peace and freedom of mankind. Separated by a great ocean from Europe, it has been loth to believe the stories of wanton destruction and oppression which have reached it. At first it was inclined to attribute them to the exaggeration of minds prejudiced against the Germany which it knew as a land of Poetry, Music and Philosophy. Great Britain has no reason to be surprised at the difficulty which Americans have had to realise the truth. For nearly half a century she herself had looked on at the ever-increasing armaments. She even went so far as to acquiesce silently in the pretence that all this armament was merely for self-defence, and this although Germans were openly and notoriously studying and talking of world domination, and grew more bold as time proceeded.

DER TAG!

And now Prussia's Day has indeed come. But it will not be such a day as Prussia dreamed. All the world has rallied against her, and it is the Day of that Cause which is at hand, the dawn, as we hope, of a Day which will be famous in the world's history, not because the doom of Prussia was on that day sealed—for Prussia and its evil ways will we hope we buried in oblivion—but because on that Day a new Light illumined the world.

We are learning to-day a new doctrine. We are seeking visibly illustrated before our eyes the immeasurable value to all mankind of a Spirit of Unity—of the spirit which binds all mankind together by invisible ties, in the service of certain great ideals and faiths common to all; and which gives to the free souls of great multitudes of men from within — thanks to modern invention—a world wide power of union and spiritual co-operation, such as no mere mechanical organisation based on implicit obedience and worked by the hands of Emperors and Princes or Supermen can command from without. It is again the triumph of the Spiritual over the material, the old story in a new form of the triumph of God over the devil.

Old English Halfpence.

How many collectors of coins know anything about the curious halfpence issued centuries ago by English authorities—halfpence in the truest sense of the word, since they were nothing more than minted pennies cut directly in half? Specimens of these coins have been discovered frequently among the buried treasures which from time to time have been unearthed in Great Britain. In Lancashire in 1840 were found a rare lot of coins, among which were several pennies of the time of Alfred and Edward divided in this way.

Similarly divided pence of the time of Edward the Confessor have been found, and in speaking of the discovery in 1833 of a number of these curious halfpence of the time of William the Conqueror an unquestioned authority states that they were probably issued from the mints in that form, since the whole collection had evidently been in circulation.

In the British museum in London are specimens of these divided coins issued under various monarchs from Alfred to Henry III. An eminent archæologist accounts for the divided coins by saying that this doubtless arose from the scarcity of small change, which was in part remedied under the reign of Edward I. by the coinage of halfpence and farthings.

Many a man whose marriage was the result of love at first sight wishes that he had been blessed with the gift of second sight.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SAVED

But Only at the Last Moment

By WARREN MILLER

No one could understand why it was that Helen Ayer, the wife of an excellent man and the mother of a lovely boy six years old, fell under the influence of Schuyler Quigley, with nothing except swagger and cheek to recommend him. When Quigley first began to pay attention to Mrs. Ayer her husband did not appear to notice it. The truth is he saw that his wife was drifting away from him and he dared not oppose her, fearing that by his very opposition he might bring about a catastrophe. If he permitted the matter to work itself out perhaps the wife and mother would in time tire of her new fancy and realize the danger to herself, her husband and her son.

Ayer had no faith in the effectiveness of opposition in such a case. He preferred to rely on some appeal to the heart such as he was not in a position to make himself and which could only come to his wife unbidden. He hoped that some incident, some evidence thrust before her suddenly, might sweep the dust from before her eyes and she would see her position in its true light. He had perfect confidence in her purity. If Quigley succeeded in taking her away from him he must do it legitimately. She must be divorced from the one and married to the other.

With this idea in view he made no complaint to Helen, leaving her perfect freedom to do as she liked. He never objected to Quigley coming to the house, nor did he oppose Helen's going out with him. He endeavored in every possible way to show his faith in her. Had Quigley taken himself away for awhile possibly the spell that bound her to him might have been broken, or at least it might have been breakable.

But Quigley was so aggressive, so persistent, that Helen never got away from a certain dominating force there was about him long enough to recover herself. Finally Ayer decided to take action. Since they all belonged to the same set, he had frequent opportunity to meet the man who was undermining his home. Their first meeting was at the house of a mutual friend, where a number of men were accustomed to play poker. Ayer's object was to begin a series of attempts to force a quarrel upon Quigley, concealing the true cause. The better to cover his motive at the poker party he met Quigley cordially. But during the game he suddenly arose from the table, declaring that he would not play with a cheat, making it plain that Quigley was the man referred to.

Quigley, who was perfectly innocent of the charge, retorted. High words followed, and Ayer struck him. Quigley was prevented from returning the blow by the others, who protested against the men fighting under the host's roof about a matter of cheating at cards, thereby bringing a scandal upon the house and the party.

This left Quigley not only under a disgraceful charge, but as having received a blow from Ayer that he had not returned. Under the old regime of a century or more ago he would have been obliged to challenge Ayer or be cut by his friends. Living in the twentieth century, he was not obliged to do anything. He let the matter drop. He did not call at Ayer's house any more, but he met Mrs. Ayer when she went out on the street and at the houses of mutual friends. All he said to her about his troubles with her husband was that Ayer had accused him of cheating at cards and that every member of the party present had exonerated him of the charge.

And so it was that Russell Ayer by trying to get rid of the man who was really his wife's worst enemy, and at the same time protect her good name, only made himself appear to her a very unjust and ignoble person. She thought that she was taking care of her reputation by never being with Quigley, except when others were present. But she found it difficult to live with one man as his wife and have a love affair though devoid of criminality with another.

Ayer followed up his first attack on Quigley by telling a number of Quigleys' friends that he (Ayer) had struck him and Quigley had not had the manliness to resent the blow.

The situation was not pleasing to any one of the three persons involved. Quigley represented to Mrs. Ayer that he was refraining from resenting her husband's insults on her account and begged her to vindicate him by securing a divorce and marrying him. She was distressed, feeling that this was due Quigley, but dreading to take a step that would separate her from her husband and her child.

One day Ayer met Quigley on the street. Each was walking with a friend. As they passed Ayer said loud enough for Quigley and his companion to hear:

"There goes a coward I am trying to make fight."

This was too much for Quigley, who turned and said, "Well, we'll have it out now."

"Very well," replied Ayer, "draw."

Taking a revolver from his pocket, he raised it, cocking it at the same time. But since Quigley was unarmed there was no fight.

"You can't escape me with a bloody nose," said Ayer. "It's life or death between us."

And he walked on.

Quigley began to feel that he could no longer brook these insults. Some of his friends were telling him that Ayer was determined in the matter, and it might better be settled sooner than later. They advised him to challenge Ayer and have it over with. All supposed that the origin of the matter was at the card table. Indeed, few if any knew that Ayer was trying to force his enemy to withdraw his influence from Mrs. Ayer. Quigley blustered for awhile, but took no action. But finally noticing a difference in the cordiality with which his friends greeted him he gave in and sent Ayer a challenge.

Ayer accepted, naming revolvers at ten paces, every chamber to be emptied before the firing ceased.

This staggered Quigley, for it meant death probably to both of the parties. He sent a message to Ayer asking what he could do to avert the issue. Ayer replied in a sealed note telling him that he must neither speak nor write to Mrs. Ayer again. Quigley replied that Mrs. Ayer had applied for a divorce and had consented to marry him as soon as it was obtained. To this Ayer replied that on his part the affair would be dropped. But he did not do this till he had looked into the court records and found that his wife had the day before applied for a separation.

When Ayer went home that evening he found his wife gone. His little boy asked him what was the matter with mamma. She had cried and kissed him all the morning, then had gone out and hadn't come back. Wouldn't papa go and bring her back?

But day after day, week after week, month after month, passed and mamma did not return. She was residing in a city where divorce is made easy. The child was obliged to content himself with his nurse during the day, but whenever his father was not at his office he supplied so far as possible the place of the mother. Quigley still lived in the city, but there was not as much swagger in him as formerly. Somehow no one seemed to think he had come out of his affair with Ayer with credit, and his friends were dropping off.

While it was known to the Ayers' intimate friends that Helen was suing for a divorce, it was not known that she was doing so in order to marry Quigley. Divorces usually make it appear that great wrongs are committed by one or both parties. We are horrified at tales of cruelty, desertion, all kinds of inhumanities. While reading of them we would suppose that after such suffering neither party will ever again consent to wear the chains of wedlock. But once the bond is broken up pops a man or a woman hitherto unknown in the proceedings, and the decree is scarcely granted before the wedding bells are ringing.

Helen Ayer had secured her divorce, had returned, and it was supposed by her friends, except an intimate few, that she would remain—after the charges against Ayer her lawyer had drawn up for her—an unmarried woman. While this was the supposition, a marriage license was being taken out permitting Helen Ayer and Schuyler Quigley to wed. They were to be privately married at 5 o'clock in the evening and take a 7 o'clock train for their wedding trip.

During the afternoon the bride to be was seized with an irresistible desire to see her boy once more before taking the irretrievable step. She knew that her husband was usually at his office at the time and she would not meet him. Throwing caution to the winds, she called a carriage, alighted near her former home, entered and ran upstairs to find her son.

She came upon a melancholy sight. Her boy was lying on a bed, pale and wan, while his father was bending over him.

"Oh, why didn't you tell me? Why didn't you send for me?" she wailed. And without waiting for a reply she bent down, passionately encircled the child with her arms and hugged him to her breast. Then, flinging her hat and coat aside, she knelt beside the bed.

"Oh, mamma," cried the child, "how glad I am that you have come back!" Then, raising his arms, he placed them about her shoulders. "And you're never, never going away again, are you?"

And the woman for whom a bridegroom was waiting said:

"Never, so help me heaven!"

Russell Ayer was walking away when his wife seized his hand and held him. She attempted to speak to him, but not finding words turned again to the boy. Then Russell knelt beside her, and, resting his hand on her waist, the two turned the ebbing life back.

An hou. later Schuyler Quigley, as he was about to enter a carriage to take him to a church where he was to meet his bride, was startled by a message:

I cannot go. I will never see you again.

One of those singular and unaccountable infatuations under which a woman will leave home, husband and children, wrecking them and most of all herself, had come to a sudden end, as it were, on the brink of the precipice over which she was about to plunge. Her husband could manage the man who was enticing her, but he could not manage her. What neither of these men could do was accomplished by a sick child.

After the boy came out of danger Russell Ayer told his wife of his attempts to save her. He gave the reason for his accusing Quigley of cheating at cards, the blow, the subsequent insults, the forcing his enemy into an unwilling challenge. Then when he had finished by telling her that he had dropped the matter on learning of her intended separation she shuddered.

"My God! How could I have done it?"

And as soon as possible they were remarried quietly.

Fealty of Partners.

A member of the New York supreme court, reproving a New York firm of architects for canceling an agreement, says, "Authorities unanimously agree that there is scarcely any relation in life which calls for more absolute good faith than the relation of partners." Also, "A purer and more elevated morality is demanded of partners than the common morality of the trade." The meaning is that an individual who transacts business for himself may look out solely for himself, while a partner must never consider his own advantage apart from that of his associates.—Exchange.

TORTURE IN TRIALS.

This Barbarous System Was Used In Europe For Centuries.

The use of torture in order to elicit information from persons accused of crime, barbarous as it is, was little practiced before mediæval times. Under Greek and Roman law torture was only allowed upon slaves, though in the latter days of the empire it was employed against free citizens if they had been accused of treason to the emperor.

It seems to have become part of the law in Europe about the thirteenth century. From the fourteenth century downward torture was a part of the legal system of most European countries. The Italian municipalities used it to a very large extent. In Germany elaborate apparatus existed for its infliction in the dungeons of the feudal castles and in the town halls of the cities.

It was used in the prisons of Germany when the philanthropist Howard visited them in 1770. In France it was part of the law until abolished by the revolution, and in Scotland it was used until the reign of Queen Anne. The use of torture seems never to have been wholly sanctioned by the law of England, although it was used frequently by order of the king in the Tudor period. The royal council claimed the power of directing torture warrants against state prisoners in the tower, and under James I. and Charles I. torture was resorted to in state trials.—Chicago Herald.

Why Women Are Afraid of Mice.

In all ages women were supposed to be more prone to superstition than men, and who knows but that the dread of a woman on the appearance of a rat or a mouse may not be due, in part at least, to an ancient superstition which has traveled down the ages from the time when our remote forefathers believed that rats and mice were the souls of the departed? Numerous are the stories which made the ancients believe that souls were rats and mice, and some of these stories are very curious.

"In Thuringia, at Saalfeld," says Baring-Gould, "a servant girl fell asleep while her companions were shelling nuts. They observed a little red mouse creep from her mouth and run out of the window. One of the fellows present shook the sleeper, but could not wake her, so he moved her to another place. Presently the mouse ran back to the former place and dashed about seeking the girl. Not finding her, it vanished. At the same moment the girl died."

A VILE SOUL.

Latest news regarding Dr. Beland, M.P., imprisoned in Germany, is given to the London Canadian Gazette, by a Mr. C. E. Mellor, who before the war was engaged in horse-breeding in Germany, and was ultimately confined in the Stadtvogti, a prison in Berlin. There he met Dr. Beland and became very friendly with him. To a representative of the Canadian Gazette, Mr. Mellor related how last December, Dr. Beland lost his wife, and how, though the prison commandant was willing to let him go to see his dying wife, the Ober Kommandatur in Berlin refused permission. Dr. Beland is suffering in his health from his long confinement, and naturally his terrible grief has been like a final blow to him. Mr. Mellor says that the on' exercise Dr. Beland is allowed is in a corridor and in a square ten feet by ten feet, and that he gets no fresh air. The food in the prison is abominabe and Dr. Beland lives on the parcels sent to him through the agency of Sir Geo. Perley. Every effort has been made to obtain Dr. Beland's release, but the Germans refuse all applications. Mr. Mellor describes Dr. Beland's health as very poor, and he fears that another summer in the prison, when the lack of fresh air is felt much more than in the winter, will be fatal.

Here you have an illustration of Teuton humanity. A man who is past the military age, who was not a soldier in arms, whose occupation is to save, not to destroy life, who is in poor health, is held a prisoner, and is held a prisoner under inhuman conditions. The only adequate explanation is spite. In a thousand ways in this war the same story is shouted by the fact of Teuton doings—namely, that the Prussian soul is vile.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN CAMPS IN ENGLAND BUSY IN LEARNING WAR

Witley and Bramshot Exclusively for Men of Maple Leaf

WITLEY England. — Canada's part in the war is not nearly played. Fifty thousand brothers of the Canadians "who saved the day at Ypres," are here getting ready to carry on the share of the burden the Dominion has shouldered.

Spread out over the rolling hills of Surrey are the two greatest Canadian camps in all England. Here, in what was once a wilderness of pine, and spruce and ivy, Canadian officers are drilling Canadian men to take their places in the big offensive already under way on the West Front. Witley, the largest of the camps, and Bramshot, where the raw recruits fresh from Saskatchewan or Nova Scotia are drilled, are exclusively Canadian organizations. The few units of Americans have moved off to the front. Imperial officers are here only on visits.

The result is that the spirit of Canada and a new-found efficiency which the commanders declare is making the overseas forces the finest trained men in the world, permeate the camps. The men are fighting for England, but when they speak of "Home" they mean Canada. Canadian officers in charge of these camps have begun a new system of preparing the men from overseas for actual warfare in France. Conditions paralleling as closely as possible those at the front, either exist or are manufactured at Witley.

The pines of Gibbet Mountain, overlooking the picturesque "Devil's Punchbowl," see just as strange sights these days as when hanged men kicked in the wind in Cromwell's day. Topping a ridge that winds for miles through the thickly wooded or green-meadowed country, a trench, with the yellow clay soil thrown up on either side, standing out vividly against the landscape, zig-zags its way. Paralleling this trench, and separated from it by a few hundred feet of waving grass and here and there clusters of barbed wire is another—the "Boche's."

For a moment every thing is quiet, save for the occasional harsh cawing of a flock of crows. Then the silence is broken by a crash of musketry and the rattle of the deadly machine guns —a weird yell, rising from the depths of the trench, is followed by the appearance of ghostly figures in gasmasks. Charging across the open space of No-Man's-Land into a storm of drifting smoke from smudges representing poison gas, they rout the "enemy" from his trench, and go about consolidating the position—just as they will have to do in France tomorrow.

There is no child's play about the battle. Bitter hand to hand encounters with spring bayonets, harmless but painful, are fought in the communicating trenches. The "wounded" are carried back to the British "lines" on stretchers, while the raiders work like madmen, blocking the communicating trenches and getting their Lewis guns into position.

This is a new phase in the training—this sham-warfare under typical conditions. And Canadians back from the front declare that already it is showing good results.

Another thing the Canadians in the Surrey camps are trying for the first time is a new system of bayonet fighting in the trenches. The old and the French system was to feint with the bayonet, draw the Hun off his guard and then lunge overhanded at his chest. To-day, the Canadians lunge straight from the hip, dropping the butt of the rifle, and bringing up the point of the bayonet sharply if they miss.

"Go right out after him," is the new command to a Tommy learning this phase of the fighting and it appeals to the Canadians more than any other form of battle. "Go right out after him" is a sort of watchword around Bramshot and Witley anyway—it's symbolic of the Canadian spirit.

These Canadians to-day are different from the first overseas contingent. And those that came with the first call have changed too. In 1914 and 1915 the complaint among the British officers was that while the Canadians "fought like the devil," they were not well disciplined and were apt to run wild. To-day the same old dash and fearlessness is there, but the Canadians are doing something even more useful for the Allied cause. They are making records daily as the best disciplined, best-trained units of the British army.

Canada and Britain and the Allies can thank Bramshot and Witley for this new-found efficiency which has added to the most fearless fighters they possessed the quality of discipline. A new system of intensive training recently instituted, is making the Canadians the equal of any troops in the world.

There's a secret about this system —they got it from the Boche.

A Quaker had gotten himself into trouble with the authorities and the sheriff called to escort him to the lockup, relates Harper's. "Is your husband in?" he inquired of the good wife who came to the door. "My husband will see thee," she replied. "Come in." The sheriff entered, was bidden to make himself at home, and was hospitably entertained for half an hour, but no husband appeared. At last the sheriff grew impatient. "Look here," said he. "I thought you said your husband would see me." "He has seen thee," was the calm reply, "but he did not like thy looks and has gone another way."

Give your tongue more holidays than you give your brains.

N. Z. Government Broke Up Strike Over Conscription

SYDNEY, April 27. — During the early part of April last, a strike of considerable dimensions broke out in New Zealand, affecting the greater part of that Dominion's coal supply. The men struck over the Conscription law, demanding its repeal. This the Government refused to do, and in turn instituted most rigorous laws that had the effect of breaking the strike. While the strike lasted serious reductions were made in the railway and tramway services and the use of coal was curtailed in all directions. The new regulation issued by the Government make concerted action on the part of strikers to interfere with the conduct of industries like shipping, and the handling of essential foodstuffs, a matter of sedition punishable by £500 or 12 months imprisonment. Some 40 leaders of the strike were arrested and charged with instigating a strike. The case is proceeding at the present time.

The hearing of the case disclosed some serious and sensational matters. Had the men been able to achieve their own ends and resume work only on their own terms it would have been well nigh impossible to ordinary users. The greatest injury however was the thrust at national efficiency. The "go slow" policy was in full working order with the men, and sabotage was discovered on one mine at least.

At this mine (Huntly) trucks were frequently derailed by means of packages of coal in brattice cloth being placed on the rails, and on one occasion a man who had demanded a secret ballot of the miners before striking and had generally resisted the extreme measures found, after going to pull out the stop and let some trucks be lowered down, that somebody had released the rope. If he had not found it out in time he would probably have been cut to pieces, as the trucks would have dashed down the incline over him. Of course, he could not say who it was, but on expostulating with the other men about the affair he was told that if he was not careful he would be thrown into a sump. Trucks were let loose on other occasions, destroying brattice screens. Correspondence seized belonging to the miners' lodges disclosed the whole thing and what it was done for.

It was clear that there has been discontent smouldering for some time. Even during the Australian great coal strike in November last year, which the miners won in every respect, the New Zealand miners were ready to go out but were restrained from doing so. The members of the New Zealand wharf-labourers were also a party to the dispute, and at the last moment were prepared to take concerted action. It is plain now that the miners strike and the proposed action by the waterside workers were not confined to opposition to the Conscription Law solely but that the men were going to ask for huge increases—27 1-2 per cent. all round. To this was to be added other considerations which would have had the effect of raising the price of coal to something like 43 per cent. above the present price.

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

RECIPROCITY IN CONSCRIPTS.

Boston Transcript: There is as yet no conscription in Canada, but if conscription becomes law there, an arrangement would surely seem to be in order between the Government of the United States and that of Great Britain or the Dominion of Canada to bring British subjects domiciled in this country under the operation of the draft, in one country or the other. It is not likely that, in the long run, it will be possible for any man subject to the conscription to escape it by moving across the border. And if he wants to serve, he need not await the conscription.

The German Is Wolf Man By Descent

INTERESTING DISCOVERIES BY A NOTED BRITISH ETHNOLOGIST.

Hardened though they are to shock upon shock of Hun barbarity, many people scarcely credited—until proof came from a German newspaper —the terrible German "corpse factory," declares the London Daily Mail.

"The Germans," they reflected, "are a European race. They belong to our common Aryan stock. They are decadent, brutalized; they have committed atrocities that have only been previously perpetrated by the savage races in the dark ages of the world history. But here is horror that savages have never done, horror wreaked not upon the 'Huns' enemies, but upon their own people; horror that surpasses cannibalism in its revolting details; horror that has sickened the souls of all humanity." The "corpse factory," they thought, must surely be some super-nightmare of war's crop of rumours. It was impossible.

And so it would be impossible if the Germans were a European people or indeed a people of any of the ancient civilised races of the world. But they are none of these. They are not European, not Aryan. They are a race alone and apart, interlopers and squatters in Europe. They are the "Wolf Tribe."

Lieutenant-Colonel L. A. Waddell, C. B., traveller, explorer, archaeologist, ethnologist, philologist and author of many learned books, has devoted a large part of his busy lifetime—and his entire time during the last ten years—to a research into the origin of our Aryan ancestors and their civilisation. He has made discoveries which revolutionise the established views held by historians and anthropologists (views, be it remarked, mainly self-interestedly foisted upon us by German professors) and is shortly publishing those discoveries in an important volume.

Only his book can set forth the full argument of Colonel Waddell's laborious researches, but, in the meantime, he has given to an interviewer these interesting proofs of the non-European, non-Aryan ancestry of the German "Wolf Tribe," explanations of the existence of a wild beast race in Europe that can conduct "corpse factories."

Colonel Waddell's facts will be refreshing to British people who have always resented the insolent, nauseous claim of the most uncouth people in Europe to "cousinship" with us.

The Teutons, says Colonel Waddell, are not racially Aryans at all. Huxley wrote: "The characteristic modes of speech termed 'Aryan' were developed among the blond long-heads alone." This definition totally excludes the Germans and Prussians, who are all roundheads or short-heads.

Their head formation inexorably affiliates the Germans to the "Alpine Race," which is essentially Turanian, from Central Asia, and of the same stock as the Huns and Turks. The Germans are relatively late-comers to Europe who have adopted the Aryan language from their civilised Aryan neighbors, and together with it a veneer of their civilisation. Their uncouth form of spelling, and their long, agglutinating compound words suggest that alien origin.

Colonel Waddell has found new and positive evidence connecting these Teutonic Turanians, with the prehistoric "Wolf Tribe." Vestiges of early worship of the wolf are widely found in the earlies historic and prehistoric remains and customs in Ancient Egypt, Asia and Europe. The only modern nation which has clung to the primitive tribal badges of the cult of this ravenous beast are the Germans. Colonel Waddell has now discovered that the name "German," or "Alle-man," means "Wolf-man." "Ger," "Geri," or "arm," was the chief wolf which attended upon Wodan or Odin, the "All-Father" of the Germans, and it associates the Germans with the Turanians Sarmatians, who disposed of their dead by throwing the corpses to the dogs.

Attila, the Hun, was of the "Wolf Tribe." Tacitus said that the name "Ger-man" was invented by the Germans "to inspire terror" ("frightfulness"). The Hymn of Hate has an old foundation, for even the very name of Wodan is derived from a word meaning "hate." "Hun," again is derived from Hunds ("hound"), the modern name for a wolf in Indo-Persia.

"Frits," that popular Hun name, has, says Colonel Waddell, an almost uncanny appropriateness. It also means "Wolf," and indeed the word "Frightfulness" comes from the same root. "Wolf," pure and simple, is moreover, one of the commonest German surnames.

It is impossible within a newspaper column to enter upon Colonel Waddell's cogent derivations of these damning stigmata upon Hun heredity. He proves that even "Valhalla," the Heaven of the Teutons, was only a "Wolf's Heaven," exclusively reserved for those who died shedding blood and award in hand. All peaceful and therefore evil, Germans went to eternal torture in "The Abode of Anguish," in the realm of the she-wolf Hela (Hell). The famous banquet of German heroes in Valhalla was evidently human corpses, pointing to cannibalism of the heroes while on earth. A dying mediæval Teutonic King thus sings of the feast:

We are cut to pieces with swords,
but this fills me with joy
When I think of the feast that is preparing for me in Odin's palace;
Quickly seated there we shall drink out of the skulls of our enemies.

The food of this "Heaven" is suggestively provided by the two foraging carrion wolves of Odin:

Geri and Fredi feedeth the warfaring
Famed Father of Hosts.

And even the "All-Father" himself, who has lived by the sword, is eventually fated to perish by the fangs of the all-devouring wolf.

And, finally, even the German eagle is not an eagle. He is a carrion, corpse-feeding raven or vulture. The "Lord God Wodan" was accompanied by two ravens which, together with his two wolves "follow the fight and pounce upon the fallen." There is no mention whatever of eagles. They are an invention of modern German arrogance. The double-headed "German eagle" is merely the conjoined pair of corpse-feeding ravens of Odin and an examination of this hideous bird as pictured by the Germans themselves, shows that it is not a falcon or eagle but a bedraggled pair of foul carrion ravens.

It is significant, says Colnoel Waddell, that such a wide array of wolfish titles and badges should have been so zealously treasured by the Germans through the ages for their tribes and ethics. The Hun love for inhuman atrocities has been fostered by this savage "wolf cult." The "Gospel of Hate," the chosen policy of "frightfulness," the wanton destruction of human life and property, the massacres of helpless women and children, the recourse to vitrolic gases and liquid fire, the fiendish inoculation of captives with disease germs, the training of dogs to bite defenceless prisoners, and lastly the terrible "corpse factories," are all obviously part of this tribal cult of the wolf, and the carrion raven. "German Kultur" is betrayed by its own evidence and professors, to be literally "The Cult of the Wolf."

Mary (writing a letter)— Which shall I say, "Mrs. Brown called last evening," or "Mrs. Brown called last night?"

Father (looking up from his paper)—Either expression will do; they mean the same thing.

Mary—If that is the case, why do we say "Good evening" when a visitor calls and "Good night" when he goes?

Father—From force of habit, I suppose. Evening and night are synonymous terms.

Mary—Well, they may be synonymous, but when my name appears in society columns I guess you would rather have the report say that I appeared clad in a tasteful evening gown instead of saying I was clad in a tasteful nightgown.—Chicago Journal.

THE HUGE BRITISH DRIVE IS STILL PROGRESSING

Cavalry Help Greatly In The New Offensive

From 8,000 to 10,000 Huns Bagged in New Advance

"Position We Captured Yesterday Was One of the Enemy's Most Important Strongholds on the Western Front" Field Marshal Haig Reports ---Many Guns Were Captured and Many More Destroyed by the British Bombardment--Cavalry Is Now Being Used Announces a Despatch From the Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 8.—Six thousand German prisoners are so far counted in the score to date in the new British offensive in Belgium. So complete is the success with which the drive was still progressing to-day that cavalry are in action. Nothing could be cited as indicating in a more remarkable degree the complete breaking of the tremendously strong German lines than this calling into the offensive of those quick moving forces only available in open fighting.

Great torn fields, huge furrows plowed as if by some brobdingnagian farmer, tons of loam turned and churned into blackened dust, this was the scene across the Belgian fields to-day, where yesterday the British turned loose every man-contrived engine of destruction to sweep forward in victory.

No estimate of the number of guns captured is yet available, although it is known several German batteries were taken practically intact. The night passed quietly on the front of the new attack, all the conquered territory being held. Prisoners say that scores of German guns were destroyed during the British bombardment. The German losses in their counter attacks were terrible. The full depth of the British attack was 5,000 yards. Three counter attacks by the Germans, which were not delivered in great force, were broken up last night. The British to-day are advancing on a fifteen-mile front.

General Haig's troops now hold ridges and highlands, and the Germans are in low-lying territory, which it would seem impossible for them to hold very long.

LONDON, June 8.—The position we captured yesterday was one of the enemy's most important strongholds on the Western front, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. He did not add any new details of the fighting.

"Excellent work was done by our tanks and every other means of offence at our disposal," Haig continued.

LONDON, June 8.—Although General Haig's front despatches on the British advance in Belgium to-day do not enter into details, it is plainly intimated in the German official statement from Berlin to-day that the Germans have found it necessary to withdraw from their supposedly impregnable line in that part of Belgium to a new line, which is spoken of as the "nerve" line. Additional prisoners are arriving behind the British line to-day, and it is stated that there will be from eight to ten thousand in the hands of the British from this, the third battle of Ypres, before nightfall. Various estimates are made of the guns in the British hands. Some say at least one hundred field guns, in good order, were captured and as many more destroyed by the British bombardment. The successes of yesterday and to-day make the German position very critical. The river Lys and the Comines Canal meet at Comines. If the Germans succeed in crossing these waterways, they will have to undertake the operation until shell fire, and must necessarily lose heavily as the British guns will have points of advantage on the ridges.

PARIS, June 8.—Germany has apparently started a counter offensive along a great section of the French front. To-day's official report detailed a violent bombardment around St. Quentin and Lafere, preliminary to an attack, which the French killed at its inception. More violent artillery fire centred on French positions north of Moulin Laffaux and south to Filain, as well as in the Cerny sector, and there were enemy attacks at various points. All the attacks failed. South-east of St. Quentin a violent enemy bombardment on the line from St. Quentin to Lafere was encountered by our artillery, which stopped a prepared attack. "We penetrated the enemy's lines toward Sousin Hill, in the region east of Belfort and took prisoners."

PETROGRAD, June 8.—Complete autonomy has been proclaimed by the Pereyaslav district, according to word received here to-day. Inhabitants there have refused to furnish supplies, even for troops at the front, and have sent their own representatives to meet with troops. Pereyaslav is a city in Southern Russia, 150 miles west of Poltava. Its population is about 15,000.

LONDON, June 8.—Relations between Germany and Hayti have been formally broken off, according to a Central News despatch from Amsterdam.

PETROGRAD, June 8.—Russia is hanging in the balance between Czarism and mobism. The Allies must face the fact squarely that under the present condition Russia can not fight. No man strong enough to control has yet grasped the Russian helm. Minister of War Kerensky, on whom hope has centred is, despite ill-health, working day and night.

A meeting of bankers and business men to-day crystallized the first reaction against mob rule. Five hundred conservative men unallied with the autocratic regime were there. The meeting was held in the offices of a bank. Several of those there were titled. The sense of the meeting was voiced by a speaker in the declaration, "We were formerly mastered by Czarism; now it is mobism that masters us."

LONDON, June 8.—Three enemy aeroplanes were downed by the British Admiralty seaplanes around Dixmude, an official statement said to-day. The British flyers attacked two north-east of Dixmude and downed both out of control. A single British pilot sent a third whirling down in the north-eastern part of the city itself.

GENERAL PERSHING ARRIVES IN ENGLAND

A BRITISH PORT, June 8.—Major-General John J. Pershing, Commander of the First American Expeditionary Force to France, arrived in England to-day, accompanied by his staff. The American Army Chief and his staff were given a tremendous ovation on their arrival. "We are very glad to be the standard bearers of our country in this great war for civilization," General Pershing asserted. "To land on British soil and receive such a welcome is very significant, and very deeply appreciated."

NO REGISTRATION WHEN CONSCRIPTION IS INTRODUCED

Every Male Citizen Between Twenty and Forty-five Will Be Considered as Member of Army—Will Be Called Out in Classes

MOBOLIZE QUICKLY

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, June 8.—The Gazette, Conservative, and generally well informed on political matters, says this morning: 'There will be no registration under the Canadian Conscription Act. When the bill becomes law every male citizen between twenty and forty-five years of age will be a member of the Canadian army. These men are divided into classes, and as troops are needed, the classes will be called in the order designated.

The first class includes single men between twenty and thirty years. Any one that does not answer the call to the colours will be treated as a deserter. To judge applications for exemption a court of two will be created for each county, one member of which will be named by the county or district Judge, and the other by Ottawa authorities or by somebody delegated to such authority by the government. There will be an appeal from this tribunal, but such appeal will be considerably restricted. The measure will permit of immediate mobilization without the delay and expense of registration.

BOURASSA'S ADDRESS.

MONTREAL, June 8.—"We will resist conscription and we will not have conscription, not because we are cowards, but because we have received from God and the King the mission of making this country a prosperous land and not one of exile and misery, and such would be the fate of our country if conscription was established." This was the concluding sentence by Henri Bourassa, after a midnight meeting at Moument National to oppose conscription, and attended by five thousand people. At Bourassa's suggestion, the meeting broke up with the singing of "God Save the King" and "O Canada."

LANCE-CORP. IRWIN OF THE 2nd PIONEERS IS REPORTED WOUNDED

Only Local Casualty Recorded To-day---Letters From Peterborough Boys Overseas---War Veterans to Run Moonlight Excursion---To-day's General Military News.

Mrs. John Meharry, Victoria Avenue has received official news that her brother, Lance Corp. Norman Irwin, of the 2nd Canadian Pioneers is reported wounded and in hospital, suffering from a wound in the knee. Corp. Irwin enlisted from Haileybury, joining the 2nd Pioneer at Guelph and going overseas with that unit.

At a meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association last night it was decided to hold a moonlight, under the club's auspices early in July. Arrangements are being made for the excursion which promises to be one of the most enjoyable of the season.

Mrs. David Hartley has received the following letter from her son, Pte. S. C. Hartley, formerly of the 93rd Battalion and now with the 2nd Canadian Railway Troops.

France, May 18th, 1917.

Dear Mother.—Having an opportunity to answer your letters, which I received yesterday, also Olive's photograph, which I value very much, as Olive was a good sister to me, and I shall never forget her. I received two letters from you yesterday and also I heard from you last week. Got your Easter cards. I also received your box. I enjoyed your cake very much, believe me. It is a treat to get a box from home.

You spoke of me changing my battalion so often. Well you know it's the same battalion, only instead of it's the 2nd. It was the 127th when it left Canada, but since it was quarters gave it a new number, and you know you can never tell the changes the army is going to make — you have to go by orders, so when writing after this put 2nd Batt., C Co'y, not B, and be sure to put C.R.T., because C.R.T. stands for Canadian Railway Troops, and there are so many different troops it is easy to get mixed up unless you make sure of the proper address. I am sorry to hear father is keeping so bad, he has worked so hard in his life, but I do hope the warm weather will make him better, and I hope you will look after your own health, as it is none too good. We have had some very hot weather lately, and the trees, what's left, and the grass is green. Things look more cheerful, but all the towns are in ruins, but France was a pretty place before the war. The Huns have certainly made a wreck of it. We have had some wounded in our battalion by shrapnel and other things, but not many deaths. We certainly have been lucky so far, for we have close escapes every day. There are some shells that light near us and they make holes as big as a house when they explode. We worked till midnight last night and it was pitch dark and raining hard, but A Co. relieved us at 12 o'clock. Each company, when we work at night, has a shift. We are off to-day and work again to-night. This morning we woke up with a shock. The Huns were sending some shells over our camp, lighting close and we had to take a walk for a while. The air fights are regular these days. I took five shots at a German aeroplane, but of course never hit it. Our planes got it before it got back to its own lines. The anti-aircraft guns hit one the other day. It started to come down, then got away again, but had to land in our lines on account of the engine. I hope this war will soon close for it is costing a lot of men. They are doing hard fighting every day now. I think it will end this fall some time—let's hope so, anyway. How is little Earl getting along. I hope he is a good boy. I suppose he is growing every day. Tell him to be a good boy. I think you would be better to stay where you are, as you are not able to look after a garden and father is not.

I suppose Peterborough is changed a lot, as you say it has. I hope to be home with you soon. I wish you would send me the Peterborough papers. Who put my picture in it? How is Harry Watson getting along? Well, mother, I must say good-bye for this time. Give all my friends my regards. Tell them to write, as I like to get lots of mail. It cheers you up. Give my love to father. I hope he will soon be better. Love to Earl and Grace. This leaves me in the best of health, hoping it will find you the same. I remain. Your loving son,

STANLEY.

GUELPH, June 7.—Anatole Quesnell, a Frenchman, was sentenced by Magistrate Watt to-day to two years in the Kingston Penitentiary for escaping from custody. He enlisted in June, 1916, with the 254th Battalion at Kingston, but deserted, and was sent to jail after being recaptured. He was later pardoned by the clemency granted to all soldiers by the Duke of Devonshire, and went back to his battalion. He deserted again and was once more recaptured. This time he was sent to the Reformatory, and after being there three weeks made his escape. He was caught at Alexandria and brought back last night.

OTTAWA, June 7.—The latest figures, based on returns from the ten units of the Military Hospital Commission command, show that on May 31 there were 6,926 men under the Commission's care, being fifty-two more than on May 22.

The latest return from the Director of Medical Services in London shows that on May 11 there were 23,019 Canadian patients in hospitals in the United Kingdom, including 673 officers, as against 21,445 on May 4.

An analysis of the return shows that on May 11 there were 3,208 in Canadian Primary hospitals, the largest individual figure being 1,021 in the Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe. In Canadian special hospitals there were 1,918, of whom 858 were in the Granville Hospital at Ramsgate. Patients in Canadian convalescent hospitals numbered 4,633, including 2,437 at Woodcote Park, Epsom. There were 67 men in the Sanatoria Fort Barracks at Hastings and Kokfugham. The total is completed by 12,198 men in "British"—that is, non-Canadian hospitals; the largest number being 4,171 in the Eastern Command.

That the United States is anxious to profit by Canada's experience in the care of disabled men is evident from the number of official investigators visiting the various units of the Hospitals Command. Mr. E. H. Scammel, Secretary of the Commission, has gone to Pittsburg, Pa., where he will to-morrow deliver an address before the Conference of Charities and Corrections on the subject, and he will also address the State Legislature of Maryland next Wednesday.

OTTAWA, June 7.—A bill to incorporate the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, and another to incorporate the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, were held over in the Senate yesterday at the request of Sir James Lougheed, who said that patriotic societies with charitable and fraternal aims were becoming so numerous that the Government had decided to enact general legislation for their regulation. The bill would cover all societies concerned with war charities.

SCRAPING THE VATERLAND

Because there is no dry dock large enough in the United States to accommodate her, the Vaterland is being scraped by the listing method. Water ballast tanks on opposite side and piles of steel weights on deck force a list and permit cleaning. Divers will be sent down to scrape steel plates of the bilge.

MESSINES RIDGE IS STORMED BY BRITISH

PTE. M. E. HARGROVE

Huge Mines Exploded Under Foe's Lines and Germans Suffered Very Heavy Casualties While Over 5,000 Prisoners Were Taken Yesterday.

PLUMER'S GREAT VICTORY

LONDON, June 7. — The British troops made a second drive and carried the village of Oosttaverne and the German positions east of the village over an extent of five miles, it is officially announced to-night.

The German casualties were very heavy, and the British took more than 5,000 prisoners, many guns, trench mortars and machine guns.

First Drive on Nine-Mile Front.

The text of the statement reads, "Our operations south of Ypres have been continued methodically throughout the day, and have been attended by complete success.

"The Messines-Wytschaete ridge, which for over two and a half years has dominated our positions in the Ypres salient, was stormed by our troops this morning. In the attack we captured the villages of Messines and Wytschaete, and the enemy's defence systems, including many strongly organized woods and defended localities on a front of over nine miles, from south of La Douvebrook to north of Montsorrell.

Second Push Five Miles Wide.

"Later in the day our troops again moved forward in accordance with the planned operation, and carried the village of Oosttaverne and the enemy's rearward defence system east of the village on a front of over five miles.

"In the course of this advance an attempted counter-attack against the southern portion of our new positions was completely broken by our artillery fire.

"The enemy's casualties in to-day's fighting were heavy. In addition to his other losses, up to 4.30 in the afternoon, over 5,000 German prisoners passed through the collecting stations. Others are still to be brought in. We also captured a number of guns, many trench mortars and machine guns, which have not yet been counted.

Eighteen German Planes Winged.

"There was again great activity in the air yesterday, with many fights. Five hostile formations, one consisting of over 30 machines, were attacked and dispersed with heavy casualties. In the course of the fighting nine German airplanes were brought down. At least nine others were driven down out of control. Six of our airplanes are missing."

Foe Admits a Reverse.

BERLIN, June 7.—"In the Wytschaete salient the enemy has broken into our foremost position zone," says the German official communication, issued this evening.

"The fluctuating battle still continues violently," the communication adds.

"Eight British airplanes were shot down in aerial battles, one of them by Lieut. Voss, who thereby won his thirty-fourth aerial victory."

London, June 8.—The Times this morning publishes the following from Perry Robinson, at British Headquarters in France, June 7: It was difficult to believe that any bombardment could surpass in power and spectacular effect those which ushered in the battles on the Somme a year ago, and at Arras in April, but unquestionably this morning's bombardment did it. And then came the mine explosions, which just preceded the attack. They transcended the bombardment.

APPOINTMENT AT OTTAWA FRIDAY 4. NEXT RE CANAL

Capt. Burnham Notified Mayor This Morning That Minister of Railways and Canals Would Receive Deputation

LETTERS SENT OUT TO-DAY

Mayor Duffus this morning received a telegram from Capt. Burnham, stating that he had made an appointment with Hon. Frank Cochrane for Friday, June 15th at 10 a.m. Steps were immediately taken to communicate with the municipalities of the Trent District, urging their co-operation by appointing representatives to the delegation which will wait on the Minister to make another appeal for the early opening of the Trent Canal by the removal of the G.T.R. bridge obstruction at Campbellford. It is hoped that the delegation will be a numerous one for it is recognized that the opening of communication with Trenton will prove beneficial to this entire district, and not to Peterborough alone.

The Board of Trade will be asked to send representatives, and a preliminary meeting of the deputation will be held in Ottawa at 8.15 p.m.

THE COAL SITUATION.

There are several points about the city's municipal coal yard enterprise that may reasonably be considered in deciding whether the city would be wise or unwise in taking advantage of the permission given by the Railway and Municipal Board to establish a municipal coal depot. It is admitted that the fuel situation is, or has been, unsatisfactory; that the prospects of a steady and dependable supply of coal for next winter are not of the best. One question arising out of this condition is whether the city, without business connections with the coal centres; ignorant — creditably, perhaps—of "the tricks of the trade;" without experience, will be able to handle the situation obtter than the regular coal dealers can do. One suspicious circumstance, bearing upon the city's ability to make the coal business a success, is the lack of objection—and even unanimous willingness—of the coal dealers to have the city take up the business. It may be that they wish to have it shown by the outcome of the city's experience that they are not to blame for the fuel difficulties of the latter portion of the past winter; that they were confroned with conditions beyond their control. As is to be expected, the coal dealers do not see much prospect of the city succeeding better than themselves. It is probable that the evidence of one dealer given before the commission expressed the feeling of the whole body of dealers—"he was dubious of the city's profitable entry into the coal business."

Anyway the city seems to be anxious to serve the interests of the citizens. The Mayor told the Commission that the city was not actuated by any competitive ambition, that the council was moved only by a desire to safeguard the interests of the citizens. It is to be hoped that the situation will so shape itself that the city will not need to use the permission to go into the coal business. Public ownership that involves too much paternalism is not desirable. The coal merchants are citizens and taxpayers like the mass of the people. They may or may not have handled the emergency coal situation well, but we can think of them as men of too much sense to compromise their standing with the city in which they have been doing business for years, and doubtless hope to do business many more years, by taking a course in regard to the coal business that they were not compelled to take by the force of uncontrollable circumstances—that, in a word, they would not kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

It does not seem that the coal dealers are making any to much money. A return made to Parliament yesterday by the "cost of living commission," says that in Toronto last winter the coal dealers' profits were only 35 cents per ton, as against 51 to 56 cents, the previous three winters. If the city fathers can supply us with coal at cost and save us 35 cents a ton they will be wise to go ahead with the municipal coal yard—if necessary.

If we are to have conscription of manhood, why not have conscription of industries and of wealth?

CONSIDER THE LADIES.

If coalition fails, and we are to have a general election. Parliament before it is dissolved, should amend the Election Act, giving express permission to women to vote in the expected Dominion elections. This claim is justified by the fact of the large part women have contributed to the success of this war, especially in the domain of Red Cross work, which in its direct relation to the comfort and lives of our sick and wounded soldiers, is the most important branch of service. The May issue of ""Canadian Red Cross Society," states that in the matter of socks alone, the Christmas stockings distributed, consisted of 20,055 pairs of socks sent to Canadian patients in British hospitals and to France. This was all the work of women whose tireless fingers wove the millions of stitches represented, and women deserve a voice in making the government that is to administer the war intersts in which they have so large a part.

Canada has done splendid work in contributing to Red Cross work. A recent statement by Sir Robert Hudson states taht the total amount raised in the Empire has been five million dollars. Of this total Canada contributed $1,705,000, and of this Ontario gave $1,500,000. In other words, Canada, with a population of seven and a half million gave more than a third of the gifts of the Empire of 435 millions, and Ontario nearly a third of the total contributions to the Red Cross Fund.

It is a fact that Canada has borne her part splendidly in the war. That is, the people of Canada, for the bulk of our effective war work has resulted from popular, spontaneous, impulse. The four hundred thousand soldiers we sent were the harvest of the voluntary spirit, the supplies we have sent were a free will offering, and the Red Cross funds were a free gift. The people did all this without the government taking a proportionate share in the work. True, the government financed and equipped our soldiers, but the government did not do much effectively to get the soldiers. Voluntary enlistment, helped by the efforts of organizations of private citizens, were the soldier-making factor. Behind all the work Canada has so splendidly done, there is the determination to help win the war, and that those who are wounded in serving us shall lack for nothing.

It is claimed for a coalition government that it will enact prohibition of strong drink as a war measure. What has prevented the Borden government from doing the same any time the last three years?

PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

The Ontario Department of Education, co-operating with the Department of Agriculture, provides for instruction in elementary agriculture and horticulture, in the Public and Separate schools. While it is eminently desirable that our schools should be made efficient by practical instruction in the matter of agriculture and horticulture, for the schools of a city like Peterborough—an industrial city where the chief interest is manufacturing, something in the way of technical education should be substituted or added. With the short period of school life of the average pupil, it is evident that the school instruction should be of a character to fit the pupil for the artizan life that lies before him. We encourage manufacturing industries for one reason, because they furnish a source of profitable employment—a real city-building element—for our people, for our men and women, for our boys and girls. Theoretical knowledge is important; but theory without practical knowledge, and facility of application, leads to nowhere. For ordinary purposes, if a pupil can't get both he should have the practice. Our schools, however, do not even give any considerable amount of theoretical knowledge having a direct, or even indirect, bearing upon technical conditions; and for Peterborough the need is for an adjustment of our school equipment that will give pupils a chance to leave the schools possessed of a reasonable amount of the knowledge that they will be required to use when they enter upon their life occupation—upon the work of earning their living and helping build up the city and country by their skilled work whose quality will depend very largely upon the school start that they have been given.

In the birthday honours recently conferred, no one can accuse Sir Thomas White of the ingratitude charged to Pharaoh's butler, of whom it is said: "Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but forgat him."—Genesis XL., 23.

BRITAIN ELATED BY SUCCESS.

Toll Exacted of Raiders Was a Terrible Price.

LONDON, June 7.— The morning newspapers to-day display with gratification the news of the toll exacted from the German air raiders, which they remark was a terrible price to pay for the raid which effected virtually nothing of military importance.

It is generally assumed that ten German machines were lost, which, some of the commentors express the belief, is almost enough to cause the Germans to cease repetitions of their airplane raids. The damage inflicted on the raiders, in connection with the reduction in sinkings of vessels by submarines and naval and airplane attacks on enemy bases in Belgium, has installed a spirit of elation in the editorials and news columns generally.

LIBERALS IN CAUCUS

No Statement Will Be Made Until After the Military Service Bill Is Brought Down

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 8.— The Liberals gathered in caucus at half past ten this morning and remained in serious conference for over two hours. After the conference was over Fred Pardee, the chief Liberal Whip ,informed the newspapermen that there would be no statement until after the military service bill had been brought down. It is possible that to-day's caucus, at which there was a free expression of opinion, may change the whole trend of the political situation at the capital and render recent predictions ridiculous. Many of the Liberals present declared the conference as satisfactory.

Earthquake In San Salvador

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 8.— An important section of the central business part of San Salvador was destroyed on the Pacific Coast, in South America and all other city property apparently made untenable, by an earthquake, fire and volcano eruption last night, according to advices from Minister Long to the State Department this afternoon. There were many casualties. This city has been destroyed by earthquake four times in sixty years.

REGULATIONS FOR 1917 CHEESE TRADE

BROCKVILLE, June 7.—The members of the Cheese Commission visited Brockville to-day, and at the local board meeting gave their views on the Imperial Government fixing the price at 21 3-4c for the summer's make. The average price last year was found to be 19 cents, and, with an increase of 2 3-4 cents, it will be found that the dairymen of Canada will realize an increase of $3,200,000. The Commissioners are J. A. Ruddick, Ottawa; James Alexander, Montreal; and W. McGowan, London, Eng.

Offerings to-day were 5,522 boxes, and sales were 4,500 at 20 7-8 cents, the first sales practically this year.

Among rules laid down for the purchase of cheese by the Commission are that there will be three grades, known as Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Any cheese unsuitable for these grades will be classed as culls and purchased according to their merits at the option of the Commissioners. No cheese will be accepted under ten days old.

White or coloured cheese or cheese of different grades or cheese known as Ontario and Quebec makes must be invoiced and shipped separately. All cheese are to be coppered to the satisfaction of the Commission and he boxes clasped with iron hooping Cheese badly boxed will be graded lower. Dealers shall be responsible for weight and quantities of their respective shipments, notwithstanding inspection in Montreal in the same manner as they would be if cheese were sold "c.i.f," London rules. All invoices and documents must truly represent the grade of cheese tendered to the Commission. Nothing more in price will be paid for coloured or white. Payment will be made in exchange for shipping documents, accompanied with invoices of graders and public weighmasters, all shipping charges being prepaid by the dealers.

NEGLECTED TO PAY DOG AND POLL TAX

Police Court Gathered in Delinquent's Money—Others May Follow.

For neglecting to pay his poll tax George McCullough added $2.60 to it this morning, for a total of $7.60, which was paid into police court. For the same negligence James Fee paid $7.20, instead of the $5 the city exacts in lieu of statute labour.

Failure to provide tags for their dogs cost W. H. Sabins $2.60 and Mrs. C. Smith $4.60.

EVIDENT ADVANTAGES OF THE SELECTIVE DRAFT METHOD

President Wilson declared the selective draft method of raising an army the only democratic, the only fair, and the only prompt and efficient method by which it could be done, and this view prevailed in the United States.

The truth of what he said is fully borne out by Canada's experiences in the past three years.

The promptness and efficiency of the selective draft method is now shown by the enrolment of over ten million names in the United States in the registration that occurred on Tuesday, June 5. Contrast the speed with which this basis for selective drafts was laid with the long months and years spent in Canada in carrying on recruiting campaigns that too often resulted in utterly disappointing totals of enlistment — so that where battalions had been planned only companies had resulted, and at an expense that was in itself a scandal and reproach to the country.

Evidence as to the unfairness of the system so far followed in Canada is to be found on every street in Toronto and in every town and village in Canada.

It is everywhere seen that of two families living side by side, one family realized its obligation to fight for the preservation of the civilization we all enjoy, while the other family did not.

From one family the only son, or two, three, or more, rose up and went away to resist barbarous conquest; from the other family none went, the only son, or the two, three or more in the family, stayed at home, leaving it to chance whether right or wrong conquered and prevailed on earth. It will be found from observation along residential streets in the city and all over the country that, as a rule, all or none of the eligible sons of a family are under arms. They all go or they all stay. This is found to be true is so many cases that it may be regarded as a sort of general rule under the voluntary plan as it has worked out in practice. The plan is unfair in its operation. As it has worked out family policy has been decisive, and each household has chosen for itself whether it was at war or not, whether it would resist or yield to Hun conquest.

If a nation is to be a nation and desires and deserves to live, it must as a nation determine such matters for all its people, and not sacrifice inadequate armies in an irresolute war needlessly prolonged.

That the voluntary system as it has been operated in Canada has been undemocratic everybody must be fully aware. In the United States on Tuesday all men within certain age limits, of every class and kind, had to register under pain of one year's imprisonment. There is universal equality in that.

In Toronto and elsewhere in Canada our voluntary plan operated in a most undemocratic way. While there are plenty of highly creditable exceptions—especially at first, when young fellows of spirit hastened to join on any terms—yet too often the sons of the rich and the well-to-do have felt that recruiting appeals did not refer to them at all. There have been plenty of fine exceptions, but there has been a tendency, we fear, toward the idea that if their King and country needed them as officers well and good, but that they could scarcely be expected to enlist as privates in the ranks. They went about feeling that the posters, the speeches, the appeals for men, did not refer to them at all. Too many officers, by thousands, have been appointed, and to make room for more, hundreds of them were organized into faculties for training schools to instruct and promote lieutenants into those higher ranks, which (after they had been promoted) the fighting army could not possibly absorb. So they were by hundreds schooled on, up, and over the war, without ever being in or through it.

No system could have been more undemocratic, unfair, or wasteful than ours has been. Yet in saying so it is but fair to add that the plan was drifted into quite naturally, and our purpose is not to carp at the Government because of it. At the outset no better plan was suggested by anybody. It was as the war grew that the faults of the system manifested themselves, and the present duty is to see, if we can, that the country benefits from the experiences of the past three years.

The selective draft method would give us a democratic army at a stroke, all the young men of the country being enrolled on equal terms and made liable for service if physically fit and not indispensably employed in essential industries. The plan is democratic because it proceeds to level up the whole people, and takes no account of wealth or social pretensions, but regards all as citizens, and exacts from all the same compliance with the necessities of the country in its time of stress.—Toronto Star.

MRS. JUSSPLICED WRITES TO MAMMA AGAIN

My Dearest Mamma:—

I am sure you will think me very negligent, but really I have been so busy I have not had time to write.

I have been taking cooking lessons and making all kinds of things.

I made some bread last week, but I forgot to put in the yeast, so I poured it over the top, but it didn't turn out very well.

I made 12 different kinds of cookies last week, and gave some of each to Algy to try; I was going to make some more this week, but the poor boy does not seem very well, and has quite lost his appetite.

I think it must be overwork, as he can't get home for dinner or supper, but has a snack at the office. And, in any case, Algy thinks its getting too hot for baking now, and things I should get things that are no trouble to cook. So Algy and I went shopping, and after looking everywhere, we could not seem to find what we wanted, so we went to my nice grocery man and told HIM. He had the very things we needed. One thing was some lovely little smoked hams, he called them picnic hams, only 15c a pound, the one we bought only cost $1.35. Then he suggested Custard Powder with dried peaches, apricots or figs for dessert. We have bought some sweet biscuits, but he had so many kinds from 10c to 35c a pound, that we had a job to choose. But I couldn't resist buying a little "Standard Flour" just to try some buns, and Mr. Oldun helped make them. They were so nice that Algy called at the store and told them to send round some more of the "Standard Flour" I must close now as I am going to help Algy plan some of the lovely Rovers we get at OUR store; neters, sheeins, hatcaims, pannies and others and only two bones for 25c. Now good-bye, write to me soon and don't forget your loving daughter,

MILLY.

P. S. I am sending you three bones of those chocolates I got from my grocer, they are only 10c an ha'f-pound. Did I give you his address? M milk. is in

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

GAVE HIS LIFE IN A BRAVE ATTEMPT TO SAVE WOUNDED OFFICER

Letters From Officers of His Battery Tell How Signaller Thomas Le Roy Chambers Met Death in France—Was Highly Esteemed By Officers and Men.

RECOMMENDED FOR MEDAL

Mrs. E. Chambers, 249 Park St., whose son, Signaller Thomas LeRoy Chambers, Canadian Field Artillery, was several weeks ago officially reported died of wounds, has received the following letters in regard to the death of her son:

May 9th.

Dear Mrs. Chambers,—I wish to offer, not only for myself, but on behalf of my officers, N.C.O.'s and men, our deepest sympathy on your sad bereavement by the loss of your gallant son, who lost his life in the fulfilment of his duty.

I cannot speak too highly of him, for he was a hard worker and one of my best signallers.

Everything was done under the circumstances to relieve him of pain during his few remaining hours, and he will be buried to-day in a quiet graveyard, details of which will be forwarded to you later—also his personal effects will be forwarded in due course.

As many as I can spare are attending your son's funeral, and the last post will be sounded by our trumpeter.

I feel that this letter is of little comfort to you for the loss of such a fine boy, who gave his life for the good of his country and civilization.

Yours faithfully,
F. A. Peacock, Major,
O.C. 31st Battery, C.F.A.

Lieut. D. G. Robertson writes to Mrs. Chambers as follows:

France, May 9, 1917.

Dear Mrs. Chambers,—By the time this reaches you, you will have been informed of the loss of your son Roy, so I am just writing a few lines in sympathy.

I have been in charge of the signallers since he was with the battery, and he was the best I had, both on the 'phone and on the lines. He was a fearless boy and a cheerful worker. Whenever I had to go to the O.P. or any liaison officer I always liked to have Roy with me, for he was a good companion, and I was always sure of my communications being intact.

He was not only admired by the signallers in this battery, but also by all the men, and on the day of our advance went with an officer of another battery who went forward, and did very fine work.

He died in a clearing station within twelve hours of being wounded, and I believe he never regained consciousness, which is a blessing, for he suffered no pain.

Signaller Thos. Le Roy Chambers

He was wounded at the guns while performing a very brave deed. An officer of another battery being wounded, Roy and another signaller took a stretcher out, and both were wounded by the next shell.

I will forward his personal kit as soon as it comes down from the guns to the authorities, who are responsible for forwarding it to you.

He has one souvenir, a Prussian Guard helmet, which I am not trusting to the mails, and am sending to England with a sergeant, who is going over shortly to take out a commission. Sergt. Kenneally is his name, and he knew you when in Peterborough.

The Orillia boys, Cole, Hickson, and Miller, all feel the loss of your son terribly, but hardly more than the officers and men of the whole battery, including the newly joined section.

He is being buried to-day some eight or nine miles from here, and Sergt. Kenneally has gone with as many men as I could arrange transportation for and a few more who are doing it on foot.

If there are any particulars which I have not given you, please write and I will do my best to find out for you.

Here again I may say you have the sympathy of the entire battery for your great loss.

Your son is buried in Barlin Cemetery, Row K, Grave No. 630.

Yours faithfully,
D. Graeme Robertson, Lieut.

An Orillia Tribute.

Signaller Chambers was employed in Orillia for some time before enlisting, and the Orillia Packet has the following to say of his death:

"The many Orillia friends of Signaller Thomas LeRoy Chambers were sorry to hear on Friday that his mother, Mrs. Chambers, Park St., Peterborough, had been notified that he had died of wounds on the 8th of May. Roy came to Orillia in May, 1912, to learn pattern making at the E. Long Manufacturing Co.'s factory and lived with Mr. Geo. Brown, Coldwater Road, who had come from Peterborough only a short time before. He made good progress at his trade, was well liked by the other men in the factory, and well thought of by his employers. He was a boy who had an influence for good, and helped his companions from going wrong. If he had lived until the 3rd of June he would have been twenty years of age. Besides his mother, he leaves two brothers and a sister, all younger than himself. Signaller Chambers enlisted on August 17, 1915, Orillia's three hundredth birthday, and trained with his battery at Niagara and Toronto. He was with the same battery at the time of his death.

"In letters received last week from Reginald Miller and Murray Cole, it was learned that Signaller Chambers had been recommended for the Military Medal for keeping the communications open on one occasion during the recent heavy fighting."

Collegiate Staff And Students Give Field Glasses To Mr. Hone

The staff and student body of the Collegiate Institute presented Mr. Arthur D. Hone, Science Master, with a pair of field glasses. To-day marked the closing of the term, and remembering the fact that Mr. Hone had enlisted with the Cobourg Heavy Battery, which he will join shortly, the school took advantage of the opportunity of showing their regard for their departing teacher and associate.

The presentation was quite informal, and was made by Mr. H. R. Hopkenner, principal, representing the staff, and Mr. Marvin Kirn, the pupils.

Early Morning Drunk Fined $10 For Souse

Charged with being drunk in a public place, a young man was fined $10 in police court this morning. At 3.40 a.m., P. C. Wegg glimpsed him going into the Snowdon House and coming out a minute or two afterwards. On both observations, he, confident the man was drunk, and approaching him confirmed his first conclusions. This man was fined $200 several months ago for having liquor in his possession, and is apparently one of the few remaining devotees of the "cup that queers." The reverse picture to that of the midnight carousal is the mother at home worried into sleeplessness. Fortunately such conditions have vastly changed in the past year, and the exceptional one or two reported now and then serve to strengthen the hope that the old days are gone never to return.

After a man reaches the age of 40 he quits trying to secure the moon and gives his entire attention to getting the earth.

MEDALS TO BE PRESENTED

The presentation of Farm Service medals to boys who will be working on farms for two months or more will take place at the Nicholls Oval Saturday evening, June 9th at 8 p.m. Sports and games will commence at 7 p.m. If the weather is not suitable for the programme at the Oval the presentation will take place at the Y.M.C.A.

VEGETARIANS EXEMPT.

They Claim It Because Opposed to Taking Animal Life.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Registration cards to-day disclosed that hundreds of vegetarians claimed draft exemptions on the ground that they are opposed to taking any animal life.

The conscientious objectors' bureau of the American Union Against Militarism is seeking to learn whether the Government will pay any attention to the claims.

MADE TO KISS THE FLAG.

Fellow-Workers Roughly Handled a Draft-Law Opponent.

RACINE, Wis., June 5.—John Robush, employed at the J. I. Case Tin Company plant, was forced to kiss the American flag by 300 of his fellow employees to-day after he is alleged to have declared that he would not register and would not fight for the United States.

The man was made to crawl on his knees to the flag, which had been spread upon the floor, and after kissing it compelled to salute. The police informed him he would be arrested if he failed to register before the close of the booths to-night.

MONS FINED $100,000.

Belgian Paper Said Prince Was There During Raid.

AMSTERDAM, via London, June 7. — The city of Mons has been fined $100,000 because a Belgian paper, published in Holland, announced that Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria was in Mons when the city was bombarded by allied airmen.

NEEDS OF BELGIANS ARE STILL PRESSING

Although Loan of $45,000,000 From the United States Government Will Solve the Food Problem, Yet There Are Many Features of Relief Work That Require Support.

Montreal June 2nd, 1917.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,— In view of the recent statement issued by Mr. Hoover, chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium which points out the impossibility of obtaining the necessary shipping tonnage to forward to Belgium the food supplies in the same quantities as in the past, and also draws attention to the fact that the United States Government have made arrangements to loan to the Belgian government the sum of $45,000,000 — payable to the Commission for Relief in Belgium in six monthly instalments—which sum will cover the cost of such food supplies as can be shipped in that time by the limited number of ships available to the Commission—the Central Executive committee of the Belgian Relief Fund in Canada finds it unnecessary for the present, to make appeal to the generously disposed people of Canada on the plea of the urgency of support in order to stave off starvation.

The needs of Belgium continue however, as pressing as in the past, and the situation may be considered as being even more pitiable as, through the forced decrease in imports, Belgium will be compelled to fall back on her last native resources already so denuded. In order to maintain that so limited ration that has been doled out in the past it will be necessary to encroach upon the country's stock of milk cattle which has been reserved to maintain a supply of fresh milk for the children.

In the hope, however, that the recent untimely developed shortage in the world's shipping—the cause of this new departure of the Relief Work—may not permanently endure; in the hope that the necessary funds may be available should any emergency or special occasion arise and in view of the fact that in any event relief in many forms will be required after the war, the committee hope that all the generous supporters of the Fund in the past and all those who have pledged themselves for future payments will continue to support the Fund and thus continue to show their sympathy with the people who gave their all for the cause of humanity.

All such donations received after the 15th of June will be disposed to the best advantage of this stricken people, according to the wish that may be expressed by any donor or according to the actual or more pressing needs of any of the already organized channels of Relief Work such as:

"Help to the Children removed from Belgian Front."
"Queen's Fund for the Wounded Soldiers."
"Home for the Belgian Soldiers."
"Relief for Belgian Prisoners in Germany."
"Anglo Belgian Committee of the Belgian Red Cross."
"Relief for Belgian Children suffering from tuberculosis and rickets."
"Belgian Orphan Fund."
"Belgian National Relief Fund for War Orphans, etc."

All donations received prior to the 15th of June will be held at the disposal of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, for the purchase in Canada of Canadian Produce, according to our previous pledges.

The Central Executive Committee will issue in the immediate future a report covering the whole of their operations up to the 15th of June.

Thanking you for publishing the above, we remain.

Yours truly,
A. DE JARDIN,
Hon. Secretary-Treasurer.

The place of meeting will be Park street Baptist church and the meetings will cover three days, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The public will be welcomed at all of the meetings. Dr. Shields will speak on Wednesday evening at 9.15. He leaves Canada on July 1st to occupy the pulpit of the Spurgeon Tabernacle, London, England, for two months.

Dairy Products Are Easier This Week

Butter and Eggs Are Lower In Price —Sugar Crop Promises to Be Heavy

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

Flour was again on the downward trend during the week, a decline of 50c per barrel having been recorded in Manitoba first patents. Ontario winter wheat flour showed a similar downward tendency for the most part, but in some instances was quoted even higher than Manitoba flour. Sugar held in steady position during the week with demand still light. Encouraging reports continue to come forward of the way production is mounting in raw sugar in Cuba. There are a larger number of sugar factories grinding than there were at the same time last year. If the rainy season holds off a while longer there is every possibility that the production of raw sugar will be fairly heavy.

Dairy Products Easier.

All dairy products were in easier tone. Production of butter is heavier under the stimulus given by plenty of grass feed to the milk producers. Production of eggs is also greater and there was a tendency to lower prices. Cheese was quoted down. During the week the purchasing commission for the British Government named the price they would pay for Canadian cheese at 21¼c per pound. Commission men take it for granted that this price will establish the basis at which the factories will sell their product. In some quarters lower prices prevailed.

Advances have been recorded in numerous soap lines, including laundry soap, washing powders and soap chips. Baking powder, soda and yeast have been altered upward. Rices are quite generally quoted at higher levels. Teas were quieter under the stimulus of recent arrivals, but the situation has not changed materially. Business in wholesale grocery lines was slower during the week than it has been for several months past.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Homburg 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

Accident Took Place About Nine O'clock Last Evening

A motor truck, belonging to A. Longo, the Hunter Street fruit dealer, backed into the store window of John Hill, grocer, at 315 George Street. The accident occurred about nine o'clock last evening. The car was in charge of Leo Longo. It appears that the car stopped in front of the George Street store, and when it was started again, ran backwards onto the sidewalk and through the store window.

CALLED THE POLICE WHEN GEORGE BROWN WAS SHOT

LATE JOHN PEARCE WAS LONG CONNECTED WITH THE GLOBE OFFICE.

TORONTO, June 8.—Mr. John Pearce, 123 Sherbourne street, a resident of Toronto for fifty years or more, died yesterday in St. Michael's Hospital from blood-poisoning after a short illness. He received the infection through a cut on his hand.

As a member of the business staff, Mr. Pearce was employed on The Globe when the Hon. George Brown was shot. It was Mr. Pearce who summoned the officer, Staff Inspector Gregory, from the street to make the arrest of the assailant.

He remained on The Globe for thirty years. For the past year or more he stood guard at the entrance to The Globe, and was well known. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Pearce, but no family. He was in his seventy-second year.

GUNTER'S DEATH STILL REMAINS UNSOLVED

Some Officials Are Disposed to Believe that Payne Committed Suicide.

LONDON, Ont., June 8.—The search for the murderer of Gunner Payne, whose body was found on the Shoebottom farm, near London, yesterday, continued to-day. Some of the county officials are inclined to believe that the tragedy might have been a case of suicide. This supposition is based upon the fact that Payne had been despondent at the Military Hospital, and upon the occasion of his last visit to his former employeer, A. B. Creighton, St. Mary's, he had given the latter his watch, predicting that he would never see him again.

BRAZIL FAST PREPARES TO ENTER THE FIGHT

RIO JANEIRO, June 7.—The government has issued a decree for the formation of a first section of coast artillery. The decree also calls for the opening of a credit of 870,000,000 reis to be expended on armament and war materials.

Under normal conditions 870,000,000 reis would be the equivalent of $26,100,000.

Gardener Nets $1,106 A Year From One Acre

One year ago a Frenchman, J. P. Brus, living near Kansas City, decided to see what he could do with one acre of land by intensive gardening in twelve months. He practised the system of gardening around Paris. His acre yielded him for the year, $1,611.35, at a total expense of $504.50, (says the Packer, a produce weekly), leaving a net profit of $1,106.85. His experiment, according to Mr. Brus was to prove that one acre near a large city can support a family. He raised onions, beets, radishes and other vegetables.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT RETURNED IN ALBERTA IN FORMER STRENGTH

11 the Cabinet Ministers Re-elected—Edmonton Gave Three Seats to Conservatives—Women Voted For First Time

EDMONTON, Alta., June 7.—The Liberal Government under the leadership of Hon. A. L. Sifton has been returned to power in Alberta as a result of the voting in to-day's election. Returns are slow in coming in, but the figures tabulated up to 9 o'clock indicated that the Liberals would have about the same proportion of seats as formerly—38 out of a total in the House of 56. All the Cabinet Ministers are believed to have been returned, although the Attorney-General, Hon. C. W. Cross, is having a close run in Edson. Only a few polls have been heard from at Beaver River, where Hon. Wilfrid Gariepy is the candidate.

Women Voting for First Time.

The election marked the inauguration of women voting at a Provincial election, and the returns indicate that a great many went to the polls. The presence of an unusually large number of Independent candidates in the field, including one woman, Mrs. McKenney, in Claresholm, added to the complications that made prophesying a bad job.

The Conservatives carried all three Edmonton seats. In addition to Liberal and Conservative candidates, there were Independent candidates, two of them. Premier Sifton has a safe majority in Vermilion.

Two Elections Deferred.

Two deferred elections are to take place, Peace River and Athabasca, where the Government candidates are to be W. Rae and Hon. A. G. MacKay, respectively. The Conservatives have not yet selected candidates, and may let the seats go by acclamation. The date for nomination has not been set.

Two representatives-at-large are to be chosen by the soldiers overseas, and one month from June 1 is allowed for the nomination of candidates for these two seats and a month more for taking the vote.

Voting took place to-day in only 39 seats, as eleven constituencies had their representatives returned by acclamation. These members are in khaki and election by acclamation was agreed to between the parties. These seats are: Lethbridge, Conservative; Hoods Hills, Liberal; Radcliffe, Liberal; Medicine Hat, Conservative; Alexandra, Conservative; Victoria, Liberal; Ribstone, Liberal; Pembina, Liberal; Whitford, Liberal; Wainwright, Conservative; Rocky Mountain, Conservative. This makes a total of six Liberals and five Conservatives elected by acclamation.

Elections Conceded.

The following are the Liberal candidates whose elections have been conceded:

Acadia, J. A. McGill, Beaver River, Hon. Wilfrid Gariepy, Bow Valley, Hon. C. R. Mitchell; Calgary North, W. M. Davidson; Camrose, George B. Smith; Cardston, Martin Woolf; Cochrane, Hon. C. W. Fisher, Coronation, H. S. Northwood; Didsbury, H. B. Aikens; Eden, Hon. C. W. Cross; Grouard, L. L. Cote; Innisfail, Dan Moraeberg; Lacombe, W. F. Puffer; Leduc, J. C. Tobin; Little Bow, James McNaughton; McLeod, George Skelding; Olds, Hon. D. Marshall; St. Albert, Lucien Boudeau; St. Paul, D. E. Lessard; Sedgwick, Hon. Charles Stewart; Sturgeon, Hon. J. R. Boyle; Taber, Hon. A. J. McLean; Vegreville, Jos. McCallum; Vermilion, Hon. A. L. Sifton; Warner, Frank Lofling-well; Wetaskiwin, H. J. Montgomery.

Conservatives elected — Calgary South, T. H. Blow; Edmonton South, H. H. Crawford; Edmonton, East, James Ramsay; Edmonton West, A. F. Ewing; Gleichen, T. Davis; High River, Dr. Stanley; Lac Ste. Anne, Russell Barker; Okotoks, George Hoadley; Pincher Creek, John Kemmis; Red Deer, E. Michener.

Independents—Calgary Centre, A. C. Ross (Labour); Claresholm, Mrs. McKenney; Namton, James Weir (farmers' candidate.

Doubtful—Clearwater (not yet heard from); Ponoka, Dr. Campbell (Liberal, leading by 6, with five polls to hear from); Stettler, George McMorris (Conservative), leading; Stony Plain, P. W. Lundy (Conservative) leading.

USE OF TIN RESTRICTED.

Can be Used to Make Containers Only for Perishable Articles.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The American Iron and Steel Institute was asked by the Department of Commerce to-day to allot pig tin in the United States. The British Government has assured the United States that its shipping will observe any regulations by such a committee. An announcement to-day by the Commerce Department said that by August 1, tin plate manufacturers will be in a position to furnish can makers with all the tin they need.

All supplies of tin have been cut off from users for containers of varnish, blacking, paint, talc, soups, baked beans and various ready-to-eat foods, so that the tin may be used for cans in which perishable food can be packed. No releases of cans to packers of non-perishable products will be made until it is certain that the supply for perishables is ample.

Tragic Affair Near Bewdley

The inquest to enquire into the cause of the premature birth of the illegitimate infant of Mrs. Pearl Wright, of Bewdley, was held in the Town Hall here, Coroner McKinley presiding, Crown Attorney Kerr conducted the investigation and Mr. Armstrong, of Cobourg, appeared for Mrs. Wright. The premature birth aroused considerable suspicion in the neighborhood and it was alleged that it was brought on by illegal operation performed by an old woman in that vicinity. The remains of the infant were found buried in the backyard in a tin biscuit box. The babe was twelve inches in length, weighed one pound and its left arm was broken at the shoulder.

The evidence was of such a nature that it could not be published. It was shown, however, that the premature birth was not caused by an illegal operation, but was due to a kick from a cow which Mrs. Wright received the day previous.

Wright, the husband of the defendant is in France fighting for King and Country and Mrs. Wright admitted that she was living with Rueben Graham as man and wife. Graham also admitted burying the baby in a biscuit box in the back yard.

Was Caught In A Lathe

W. Walker, employed at the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co's. plant was the victim of a serious accident early this afternoon, when he was caught in a lathe at which he was working and was painfully crushed and cut about the chest. Dr. McNulty was called and took the injured young man to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Peterborough Boy Tells Of His First Trip Through Air

Cadet George Logan in Training With the Royal Flying Corps Describes His Initial Experience Among the Clouds.

ENJOYED THE SENSATION

In a most interesting letter to his sister, Cadet George Logan, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Logan, 14 Murray street, who is training as an aviator with the Royal Flying Corps, near Deseronto, gives a splendid description of his first flight. His letter is as follows:

Deseronto, June 5, 1917.
87th C. R. S., R.F.C.

Dear Agnes and All,—Well, here we are in camp and under canvas. I didn't write last night as you knew I was all right when I 'phoned, and also because our rising hour was 3.45 a.m.—some hour!

Got to Toronto safely. Friday morning, though we hit a cow or sheep on the way up and caused expiration of same. Got to barracks at 8.15 and at 9 we were ready to leave the residence. Arrived at Deseronto by C.N.R. at 2.40. We first went to headquarters and got posted to squadrons. Only 11 of our flight came to Deseronto, the remainder to Long Branch. Two of us went to Camp Rathbun, just east of Deseronto, the rest to Mohawk, three miles west of same place; four of us were posted to Squadron 84 (O. C. Vernon Castle), the other five to Squadron 87 (O. C. Capt. Pollard), and were brought out here in an R. F. C. tender, and got here at 4.15 p.m.

After getting fixed in our tents we got a light lunch served us in the mess and had nothing to do until morning. The four in Squadron 84 got their first flight that evening, of about fifteen minutes. The rest of us were billed to fly at 3.45 this (Tuesday) a.m. So, people, I've had my first real "fly" and it's great, believe me. I was one of the first at the aerodrome, so our Capt. (Ballard) took me first. We rose going west and kept a steady course up the lake, or bay, I should say, to Belleville, about 30 miles each way, arriving back in 40 minutes from time of starting.

When you leave the hangar, you run first just far enough to get full flying speed, and on the take-off you just feel one or two big leaps, as she leaves the ground, flies a bit, touches and leaves altogether. Then all the jolting ceases and its just as near being a feeling of nothing at all as you could expect, and just as I expected it would be, though I thought there would be a little more of a "gone" feeling. There is nothing of that except in a series of abrupt dives and elevations.

The country looked much as I expected it would, as in photographs; the fields all looking as level as hardwood floors, being checked off in green and brown, with the roads running like white ribbons across it for miles. But the houses struck me as funniest of all. I couldn't pick out any at first till I realized the little wee specks were they—just dots. Then you begin to realize your height from the ground. Trains also looked funny—just like snakes; but as for water, it appeared quite natural ,and you can see the bed of the lake for quite a long piece out. I was able to identify Belleville alright from its bridges and other landmarks. Over Belleville he tried "to put the wind up me" (as they say here for our "getting your Angora". He throttled his engine right down 3 or 4 times, gliding right down to a couple hundred feet over the city, each time climbing back to old level. He then did some nice bouncing and bumping vertical bank—almost up on one wing tip, and he just seemed to pivot there and circle with occasional nose dives and side slips. But I had absolute confidence in him and knew he would not do anything he couldn't finsh up with, as he was in for all that was coming. On the way back I spied a train moving east about three miles ahead, and though it seemed we were travelling slowly, so far as ground speed went, we overtook and passed the choo-choo in exactly 3 1-2 minutes.

It as certainly great to sit there and watch the wings, which made it look as though you were suspended there and the earth was moving in a great panorama below. The propellor makes a great wind come back in your face, and the goggles I had but will be O. K. for work to-morrow. We are billed for another joy-ride (a flight in which the instructor takes full control) to-morrow, at 3.45 a.m., and after that we will begin taking partial control of the lines. They certainly don't keep you waiting long here. But its hard to describe it. Can only say that it is fine and very novel to us.

Tenting is O.K., two to a tent. Collins and I are together and at present we have for light, six candles in a wash basin. Guess we will buy a lantern as all those issued are taken. We make up for early hours by sleep from 1 to 4 p.m.

Must close now. Will tell you more when I come home.

GEORGE.

MESSINES RIDGE IS STORMED BY BRITISH

Twenty Mines at Once.

How many mines went up at once I do not know, but there were almost a score. Many of them were made more than a year ago, and since then have lain under the Germans' feet, undiscovered. I believe that, in all, more than 600 tons of high explosives were fired simultaneously. Can you imagine what 600 tons of high explosives in twenty blasts along an arc ten miles long and more, sounds like?

I cannot describe it. Personally I can only vouch for having seen nine great leaping streams of flame shoot up each in a huge volcano by itself, with as many more volcanoes going off at the same moment beyond, out of sight. Each vast sheet of flame and its leaped roaring upward threw up dense masses of dust and smoke.

The Earth Quaked.

It was a terrifying spectacle, and what was more terrifying was that the earth shook like a house of cards. I stood on a solid hill, and it quaked like jelly. An officer in our party, worn out by a night's vigil, had fallen asleep on the ground, in spite of all the noise of the German shells. He leaped to his feet, muttering that it was an earthquake, and it was reasonble, for assuredly the earth did quake.

Then, even before the echoes of the explosions died, while pillars of smoke were still towering, all our batteries awoke. The whole horizon blazed with one flickering flame, with the flash of our guns, the stabs of bursting shells, the streams of light flares. Imagine the whole sky fringed with lightning, which flickers white, yellow, orange, red, and green. Imagine the sky one diamond, with a million facets shaken by a giant hand—imagine what you will, and still you get no picture of it.

A Terrible Dawn.

Instead of so many distinct, small columns of smoke, now the whole belt of earth to the east was hidden by the rising smoke of the mines and the barrage fire. All this to the eastward, while overhead the sky was pale blue and the moon swam serenely. Even while the clamor was at its height the first flush of dawn crept rosy red above Ypres. The sun was invisible as it rose behind a bank of smoke, but it flushed the sky with red. It was a truly terrible dawn.

Against the pink and opal sky, the forms of our kite balloons, already far up, grew defined. Singly, or in squadrons, our splendid aeroplanes went dropping by.

It was impossible to guess what had passed where our men had gone. The fumes of the tumult in what had been enemy country and the smoke shut out every thing overhead, the aeroplanes continued to circle superbly, until all the sky was dotted with puffs of black shrapnel smoke from the enemy's anti-aircraft guns. It had been broad daylight for two hours, and the guns had not ceased for a moment. Already prisoners were coming back; fewer than half a hundred in the first batch, who gave a stammering, frightened story of the havoc wrought by our mines and the suddenness of our attack.

Beat Huns in Open.

To sum up the result of the fighting to-day: We have struck the Germans a blow as hard as ever we struck them. One may regard this as a separate battle, another may regard it as only a legitimate development of the battle at Arras. In any case it is a great victory.

We may count some 5,000 prisoners, some guns, some machine guns, but the details are not of much importance. The essential fact is that we have struck the enemy in the open. For the prisoners whom we have been taking by raids for weeks past have told us that they knew all about the coming attack. The enemy was forewarned and made every effort to resist and make his position impregnable. We have broken through his lines and overrun him everywhere.

Enemy Not Surprised.

That the enemy knew of our preparations was not surprising, for they have been on a large scale, including the massing of guns, and the moving of troops, not the least being the building and operating of an amazing network of railways to deal with the huge transport of ammunitions that operations on so vast a scale entail.

The attack was made by General Plumer's army, which so far has had no chance at a great offensive, but for more than two years has held continuously the terrible job of maintaining the Ypres salient.

The object of the attack was to capture the Wytschaete-Messines Ridge, which is hardly a ridge, but only a long, low slope, which reaches its culminating height of approximately 350 feet near the village of Wytschaete. It is merely a gentle slope, but presents to the eye a fairly clear-cut skyline running north and south.

Overlooks Flanders Plains.

The importance of this height is that it is the final eminence before the plains of Flanders, and above all, that it dominates the southern edge of the Ypres salient. What that has meant in the last two years we know, when no troops, transport, guns, hardly individuals, have been able to move in the souhern Ypres area without being under observation by the enemy from the ridge.

From Ypres downward there were three ridges opposed to the British front which left us at the mercy of the enemy observation. These were Albert Ridge, Vimy Ridge and the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge. Albert Ridge we wrested from the enemy in the battle of the Somme. Vimy, we snatched from him in the battle of Arras, and to-day we grasped the last ridge.

One hesitates at this early date to speak so confidently of victory. We know what efforts the Germans have made to be prepared for this blow, especially by massing great numbers of guns and troops, the former largely for defence, the latter probably for counter-attacks. These counter-attacks are yet to come. The Germans will strain every nerve to win back the ground, and no doubt there is stern fighting ahead.

Casualties Extremely Light.

The attack was perfectly successful everywhere. While there was hard fighting at many points, our casualties were extremely light, and everyhing we set out to win was won more rapidly than we dared to hope. Our artillery and airmen were magnificent, and the tanks rendered useful help.

Next to the ridge itself, the most important points gained are the villages of Wytschaete and Messines. Due east of Messines the advance attained its greatest depth. At present that depth is more than 3,000 yards, but in the afternoon there came reports that the entire advance would reach a depth of 5,000 yards before the day was over. (The latter estimate is substantiated by the British official statement).

New Zealanders Work Cleanly

The New Zealanders had the honour of winning Messines. They did their work, as always, cleanly and with light casualties. They consolidated and fortified the ground with great thoroughness, and deserve the highest praise.

In the capture of the ridge, both north and south, Irishmen had a share. Proestant and Catholic troops fought side by side, and whatever may be the party feeling at home, it is well known that the feeling here between bodies is most cordial. There was the utmost rivalry as to which would get to the top of the ridge first. It is not known yet which won, but there is no doubt that both were first in good Irish fashion. The Germans are going to have a thoroughly Irish time trying to push them off again, what with New Zealanders, Australians, Irishmen and English regiments.

ALL OF RUSSIA'S TREATIES SINCE 1913 DISAPPEAR

Those Made With Western Powers Stolen, Says Report.

AMSTERDAM, via London, June 8.—The Hamburger Fremdenblatt, a copy of which has been received here, publishes a Stockholm report, which is alleged to have emanated from Russian sources, that the original treaties between Russia and western powers which were concluded since 1913 have disappeared from the Petrograd Foreign Office.

The rumour connects the disappearance of the treaties with "recent mysterious burglaries at the Foreign Office and in foreign embassies in the Russian capital."

WEDDING BELLS

WICKENDEN—SCOTT.

At high noon Wednesday, June 6th, in the presence of a large number of friends, the wedding was solemnized in St. Luke's church of Lillian Scott to Henry Wickenden, both of Petertorough, Rev. Mr. White officiating.

The bride looked lovely in her travelling suit of taupe, with touches of gold, large picture hat, and wearing a corsage bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. The young couple were unattended.

After a dainty lunch at the home of the bride, the young couple left, amid showers of confetti, on the afternoon train for Toronto and points west. On their return they will reside at 114 Maria street.

KEMP—DEASON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's church, Bloor street, Toronto, on June 5th, 1917, at 7 a.m., when Miss Elizabeth Deason, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Deason, 1109 Dufferin street, Toronto formerly of Peterborough, and Mr. Bruce Kemp, 501 1-2 Bloor street, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Kemp, Park street, Peterborough, Ont., were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Father Ryder officiating.

The bride looked charming in a battleship grey silk gown, trimmed with Georgette crepe and silver trimmings, with large picture hat to match, and wore a corsage bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Rebecca Deason, sister of the bride, supported her sister as bridesmaid, wearing a pink gown of crepe de chene, and large picture hat to match. Mr. John F. Scott acted as best man. After the ceremony the guests were entertained to a very happy repast at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemp left on the 4 p.m. train for points west, where they will spend their honeymoon, and on their return will reside at 501 1-2 Bloor street. The bride wore a navy blue travelling suit. Mr. and Mrs. Kemp were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents, among which was a large clock, the gift of the best man. The home of the bride's parents was elaborately decorated for the occasion, when numerous flags of the Allies were displayed, as the bride's brother is serving overseas with the 74th Battery.

Miss Hetty Shaw and Miss Lily Ball of Peterborough, were the out-of-town guests, and Miss Violet Patterson, late of Peterborough, entertained the guests, wearing flags of the Allies in her hair.

BALL—WOOD.

HAVELOCK, June 7.—A wedding of much interest took place on Wednesday, June 6th at High noon when Julia Surecta, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wood of town, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell Ball, of Lakefield. At the hour appointed the bride entered the drawing room, escorted by her father to the strains of the wedding march, which was played by her sister Miss Audrey Wood. She looked very pretty and winsome in a wedding gown of white silk with overdress of ninon, wearing the customary veil caught up with orange blossoms and carrying a beautiful bouquet of white carnations. The young couple were unattended. After the ceremony and congratulations had been bestowed upon them, the bride and groom led the way to the dining room, where an elaborate dinner awaited.

The house was prettily arranged and decorated with ferns and flowers in abundance as well also the table.

Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ball motored to Lakefield, where they will reside. the bride travelling in a brown suit, with hat to match. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Ball and Miss Pearl Ball, of Lakefield; mother and sister of the groom, Mrs. Robinson and Miss Viola Scott, of Norwood. The gifts received were many and beautiful among them were a bedroom suite from the bride's parents, and a silver tea service from the groom's mother and sister.

The bride is a popular young lady of Havelock and will be greatly missed, but her many friends join in wishing her and Mr. Ball every prosperity and happiness in life.

Pictures Show Ostend Crippled By Bombardment

British Airmen Take Photographs After the Recent Raid on Belgian Coast—Several Ships in the Harbour Reported to Have Been Wrecked.

LOCK GATES DAMAGED

LONDON, June 9.—A series of photographic plates of the bombardment of Ostend which have arrived in London afford a remarkable example of the development of photographic observation and record by airplanes. They show in undeniable fashion that the British bombardment of Ostend last Tuesday was the most successful thing of its kind yet accomplished, ensuring that Ostend will be crippled as a German base for weeks, if not permanently.

There are several series of these Ostend plates in the little photographic record room of the Admiralty building in Whitehall, and they must be seen together to understand the result of Tuesday night's work. The first group of these were taken before the bombardment and show the town in panoramic squares. With a small reading glass it is easy even for an untrained eye to distinguish the essential features of docks, factories and harbour works in their normal condition and to trace railroad tracks, streets and store yards.

AFTER THE BOMBARDMENT.

A second group of plates shows Ostend after the bombardment. At first sight the pictures are disappointing. Taken from air planes a mile or more above the town the pictures show no great general devastation. There are no large general changes in the outline of the town, but when one gets down to careful comparisons with the pictures taken before the bombardment there are some striking changes here and there which grow in importance as they are studied under a magnifying glass.

LOCK GATES DAMAGED.

First of all there is the harbour. One is immediately struck by a slight change in the appearance of the great lock gates, on which all the activity of the harbour depends. The magnifying glass reveals some of the reasons for this change. The breaking down of the locks prevents the retention of water in the basin and the canals which feed it, incapacitating the entire port machinery. Equally effective in crippling the harbour is a jut on the operating machinery, jamming the locks so that ingress or egress is impossible unless elaborate repairs are made.

SHIPS HAVE DISAPPEARED.

The plates taken the day before the bombardment show a number of ships at anchor in the harbour or tied up in the inner basin. In the succeeding plates some of the ships have disappeared and others are apparently half submerged. The long wharf looks like a caricature of its former self and two or three building in the dock yards whose usefulness was indicated in the early pictures by the presence of new additions or alterations, have suffered badly.

The pictures confirm the statement in the official communique that more than half of the buildings in the factory section of the town which is of military importance, have been destroyed or badly damaged. It is easy to see that there may have been a heavy loss of life, although the residential section was apparently untouched. Some of the ruined factories necessarily operate night and day while many men are employed at night on the shipping and docks.

British shells, dropped from a height of miles by the high angle fire of the British monitors, located at a point far below the horizon, frequently fall straight through the roof of a shed or factory, blowing out great sections of the sides and roof and hurling a shrapnel-like shower of splintered wood, steel and rock into the adjacent buildings.

BUTTER SPECULATORS ARE FEELING NERVOUS

NEW YORK, June 8.—Conservative operators in the butter market are not storing the product freely at this time, notwithstanding the storage season has opened up in all sections of the country. There are operators, however, who have warehoused large quantities and at the highest prices ever recorded.

The feeling is one of great uneasiness and many operators are fearing possible action by the Government against speculative deals. This fear has been emphasized by the fact that grand jury indictments have been returned against a number of speculators in butter in the Chicago market.

The report of the association warehouses covering 56 individual plants was issued yesterday and shows the stock of butter in storage on June 1 to be 6,054,000 pounds compared with 4,275,000 pounds a year ago.

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns. Then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow harder. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

WAR ON MOSQUITOES IN SALONICA CAMP

LONDON, June 7.—Excellent results have been obtained by the medical department of the allied armies in Macedonia, despite the extremely unfavourable sanitary conditions, says the Continental Mail. The difficulties, in fact, were greater than have been encountered in any campaign since that of Madagascar.

The Bulgarians said last winter that there was no need for them to come down from the mountains, and that the mosquitoes, which are the principal propagators of malarial fever, would do their work for them if the allied troops spent a summer in the plains. In March and April of last year the medical department organized an elaborate series of precautions, with the result that the mortality among the sick did not exceed four per cent., whereas in Madagascar it amounted to fifty per cent.

As it is impossible to fill up the swamps in which the mosquitoes breed, arrangements have been made to drain them as thoroughly as possible wherever the troops have to camp near them. The medical department is also constantly engaged in pouring petroleum over all stagnant water. Hundreds of thousands of mosquito nets have been served out to protect the men during the night, and quinine is freely administered as a preventive.

Last summer over fifteen tons of this drug was used, and during the coming summer even larger quantities will be employed, though it is not easy to convince the soldiers of its necessity. Quinine is also administered to the natives, who are all centres of infection, the disease being conveyed from them, by the mosquitoes, to the non-acclimatized troops from other parts of Europe. Here again the doctors find many obstacles in their path, as in most cases, the natives would rather undergo corporal punishment than swallow quinine.

Salonika is now well equipped to deal with disease. It has between 400 and 500 doctors and 5,000 nurses. The army has suffered undoubtedly from malaria but has not been overcome by it, and the coming campaign will probably be better than that of last year, during which the weather was exceptionally bad.

THE KAISER STANDS ALONE.

(The World's Work.)

The Kaiser faces the dismemberment of his dream of world empire, and the end of a personal power that has for many years threatened civilization with the present war. He is another of the long line of reactionary figures who have taken the feudal doctrines of the Middle Ages, and tried to drive back the irresistible growth of individual rights and human liberty. George III, was a small character and stupid. Napoleon the First was a magnificent tyrant. Napoleon the Third was scheming and petty. But none of these, though they lived in supposedly less civilized times, ever descended to the inhuman and the conscienceless beliefs and practices in which the Kaiser has adopted to reach his ends. In modern times he stands alone of all rulers, either of those who inherited power or those who acquired it by their own abilities—damned in a class by himself.

Patience is an easy virtue for a comfortable man to cultivate.

JUST LIKE A HOUSECLEANING

Every room needs an occasional "Cleaning up", no matter how carefully the regular sweeping and dusting is done. Especially is this true after any unusual event, a party, a wedding or a quilting bee.

So it is with your body. No matter how regular your habits or well cooked your food, there comes a time when you don't feel just right. You may recall an unusually hearty meal or two, irregular hours, or eating something that "didn't agree with you", or it may be just the "dust-gathering".

In any case a few doses of a really good cathartic is all you need to put you right. For this purpose nothing is quite so suitable as

Chamberlain's Tablets

Two or three after supper the first night, and one each night for two or three days, and your digestive apparatus is just like the well-cleaned room. Every part of your body is more vigorous, you go about your work with a new feeling and begin again to enjoy life. Are these benefits not worth getting? You know they are.

And you need have no hesitation about beginning them for fear you must "keep it up". The effect is just the opposite.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

Isaiah 1 chapter, 18th verse: Come now and let us reason together.

What can God do more than to call to sinners to repent and believe? If willing and obedient to this call, our sins though of crimson and scarlet hue, will become as snow or as wool; and every blessing will be communicated to us.

Though our sins have been as scarlet and crimson, a deep dye, a double dye, first in the wools of original sin, and afterwards in the many threads of actual transgression, though we have often slipped, by our many backslidings into sin; though we have long tried the mercy of God; yet pardoning grace will remove the stain, and we shall be clean. Ps. 51, 7. They should have all the happiness and comfort they could desire; all the blessings of the new covenant, of the heavenly Canaan; all the good of that land. Those who go on in sin—though they may dwell in a good land, cannot with any comfort, eat the good of it; guilt embitters all; but if sin be pardoned, God's blessings are comforts indeed. Those who will not be governed by God's sceptre will be ruled by the rod, and now life and death is set before us—good and evil. God asks us now to Come and let us reason together. What objection can we have against the practice of this; or why refuse to comply with God's terms. May God incline our hearts to accept his mercy and live to his glory. The prophet laments on the degeneracy of Judah. The royal city had been faithful to God. It was full of judgment; justice was duly administered. Men abhorred to do an unjust thing; righteousness was not called in now and then to serve a turn, but was at home there. Neither holy cities, nor royal ones, neither places where religion is professed, nor places where government is administered, are faithful to their trust. If religion do not dwell in them. The worst crimes were unpunished.

This is illustrated by similitudes. Dross may shine like silver, and the wine that is mixed with water may retain the color of wine but both are worthless. In some instances those who should restrain dishonesty have become proud oppressors, and those who wilfully defraud, and help others to defraud, because they have the power, they protect and share in their unlawful gains. Therefore, thus saith the Lord; the mighty One of Israel, who has power for the executing of his purposes, Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries. The wicked, especially wicked, rulers, who are cruel and oppressive are God's enemies. They are a burden to the God of heaven. He will find out a time and a way to punish those who have long borne on his patience. This language is used, speaking after the manner of men to mark God's displeasure at their sins.

The reformation of a people is God's own work, and if ever it be done it is by his spirit. He can do it easily, but he does it effectually. He does it by restoring judgment and righteousness, putting into men's minds principles of justice and love to each other and governing their lives by the same.

Men may do much by outward restraints but God does it effectually by the influence of his spirit. The reformation of a people will be the redemption of them, and their converts, for sin is the worst kind of slavery. The great and eternal redemption is that by which Israel is redeemed from all his iniquities. Ps. 130:8, and the blessed Redeemer is he that turns away iniquity from Jacob. Romans 11:26, and saves his people from their sins, Matt. 1:21. All the redeemed of the Lord shall be converts and their conversion is their redemption. Afterward though shall be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city. Greater praise there cannot be to any city than to be called the city of righteousness, and to retrieve its ancient honor. An utter ruin is threatened; it is inevitable; there is no escaping it. The idols or groves or gardens which the Jews preferred to the worship of Jehovah at his temple, would soon come to a tragic end; they would become as a tree when blasted by excessive heat, as a garden without water, which in those hot countries would soon be burned up. Thus shall they be that trust in idols, or in an arm of flesh; but those who trust in God never find him as a wilderness, or as waters that fail. They shall not be able to help themselves. Even the strong men shall be as tow, not only soon broken and pulled to pieces, but easily catching fire, and his work by which he hopes to fortify and secure himself shall be as a spark to his own tow, shall set on fire, and he and his work shall perish together. His own counsels shall be his ruin. The calamities that came upon the Jews, and their deliverance from captivity, were in a measure accomplishments of this prediction, but the redemption of the spiritual Zion by the righteous death of Christ, and by the power of his grace, more fully accord with the meaning of the expressions, verse 24-27, with her repeated deliverances, by his righteous judgments on her enemies, and at the great day of his coming. Those blessed times when Zion shall be redeemed from her spiritual bondage by the Lord's righteous judgments on all who oppose the spread of the gospel and enlarged by all those interested in the kingdom of Christ, when he shall come to establish his kingdom on earth.

We are to look for the second coming of Christ, even as the Old Testament saints did for his first coming. As Solomon's temple was placed on a mountain to which the people resorted with their sacrifices, from distant places, so the establishment of Christ's religion and the advancement of his kingdom are here foretold. The calling of the Gentiles, the spreading of the Gospel, and that far more extensive propagation of it which is yet to come, are predicted under the image of all nations flowing to this mountain of the Lord's house as all rivers flow into the ocean. We observe that the mutual assistance and encouragement which these converts shall give to one another. It becomes Christians to further the communion of saints by inviting one another into it. In going up to the mountain of the Lord they have God's promise that he will teach them by his word and spirit.

Then shall we know if we follow on to know the Lord. Those who attend to God's word shall not be sent away without instruction. Out of Zion shall go forth the law, the New Testament law, the law of Christ. Jesus said, My kingdom is not of this world; the kingdom of God is within you; it is peace, joy and righteousness in the Holy Ghost. Christ's kingdom is spiritual, an everlasting kingdom. When we pray, we say, Thy kingdom come, but while we wait and pray for these glorious days, when the kingdoms of the earth shall become the kingdoms of Christ, let us avail ourselves of the light afforded us, and walk in it.

The humble disciple of Christ, in every age follows peace and holiness, is forgiving and kind, even as Christ has forgiven him. Thus the prophet exhorts the people to avail themselves of these advantages.

These prophecies were intended to preach to future ages. If we are to be sharers in these privileges and blessings we must live accordingly so that we may go on our way rejoicing. Then we have the otherside of the picture. The prophet speaks of Israel's doom. This is set forth in two short words. Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people; therefore forgive them not.

The prophet was led from the view of the glorious times which were at length to arrive, to reflect on the state of religion among the Jews in his days. He foresaw that the Lord was about to forsake his professing people an dassigns the reasons. They were replenished from the east, following the fashions and customs of these nations, and married into their families and worshipped their idols, and departed from the worship of the true God. He had given them his oracles, which they might ask counsel of but they slighted them and preferred divination and witchcraft; the judgments of God came upon them as foretold by the prophet.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

CHOICE RECIPES

OATMEAL BREAD.

To 1 1-2 cups of rolled oats, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 cups hot water, 1 tablespoon lard, add 1-2 cup molasses and 1-2 yeast cake dissolved in 3-4 cup of lukewarm water. Knead with white flour. Let rise over night. Knead in the morning, put in pans, let rise again and bake.

JOHNNY CAKE.

Beat 1 egg, add 1-2 cup milk and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Combine 1-2 cup indian meal, 1-2 cup white flour, 1 teaspoonful cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1-4 teaspoon salt; add to milk and egg mixture. Put in pan and bake in a moderately hot oven.

NEW ENGLAND BROWN BREAD

To 1 1-2 cups Indian meal and 2 cups sifted rye flour, add 1 teaspoon soda and 1 teaspoon salt. To this add 2 cups sweet milk and 1 cup sour milk. This amount fills 3 one-pound baking powder tins. Steam 3 hours.

Boiled Frosting.

All housekeepers have at times had the experience of having boiled frosting run off the cake. It is pretty hard to judge just when to remove the syrup from the fire. Use one cup of sugar, one-half cup of water and boil till it spins a thread. Pour slowly over the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating with a spoon all the time while pouring. After beating thoroughly put into the double boiler and cook for two or three minutes. Flavour and it is ready to use.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

IN UNKNOWN GRAVES.

Whey they were none knew;
Who they were none knew;
So in our minds we will name them once more,
So in our hearts we will cover them o'er;
Think of those far-away heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers,
When the long years have crept slowly awdy,
E'en to the dawn of earth's funeral day;
Then the glad ear of each war-martyred son
Proudly shall hear the good judgment "Well done."
Blessings for garlands shall cover them over—
Parent and husband and brother and lover,
God will reward these dead heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

I WOULD RATHER.

I would rather go to the forest, far away, and build me a little cabin—build it myself—and daub it with clay, and live there with wife and children; and have a winding path leading down to the spring where the water bubbles out, day and night, whispering a poem to the pebbles, from the heart of the earth; a little hut with some hollyhocks at the corner, with their bannered bosoms open to the sun, and a thrush in the air like a winged joy—I would rather live there and have some lattice work across the window so that the sunlight would fall checked on the babe in the cradle—I would rather live there, with my soul erect and free, than in a palace of gold and wear a crown of imperial power, and feel that I was superstition's cringing slave and dare not speak my honest thought.

BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher penned the following wise words to the newly married:

Work together, plan together, select and furnish the house or room together. Be one in all home arrangements. The less talk of "mine and thine" the better. We are satisfied that "my rights" should be erased from the dictionary which governs husband and wife, and "our rights" substituted. But, notwithstanding short engagements and early marriage certainly appear to be the most certain road to abiding happiness, there are some cases which necessitate a long engagement. But it is full of dangers and uncertainty. Yet, if each continued faithful, and swerve not from their plighted vows until the circumstances which compelled delay have passed or been overcome, then a long engagement almost invariably ends in a very happy marriage. A love that has not been shaken in long delay, usually involving long absences, is not built on sand, but on a rock, over which floods may sweep and the wind threaten in vain. If young people are trained to look upon an engagement as a solemn contract as binding in God's sight as marriage, there would be very little danger. If in early youth, before education is completed, and some profession or employment is secured, two meet and are drawn together, becoming devotedly attached, then the engagement, even if of necessity it must be long, is the wisest course. Any sacrifice is better than to relinquish the first love. We firmly believe in first love, given when the heart is young and tender, unstained by too close contact with the world and its bewitching, beguiling attractions. Such love, honestly given and as truly returned, is next to mother's love—the safeguard of yonng men and maidens. This once secured, the world may spread out all her devices ever so skilfully and she will not break the bond. So, because the first young live is so sweet, so strong, and when faithfully nurtured, so enduring, we say "let it not go" even if it can be held only by a long engagement.

FOR THE BOYS.

You who are men in years, and you, just entering manhood, stop and consider life as it is. Remember, "action is the essence of character," good or bad. This character building is a daily thing, so consider your ways and weigh your actions, and build wisely.

What are your aims? Are you striving to develop yourself, mentally and morally, so as to have an influence in your community? Our boys will be the future men of our country, our lawmakers, and they should be men who honour the law; they should be men of principle, who cannot be corrupted by bribes; who have the moral courage to do their duty. When a community lacks such men evil and corruption predominate. How much the well-being of a community depends upon the honest, upright men in it.

Many temptations beset the young, and they come in contact with evil influences in every vocation in life. Yet there is within yourselves, boys, a counteracting force (if used) that will enable you to withstand temptations, and to overcome the evil influences with which you will surely come in contact. Bring your reasoning powers to bear. Argue with yourselves the certain moral degredation if you continue in a wrong course. Bring your will power to bear and keep under the low appetites and the little mean things that corrupt any who give way to them. Have a high standard, choose a right, open path in life. Nothing to hide, nothing to be ashamed of.

Listen to the counsel of your parents. Seek the home nest and its pure influences. Shun places of vice and evil in every form. Look carefully over the record of the past. Are you proud of it? Are you willing it should be read out? Are you satisfied with it? If you can't say yes, let your every effort be to better your condition.

THE WOMAN WITH THE HOE

Farm and Gardening Call Forth Overalls and Practical Working Clothes For Women

NEW YORK, June 9.—The familiar, age-old saying tells us that there is a time for everything, and just now there is no doubt that the time has come to shoulder the hoe and cultivate the land. Women, as well as men, are joining the great army of the soldiers of the soil for which the country calls, for this is one of the ways in which we are urged "to do our bit," in giving helpful service.

Women who are seriously taking to farming and gardening have had to decide on suitable clothes to work in. They have adopted practical overalls and simple uniforms consisting of a short skirt and a plain, practical waist.

7073—7860

Equipped for Outdoor work with Overalls and Sun-Hat.

Whether women are really going to devote a great deal of time to farming in earnest, or whether they are simply going to cultivate the small plot in the backyard to raise the vegetables for the family supply an overall suit is the thing to get.

The sketch shows a suit of very practical overalls. This is the kind that is worn with any separate blouse, the top of the overalls being made in jumper effect. The bloomers are roomy and comfortable. They are gathered at the lower edge and securely tucked under the tops of the high lace shoes, which are the correct shoes to wear for gardening. No dirt or twigs will get in and make the feet uncomfortable when the bloomers are arranged in his way with the shoes laced up over them.

Some overalls are made all in one with waist and sleeves sewed in, forming a complete costume which eliminates the necessity of wearing a waist underneath. This style is perferred by some women.

The overalls illustrated have been adopted by the National American Women Suffrage Association whose members use them in the agricultural department.

Women in the home are also taking to overalls for performing the rough duties about the house. When used for this purpose, they are usually made up in the lighter materials such as percale, chambray and gingham.

Ward off Freckles with a Sun-Hat!

While women are cultivating the soil, they surely do not want to be cultivating freckles as well, so the gardening outfit is not really complete without a sun-hat or a sun-bonnet to protect the head. An excellent type of sun-hat with a brim which may be rolled up or down, is shown with the overalls illustrated. This is just as essential to the gardener as the hoe, rake or trowel, not to mention the important overalls. The overalls and hat are usually made of the same material, and one of the most practical material to use is khaki or heavy khaki-coloured materials. This colour is the best to use for the obvious reason that it does no show the dirt as much as any other. Women's overalls are also made up in blue jean that practical fabric which has always been used for men's overalls.

Eight Dutch Fishermen Make $2,000,000 Haul By Salvaging Torpedoed Craft

NEW YORK, June 8.—Eight Dutch fishermen, whose daily haul had been bringing them an average of what is the equivalent of about $1.50 for each, put out in their little yawl on the morning of April 20, and the proceeds of what came to their nets that day amounted to nearly $2,000,000—more than $200,000 for each of them. This is not the result of any miraculous haul of fish, but of the scarcely miraculous salvaging of a Belgian relief steamship, which had been torpedoed a few minutes before the fishermen had come upon the scene.

The story of the torpedoing and the saving of the vessel surpasses in interest almost anything of the kind in maritime annals since the German submarine warfare of atrocity was inaugurated. It was told by Michael F. Sweeney, of No. 829 Princeton street, Lowell, and William F. Ford, of No. 20 North Emerson street, Wakefield, Mass., who had been respectively officer and seaman aboard the torpedoed vessel the Norwegian steamship Kongali. The vessel, worth more than a million dollars herself, was carrying, in the service of the Belgian Relief Committte, several million dollars worth of grain from Portland, Me.

"We left Portland on Saturday, March 31, at half-past seven o'clock in the evening," said Ford, "and reached Halifax, N.S., on April 1. We got permission to proceed from there the following day.

HAILED BY PATROL BOAT.

"Nothing of any account happened until April 6, when we came near fouling it up with a little iceberg. We were running very far north—above the sixty-second parallel. Aftere escaping this danger we ran along again without anything eventful until Sunday, April 15, when, in the North Sea, a British patrol boat stopped us. An officer came alongside and after assuring himself that we were not any make believe Belgian relief vessel allowed us to continue. He had been held up about half an hour.

"Next day another patrol boat stopped us and again we lost half an hour proving to another officer that we were all right. Two days later we sighted the west coast of Norway. We passed a great deal of wreckage and an empty lifeboat. The wreckage must have represented many torpedoed vessels. In fact, I was afterward told in Rotterdam by an officer of a Norwegian steamship that his vessel, which was bound from Bergen, Norway, for New York, picked up so many crews drifting about in lifeboats that when his vessel was two days out she became over-crowded and had to put back to Bergen.

"However, to return to our own vessel, on Friday, April 20, we passed the Dogger Bank, where a big sea battle had been fought recently. That night I was at the wheel. We had no regular quartermaster, and I was acting in that capacity. I had the eight to ten watch. It was a very dark night, but along the side of our vessel, riding well above the deck, we had a large electric sign in cluster lights showing that we belonged to the Belgian Relief. There could have been no possibility of mistaking the identity of our vessel.

"It was just ten o'clock, and I was reaching out to strike four bells when I felt a heavy shock. With it was a loud but dull rumbling noise and at the same instant the vessel began to list to port. I knew that we must have been hit by a htorpedo or struck a mine, and I ran below to wake up the thirty-two other men aboard if by chance any of them had not been awakened by the shock and roar.

"The second mate, who had also been on duty, went shouting with me through the vessel to make sure that none should be left behind.

LIFEBOAT "FALLS" JAMMED.

"By the time I reached the deck again the vessel was tilted far over. She must have shipped about three feet of water. The commander of the vessel, Captain Samuel Olsen, got into the starboard boat with the chief engineer and second mate and sixteen of the crew. I got into the port boat, which was commanded by the first mate. Besides us there were twelve other men in the boat. We got down into the water and away from the sinking vessel safely, but the men in the starboard boat did not fare as well. One of the 'falls' got jammed, and the boat went down on one end only, while the other end remained up. The men were spilled into the water, and the second mate's head struck against the Kongali's side. He sank beneath the water and we did not see him again. He was the only one who perished.

"One of the men climbed up and cut the jammed rope, and the men got into the released lifeboat without any further accident. It was a bitter cold night, though, and a high sea was running and it is almost a miracle that no more of the men perished.

"Eight poor fishermen, who did not realize at first that the steamship which lay listed so far to port in front of them had been torpedoed, sailed around to the other side of her, where the sight of the big hole in her plates told them the story of her fate. They got aboard and stuffed into the hole bales improvised out of canvas filled with grain. This made the stoppage secure enough to enable them to steer the vessel safely into port. There was a court proceeding, the upshot of which was that each of the men was decreed to have earned about $225,000 by having salvaged the vessel."

The Kongali was built at Sparrow's Point, Md., in 1916, for the American-Hawaiian Company. Her name at that time was the Artisan. She was 400 feet long, 54.4 feet beam and 28.9 feet deep. She was of 5,625 tons gross.

KIDNAPPING CASE AROUSES ALL MISSOURI

Police Rides All Night Through Storm With $6,000 Ransom But Finds No Trace

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—Somewhere in the Ozark hills the infant son of J. Holland Keet, former banker of this city, is being held by kidnappers. Two days and two nights of unremitting search failed to lead to the rendezvous of the kidnappers, who late Wednesday night stole the baby from its bed, while a maid slept in an adjoining room and the parents were attending a ball at the Country Club a short distance away.

In response to an anonymous letter, the baby's father drove through the storm last night carrying $6,000 with which to purchase the little fellow's freedom, but either the intensity of the gale or the fear of capture prevented the kidnappers from keeping their appointment. It is said Keet received another missive from the captors to-day.

GOES OUT AGAIN TO-NIGHT

The parents, fearing harm might come to their boy as a result of the searchers' efforts, refuse to discuss the contents of the letter and apparently desire to come to speedy terms with the abductors.

Mr. Keet planned another lone midnight trip into the hills to-night to meet the demands of the kidnappers. The first letter stipulated a failure to observe every provision would cost the farmer $10,000. It was intimated the child would be tortured. Enclosed with the letter was a small piece of the youngster's night gown.

Against the expressed desire of Keet, a squad of automobiles followed in his wake last night as he journeyed along the route prescribed in the letter. Scores of homes in Springfield showed lights all night long as men, women and children remained awake, waiting for word that Baby Keet had been found.

Crowds of men remained in the downtown section of the city until after dawn, ready on instant notice to form searching parties as soon as the banker reported he had delivered the $6,000 ransom. These arrangements were made over the protest of Mr. and Mrs. Keet, whose only concern was the safety of their baby.

Mrs. Keet to-day was in a state verging on collapse. Her spirits were buoyed through the night by the hope her husband would return with their baby. But when he returned with the ransom money and without having met the kidnappers, her grief was beyond care. Visitors were not received at the Keet home to-day, and it was stated Mrs. Keet was bearing up bravely as could be expected.

The sorrow that hangs over the Keet mansion has spread to every home in Springfield. Every mother, since it became known the letter received by Keet threatened another kidnapping, was fearful lest her baby be stolen from her.

WOMEN BELEIVED IN PLOT

Nearly every man in the city either went armed to-day or had a deadly weapon within reach to protect his own home or to aid in the protection of some other man's family.

Detectives assert the author of letter is a woman. Grammatical expressions purposely are made incorrect, it is believed, for the hand writing is remarkably plain.

Mrs. Kate Keet, mother of J. Holland Keet, is said to be one of the wealthiest women on southwestern Missouri. Mr. Keet a few days ago resigned as vice-president of the Holland Banking Company in order to manage his mother's estate, which is roughly estimated to be worth $3,000,000.

The chief demand in England and France is for women mechanics, automobile drivers, cooks and stenographers.

Could Not Lift Stick of Wood

W... ALMOST FAINT FROM SEVERE PAIN IN THE BACK —DOCTORS COULD NOT GET THE KIDNEYS SET RIGHT.

Benton, N. B., May ..— A great many people suffer the results of deranged kidneys and do not understand the cause of trouble or the way to obtain cure. The writer of this letter suffered excruciating pains in the back and in vain his physician tried to cure him. For some reason or other his medicines did not have the desired effect.

Mr. Olts' brother was a merchant selling among other medicines, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and he heard his customers telling about how they were cured of kidney derangements by their use. This led to Mr. Olts putting them to the test with the splendid results reported in this letter.

Mr. E. C. Olts, Benton, Carleton County, N. B., writes: "I am glad to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I suffered from my kidneys which at one time were so bad I could not lift a stick of wood without getting on my knees, and then would almost faint from the pain in my back. I consulted a doctor about it, and he gave me some medicine but it did not help me. My brother who is a merchant, and carries all your medicines, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I got one box and they helped me so that I got another and kept on until I had taken five boxes, which cured me. I have had no trouble with my back since and am never without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house. Last summer I also suffered from piles. I used three boxes of your Ointment and it cured them. I can certainly recommend Dr. Chase's Pills and Ointment."

Who went overseas and is so far away.

The Germans are cowards, but the British think it's fun.

A Halt in Advance of Beef Cattle Prices

The general tone of the cattle markets this week was lower than for some weeks past. From the earliest market prices steadily weakened until the close of the Wednesday market, when several loads of choice stuff were still being held over. Thursday's market brought an unusually light run, even for the end of the week. By this time, too, the packers were evidently looking for a few good heavy cattle. This gave holders their chance, and a rather belated clearing was made at prices slightly in advance of the best bids made earlier in the week. The poor demand, particularly for the heavier cattle at the first of the week, was due in part to the fact that several large deliveries of winter distillery-fed cattle had been made to the big packers. Consequently there was no immediate demand for cattle of this class. The fact that the heavier cattle were not selling gave the easier tone to the whole market which prevailed up to Thursday, when there was the slight recovery just noted, due to the extremely light run of fresh cattle offering. The week's decline on the heavy cattle was about 50 cents, or perhaps more in some cases. The circumstances that many of the cattle had been bought at top prices in the country made drovers' losses in some instances none the less easy to bear.

Present System, Effecting Little Saving, Strongly Condemned as a Drive on Provisions

PARIS, May 5.—The prohibition of the sale of meat after 1 p.m. has had little effect in reducing consumption, the saving having been less than 10 per cent., and accordingly the original plan for meatless days has been revived by Maurice Violette, Minister of Subsistence. After May 16 the sale of meat, poultry or game in any form will not be permitted on Thursdays or Fridays, and slaughter houses will be closed from 11 p.m. Tuesdays to 6 a.m. Fridays.

This measure is evoking strong criticism from provision dealers, who are of the opinion it will simply disclose business without any appreciable result. They say that while the consumption of meat will diminish slightly, there will be an increased demand for other articles of food, entailing a rise of prices. The trade is in favour of meat cards, and the Minister announces he will introduce them if the meatless days fail o give the desired result.

Up to the present the French consumer cannot be said to have felt the war except in his pocket. Prices have virtually doubled, but there is plenty to eat. The restrictions thus far imposed have inconvenienced no one seriously. They are as follows:

Sugar and coal are obtainable only on cards. The amount of gas and electricity is limited. No fresh or fany bread is sold. Flour which is milled to 85 per cent., and wheat substitutes may be used only for making bread; consequently there are no cakes or pastry except those made of almond paste, potato flour, etc. Newspapers are smaller in size. Owners of automobiles have been allowed on a short allowance of gasoline, as have persons who use gasoline for cooking stoves.

Many other articles are becoming rarer and rarer, owing to decreased production and transport difficulties. This is particularly true of ink, which is almost unobtainable.

In view of the shortage of leather the Ministry of Commerce is considering the creation of a standard shoe of practical and solid type, suitable for the needs of the working classes, which could be sold at a relatively low price throughout France.

Almost the only articles of food which are not scarce are fesh vegetables. There is every prospect of an exceptionally fine fruit crop.

A decree is promulgated in the official Journal prohibiting the use of maize, rye, barley or buckwheat flours for any other purpose than bread making.

Where You Cannot Prophesy — PREPARE!

NOT even the best-informed man in government or business circles dares to attempt a prophecy of conditions after the war. We hope for the best—meantime wise men are preparing now for anything.

How?

By regulating their expenditures according to their actual needs rather than by their prosperity—by husbanding the surplus—and by investing to the limit in Canadian War Loans that help so much to maintain present prosperity.

Money saved and loaned to Canada by Canadians is a two-fold safeguard for the future. The lenders will benefit directly from the excellent interest return and absolute security—and indirectly because the interest thus kept in Canada will help to keep business good after the war.

Canadian War Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, repayable in three years. At the purchase prices of $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively, they yield over 5% interest. Buy them at any Bank or Money Order Post Office.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

TETANUS.

TETANUS IS NOT a very common disease, but it is such a serious one and is so readily prevented by proper measures that some information about it will be of interest. It is generally known as lockjaw, because one of the early symptoms of the disease is a stiffness of the jaws. It is caused by a micro-organism called the tetanus bacillus, the natural home of which is in horse-manure or in well-manured soil or about farmyards.

One reads in the papers that this affection is frequently found among our soldiers in Flanders, who have been wounded. The reason for this is that the soil of Flanders is very thoroughly manured, and the mud and dust is liable to carry the infection to wounds and abrasions sustained by the men. Most germs are easily killed by free exposure to air and sunlight. The tetanus bacillus is readily destroyed in the same way, but few, if any forms of life have greater resistance than the tetanus spore, which will resist streaming steam or boiling water for nearly an hour. That is why the disease remains indefinitely in the soil. Consequently great precautions are taken to prevent the soldier's wounds becoming infected, and if this occurs to forestall the infection. The first may in most cases be accomplished by painting the wound with iodine and applying the first-aid dressing carried by every man. But if the wound becomes infected, and indeed as a routine precaution, in case of all wounds at the front, a dose of Tetanus Antitoxin is given. This is a specific and trustworthy preventive if administered before the symptoms of tetanus show themselves. But tetanus antitoxin is also useful in the treatment of the disease by combining with and neutralising the free toxin.

Like other infectious tetanus has a period of mimbation, which means the time it takes from when the wound is received until the disease shows itself. In tetanus this period is from six to fourteen days. If the dose of toxin received is large and the disease severe the time will be short. A six-day mimbation is generally fatal. Commonly the disease comes on with a stiffness of the jaws at about nine or ten days after the wound, whether it be from a rusty nail, a bullet, or other object.

A rather remarkable case showing the efficiency of this treatment is shown in the case of Eddit di Palmo, an Italian boy residing in London, Ont. Running about barefooted last August this little lad drove a nail into his foot just back of the toes. Nine days later the lad could not swallow. His jaws were set. The parents were poor, but their love was just as strong for their boy as that of people in better circumstances. They appealed to a physician, who applied to the Medical Officer of Health, and he wired to the Provincial Board of Health for a supply of free Tetanus Antitoxin. Twenty-two thousand five hundred units were at once given, some into the muscles, some into the veins, and some into the spinal canal. This was repeated daily, and the boy recovered. The M. O. H. says: "Nothing saved him but the prompt and fearless action on the part of the attending physician, who threw 92,000 units of antitoxin between the boy and death."

Had the parents known that a rusty, dirty nail may carry the germs of Tetanus and that 1,500 units of the antitoxin given at the time of the accident followed by a similar dose a week later would have prevented all the trouble, they doubtless would have attended to it. Now they say "Safety First."

While it is of the highest importance to use preventive doses of tetanus antitoxin, it is quite important that the wound should be thoroughly cleansed. Punctured or lacerated wounds should be thoroughly opened and every particle of foreign matter removed. Wounds containing garden earth, street dust, manure, or other material liable to contain the spores of tetanus should receive special consideration. They should be disinfected by the use of pure carbolic acid, which is painless and whose action may be checked by the application of alcohol.

Tetanus and other wound infections may be avoided in those exposed to accidents by cleanliness of body and clothing. A bath before a battle is said to have been required in the Japanese army and navy. Most wounds heal without any danger from tetanus, but where a wound is exposed to dirt it does not pay to take chances.

Soldier's Body Found in Woods Near London

Police Think Former St. Mary's Man Was Murdered—Pieces of Torn Bills Discovered on Ground Near the Remains

EVIDENCE OF STRUGGLE

LONDON, June 8.—What looks like one of the most brutal murders ever committed in Western Ontario was discovered shortly after 8 o'clock Wednesday morning in the woods on the farm of Wesley Shoebottom on the asylum sideroad near the 6th concession of London Township. The body, discovered by Mr. Shoebottom through the barking of his dog, lay on the ground near a sugar shanty and was identified as that of Gunner Harold Payne, an Englishman who left the Military Hospital at the barracks on French leave Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

County Constable Arthur Corsaut, who has charge of the case, made the following statement:

From the evidence acquired I have no hesitation in saying that Gunner Payne was brutally and foully murdered. I have ascertained that the man had a roll of bills of about $30 or $40 in his possession at the hospital, and except for the pieces of maybe a couple of two dollar bills found by the stump of a tree, it has disappeared entirely. That the dead man did not give up the money without a struggle, is apparent from the marks on the torn-up ground of a vicious battle. I also believe that the murder was committed in daylight yesterday and with a stone we have in our possession.

AT CLOSE RANGE.

"The crime must have been committed in daylight and by a pretty powerful individual. A man could not have found the stone which undoubtedly was used to beat up the man, in the dark.

I think that the murderer used the weapon at close range and following up Payne from where he plucked the stone, hit him one or two powerful smashes with it. Rifling the pockets of the stricken soldier he was not satisfied with the money obtained, but went through the rest of his clothes, even going so far as to take off his shoes. The piece of leather found on the ground from inside the shoe would indicate that Payne's shoes had been off and then hurriedly replaced. The man satisfied that no more money to be found then made off. The spot where the crime was committed, back in the woods, was as you say, 'a good place for a murder,' and I doubt if the victim had made any outcry that he would have been heard. The condition of the body shows that the man had not been dead more than a day.

"Someone must have seen the men together. The hospital uniform is a distinctive one with the short blue coat and trousers, and have, no doubt, that in a few days some evidence of a tangible nature will be discovered that will lead to the arrest of the guilty man."

CAN'T FIND HAT.

Constable Corsault also stated that although Payne was believed to have left the hospital wearing his hat, no trace of it could be found.

Sergt. Ledger, ward master at the hospital, viewed the remains at N. J. Griffith's undertaking parlors and with Payne's commanding officer who was also present, had no hesitation in stating that the body was that of the man who had been confined to the hospital for two months with chronic rheumatism.

Both officer and sergeant were of the opinion that it was a case of suicide. Sergt. Ledger said that the man's actions had been queer at times. This statement was borne out by Pte. Edy, A.M.C., who had been in charge of Payne for some time. Pte. Edy identified Payne from the picture taken at the scene of the crime. He said that he had issued underwear to Gunner Payne Saturday morning. At that time he had seemed perfectly rational, although he had had an argument as to whether the underwear belonged to him or not. Finally he took it. The orderly on duty at the barracks Saturday afternoon told Pte. Edy that he had seen Payne walking by himself on the heights late that day. This apparently is the last seen of the unfortunate man by the military authorities.

HAD WAD OF BILLS.

"Gunner Payne seemed to have a lot of money on him for a soldier," said Pte. Edy. I went to borrow a car ticket from him about a week ago and he pulled out a big wad of bills from his pocket. He was a temperate and quiet man, and I never heard him swear all the time I was looking after him. As a number of the boys are allowed to exercise in the afternoon, no one thought anything about Payne being out until supper time. His case was to have been reported to the provost marshal to look into, as he was thought to be a deserter."

High Constable Watterworth stated that all the evidence obtained would be laid before Crown Attorney McKillop and himself and some line of action determined on.

A post-mortem was held at Griffith's undertaking parlors by Dr. E. Williams. The report will be made next Tuesday night to the coroner's jury, which will meet at 8 o'clock in the town hall at St. Johns.

Payne before enlisting on December 21 last, had been employed for twelve years as a farm hand by J. H. Creighton, R. R. No. 6, St. Marys. Mr. Creighton came to London Wednesday to see Payne and was shocked to hear of his untimely end. He left for St. Marys without seeing the remains of his former employee. Payne may have been making for St. Mary's as the road running past the Shoebottom farm is looked upon as the main thoroughfare to the stone town.

Shortly after 8.15 o'clock Wednesday morning Wesley Shoebottom, proprietor of the farm, whistled to his dog Jack, and started for the woods to look for his horses, turned out to graze the night before. The dog bounded joyfully ahead and was soon lost to sight in the woods. The first intimation Mr. Shoebottom had that anything was wrong was when the dog kept up a prolonged barking. Thinking that he might have discovered a woodchuck and was worrying him, Mr. Shoebottom hurried to the scene, only to make the gruesome discovery of the dead man's body. Horrified, the proprietor of the farm rushed to the house, some 500 yards distant, and 'phoned Dr. McNeil of Arva, who immediately got into communications with High Constable Benjamin F. Watterworth. The high constable detailed County Constable Arthur Corsault on the case.

A GRUESOME FIND.

Arriving at the farm, the constable hurried to the scene, accompanied by a number of neighbors who had quickly gathered.

Lying partly on his side, amid a bed of violets, with shoes unlaced, a pyjama coat and undershirt, open at the throat, his breast and clothes matted with blood that had flown from a two-inch gash in his throat, was the man, identified later in the afternoon from a picture taken as Gunner Payne. Closer inspection showed a deep cut three inches long on the left side of his head. The curly dark brown hair was streaked here and there with grey. His mouth was partly open, and his glassy, cold, blue eyes stared heavenward. A pair of hospital blue trousers showed that he had come from some institution. His underwear bore the number 4097, and the khaki socks, partly exposed and rain-sodden, led Constable Corsaut to believe that the man was in some way connected with the military. It was not many seconds before Corsaut found this to be the case. Hurrying around the corner of the shack, the officer came upon a short blue-grey coat lying across a pile of wood. Thirty cents, a battery cap badge and chin-strap were found in the pockets of the coat. There was no blood on the coat.

PIECES OF BILLS.

Examination of the ground soon brought more evidence. Ten feet from the woodpile was a huge stump, around the base of which were small pieces of several bills, one of which was of $2 denomination. A depression in the ground showed where a good-sized stone had recently been removed, and a stone, the jagged edge of which was covered with blood and hair, was found on the other side of stump, some fifteen feet away, almost lying in a small pool of blood and rain. This is the weapon believed by Constable Corsaut, and, in fact, by everybody who visited the scene of the crime, to have caused the death of the unfortunate man.

Dr. McNeill stated that the slash in the throat wound not have caused death, but that the man died as the result of the injuries to his head, undoubtedly caused by coming in violent contact with the stone, which was some six inches in diameter, and partly round. A piece of leather, which fitted inside of Payne's shoe was also found.

The constable, continuing his investigation, came upon two more small pools of blood in the semicircle that Payne had made in his probable endeavour to reach the house, which lay in the direction he took. He could not make it, and fell in the position previously described, with his right hand clenched tight, as if in great pain.

After the coroner's jury had been empaneled the remains were removed to the undertaking establishment of N. J. Griffiths.

HAY CROP FAILURE IN MANITOBA PROVINCE.

Minister of Agriculture Advises Sowing of Corn.

WINNIPEG, June 8.—Owing to excessive dry weather during the month of May, the Manitoba hay crop is ruined, according to Hon. Valentine Winker, Minister of Agriculture.

"There is going to be a serious shortage of hay," the Minister declared. "I advise farmers to sow corn for use as fodder. No rain has fallen this year in Winnipeg."

Jim Perkins had purchased a horse, which he afterwards found to be afflicted with heaves. Now, of all the misfortunes that might come to a horse, in Jim's opinion, heaves were the worst; so he advertised his horse for sale, describing him as being an unusually fine horse in every particular. A prospective buyer appeared in answer to the ad.

"Isn't he a corker? Hasn't he a fine coat?" exclaimed the owner enthusiastically.

"H'm! His coat is all right, but I don't like his pants," murmured the other.—Everybody's Magazine.

SWEDISH VIEWS. SHARPLY DIVIDED ON WAR'S FINISH

STOCKHOLM. — Diogenes, gumshoeing for an honest man, had a cinch compared with the correspondent looking for an impartial, representative Swede who will answer the delicate question, "How long can Germany hold out?"

There is no such person. Sympathies here are sharply divided along class lines, with in general, the court, official, army, intellectual and society circles, the gentry, land owners and farmers still disposed to be pro-German, while the business men and the working classes are friendly with the Entente.

The military men agree in believing Germany cannot be beaten in the field, and consequently that she can hold out indefinitely; but they are not permitted to talk for publication. Curiously enough, representative business men cannot be quoted for fear of getting on either the British or the German black list, according to their judgment of Germany's staying powers.

The business men, however, view the economic situation in Germany more ominously than do the military and, not for publication, express the opinion that in the long run Germany cannot hold out economically, particularly with America against her.

In general thinking Swedes have a wholesome and high opinion of the military pressure which America will ultimately bring to bear on Germany, and there is at least a rapidly growing minority here which believes that in the long run the Allies will beat Germany in the field.

IF GERMANY SHOULD WIN.

(The World's Work.)

It staggers the imagination to picture the effects upon the world if German submarines effectively should starve Great Britain. She would have to give up her fleet. The British Empire is based upon seapower. Sea power is based upon ownership of a great fleet, and therefore the British Empire would disintegrate. Canada, Australia, Egypt, India would be detached. And if Germany got the British fleet, what would we get?

Not invasion, for that would not be necessary. We would have to fight for the Monroe Doctrine with every ounce of our energy and power and all our resources. We would have to fight to prevent dictation of commercial terms. Even the grandiose German dream, for some of them have had it, of imposing an indemnity upon the United States to pay for the cost of the war, might be faced in terms of actuality.

SUNDAY READING FOR A THOUGHTFUL HOUR

Prepared for the Examiner by a Local Church Worker

What shall I do, my Lord, my God,
To make my life more worth to Thee?
Within my heart through earth abroad
Deep voices stir and summon me.

Through strange confusions of these times,
I hear thy beckoning call resound.
There is a pathway more sublime,
Than yet my laggard feet have found.

The dearest voice may lead astray;
Speak Thou! Thy word my guide shall be;
Oh, not from life and men away,
But through them, with them, up to Thee.

—SELECTED.

When one is restless, uneasy at the thought of the unhappiness, the darkness and suffering of the world today, one is hearing the call to a higher and nobler life, a life rooted in rightness and soon to blossom in service. Ears must indeed be deaf who fail to hear the one clear call that comes to us at home, to raise the standard of public and private life, to fight the fight at home against all that would enslave man, and weakens the nation.

"We must be free or die, who speak the tongue Shakespeare spoke—the faith and morals hold which Milton held." Fight hard, fight long—and pray as you fight. The work at home is part of the work at the front, and must needs wrest victory from defeat; only by this can we honour our brave men "who counted not their lives dear to themselves," that they might uphold the standard of the British Empire.

There is no way of shirking our individual responsibility. First to make one's life standard in harmony with the Divine ideal of God's word. Then courage will come to go alone, "and vote with God"—to honour unspotted life and noble endeavour more than fame and wealth; and the city from God will come, where there will be no "graft in politics," no greed in commerce, no vice in its pleasures, and no complicity with sin and no sin on its statutes.

"Let every man and woman enlist in this patriotic work and determine that it is to be a fight to a finish. We pray, 'Thy kingdom come on earth.' Let us help God to answer that prayer."

"Righteousness and judgment are the foundations of God's throne.
Mercy and truth go before His face.
Blessed are the people that know the trumpet sound."

PARIS THE SCENE OF MANY FAMOUS PEACE TREATIES

London Periodical Recalls Some of the More Important

LONDON.—The talk of possible peace within a few months recalls a few of the treaties that have been made in Paris.

Paris, says Answers, undoubtedly has been the scene of more peace treaties than any other city in the world. The one signed there in November, 1782, is a document sacred to our cousins across the "herring pond."

This peace, too, represents the final act in one of the worst times this old country ever worried through—that wretched time when Lord North was at the helm of state and did not know his job. First of all, Cornwallis, driven by a state of starvation, the fleet was powerless to prevent, owing to the temporary ascendancy of the French on the briny, surrendered with his army to George Washington at Yorktown.

Rodney to Rescue.

Gibraltar was in a state of siege—a siege which lasted three years and is one of the most heroic episodes in our history. Ireland was badly disaffected in those days, and Ulster had raised a volunteer force of a hundred thousand men. Spain would not listen to any peace proposals which did not include Gibraltar, and France mildly demanded all our Indian possessions except Bengal.

Just when things were at their very worst and it seem all up with old England Admiral Rodney, the greatest of all British seamen except Blake and Nelson, came to the rescue. He relieved Gibraltar, he crushed the Spanish fleet off St. Vincent, only four vessels escaped to Cadiz.

Then he followed the French and another Spanish fleet to the West Indies, and on April 12, 1782, Rodney's captain hurried down to his admiral's cabin with the historic exclamation. "Sir, God has given you your enemy on the lee bow."

Then followed the famous battle of the Saints, which was the first of those specially great naval triumphs which ended with Trafalgar and made Britain undisputed mistress of the sea. Needless to say, these sea fights made all the difference to the peace treaty; for, although American independence was acknowledged, so was Britain's sovereignty of India, and its retention of the key of the Mediterranean.

Humorous Affair.

The next treaty of Paris was rather a humorous affair, if anything so pathetically tragical can be called humorous. Napoleon had been having a bad time; he had had to retreat from Moscow, then he lost the great battle of Leipzig, then he abdicated. Then he was "incarcerated" in the island of Elba, and everybody who was any body first went to Paris to sign a treaty which put Europe just where it was thirty years before.

Then London went wild, first over the return of Wellington from his splendid and unbroken series of victories—Talavera, Salamanca, Torres, Vedras, Badajos, Vittoria, all engraved on his splendid catafalque in St. Paul's cathedral—in Spain, and then over the visit of the Sovereigns of Russia and Prussia to the prince regent.

Suddenly the sky fell. News arrived that moved the world like a volcanic eruption and an earthquake combined. The Orge of Corsica had escaped from Elba, and, refusing to rest content with his comfortable pension of £100,000 per annum, was marching on Paris, greeted with wild acclamation all the way. Then of course, came the famous hundred days, which ended June 15, 1815, a day, of days, when that "world shaking victory," as Byron calls the battle of Waterloo, was fought in the cockpit of Europe—gallant little Belgium. This was followed by still another treaty of Paris which was signed by Welington, himself.

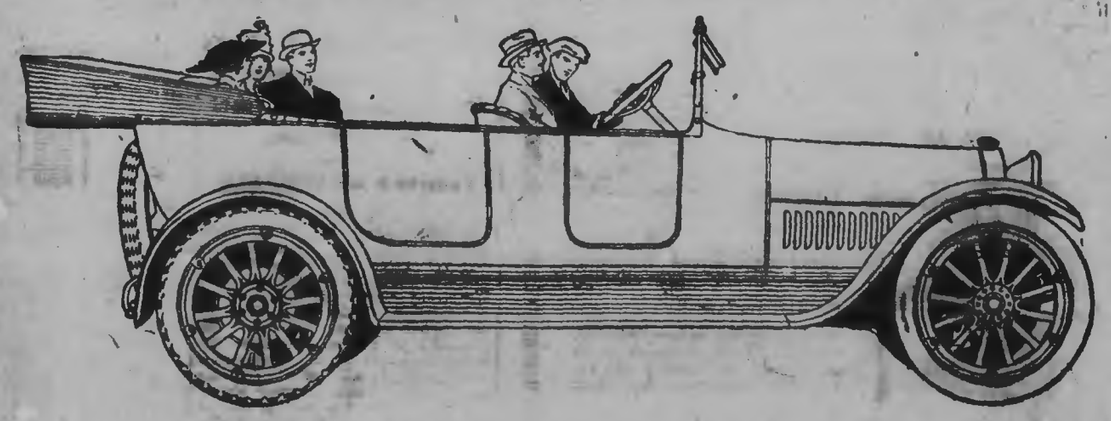
"The Long Peace."

The third peace of Paris is ever memorable, because it inaugurated the longest term of immunity from serious war which Europe has ever known. The long Napoleonic wars seem to have exhausted the nations, who seemed only too glad to get a little respite. Certainly there was a short war between Turkey and Russia, during which the fleet of the former was destroyed in the battle of Navarino by the allies — England, France and Russia — and this was settled by the peace of Adrianople; but it was not much of a bareup.

SUNSET AT 12 O'CLOCK.

The habit of counting 12 o'clock at sunset is very ancient. The Turks, Greeks and most other people in the Levant, have almost always counted 12 o'clock from sunset and to this day the common people cannot understand that their clocks have to be changed every day and not ours. The Turks have officially adopted meridian time but only since the Young Turks came into power—that is, since 1908. The change was even then not made immediately. It encountered a great deal of opposition on religious grounds because the Mohammedan hours of prayer are regulated by the Sun. And the common people still stick to the old system. Only in Constantinople and Smyrna are there many Turks who keep the official meridian time, and the great majority of people throughout the Turkish dominions still count 12 o'clock as their ancestors have from time immemorial, at sunset. — New York Times.

Studebaker



The Studebaker Car

From the Standpoint of Economy

IF ECONOMY is to be your consideration from now on, especially in the purchase of your motor car, you should by all means investigate the Studebaker Car from that standpoint.

Where people know cars, in all probability they buy that car in greatest numbers which gives them the greatest value for their money.

Therefore, in Detroit, where 80% of all cars are made, where people know cars, the official registrations show that there are more Studebakers in use than any other car costing over $500.

In Western Canada, where people prove motor car value and quality, where they test it out, twelve months in the year, on the longest, hardest, hilliest drives, they have found that Studebakers give consistent service, day in and day out, at the least possible maintenance and repair expense.

In the large cities where style is a factor, there are thousands of Studebakers in daily use.

In ratio to power, Studebaker Cars are most economical in gasoline consumption.

In ratio to carrying capacity, their light weight and perfect balance make them most economical in tires—Studebaker owners frequently get from 8,000 to 10,000 miles on a single set of tires.

Studied accessibility reduces inspection, adjustment and repair costs to a minimum.

Therefore, if economy is to be your watchword, buy a Studebaker.

Buy it as an investment—not as an expenditure.

If you want to sell it, or trade it in, it will bring a higher re-sale price in ratio to first cost, than most other cars.

The Studebaker Car is the best work of a great Canadian manufacturing organization; it bears a great name, it carries a splendid reputation, and it is protected by a year's guarantee against defective material and workmanship.

Come in and let us show you, point by point, the quality features of this Canadian built car, the features that make it one of the best automobile "buys" in the world.

Thinks Russia Will Never Quit Unless Starved

NEW YORK, June 6.—Russia will not quit unless she is starved into submission.

This is the opinion of Ralph Dawson, who for two years has represented a New York firm in Petrograd and other Russian cities. He left Russia on April 24.

"America is needlessly apprehensive," said Mr. Dawson yesterday. "Reports of chaotic conditions have been grossly exaggerated. The Romanoff party is dead and no tears were shed at its passing. The freedom of Russia is assured and all she needs to continue a successful warfare against Germany are supplies, ammunition and railway transportation to the battle lines.

"When you consider that the Russian is heroic and devoted enough to fight Germany, armed only with religious images, sticks and stones; when you recall that he has done this three years on cabbage soup, black bread and tea you must conclude he is not a quitter.

"A Socialist revolutionary movement can be formed only when there is a strong industrial proletariat. The vast majority of the lower classes are small peasant proprietors, whose lands have been divided down since the abolition of serfdom, in 1861, until now each owns little more than 'a foot of earth.'

The Conservative Russian.

"None is so conservative as the Russian peasant proprietor, and any movement that is to attack his property rights as a principle will be resented and squashed by him as soon as he is able to understand it."

Relative to recent agitations in Russia, Mr. Dawson said the Russians were enjoying free speech for something new to say stood up and the first time, and anyone who had said it fearlessly. He said exaggerated reports were reaching America, and credence was being given to alleged agitations not half so pronounced as some if those occurring almost daily in this city.

"It is the the policy of the temporary government," he added, "not to use measures that wold smack of the old regime. They think it better to let the people blow off steam, and to permit the crazy intellectuals to prate of idealism to audiences, 90 per cent. of which, being illiterate, do not understand them.

"All wars in the final analysis—are fought by the masses, and we must realize the hardy, patient, devoted character of the Russian peasant, who is accustomed to a rigorous policy of self-denial, to understand that he is the soldier who will walk barefoot to Palestine or die fighting on the battlefields.

"As I crossed on the Trans-Siberian railway, soldiers from Siberian regiments were standing in and upon the roofs of the coaches. None had been on furlough since they were first called and most of them had been fighting from the outbreak of war. One had been in the army three years before war began and had not seen his family in six years, yet he and all his companions were enthusiastically declaring they were going back soon to 'see it out.'

"Beyond doubt, when there is a reorganization of Russian railway traffic under American guidance, the food question will become insignificant.

"System is rapidly becoming evident under the new regime, and autocracy is a thing of the past and will be for ever."

Soldiers Invade Labour Hall And Urge Conscription

LONDON, June 8.—Claiming that anti-conscription talk was to take place and that anti-conscription measures were to be passed, more than two hundred returned men and soldiers-in-training poured into the rooms in which the regular meeting of the trades and labour council was being held, demanded that the delegates stand and sing the national anthem, and that a resolution favouring conscription be passed. Their demands were met, every delegate and soldier uplifting his hand in favouring the measure.

A resolution passed at an emergency meeting of the council last Thursday was designated by the soldiers as anti-conscription. They also took exception to talk which occurred at the meeting, asserting that it cast slurs on the men of the first and second contingents. They stated that they had been informed that another anti-conscription meeting was to be held tonight, and military police later stated that a "tip" to this effect had also reached them. Garrison police were called off the streets and marched to Hyman Hall, where it was in progress there, and other places visited were also innocent of meetings of any nature.

Don't get critical when your boss tells you to do things.

SUFFERING RELIEVED IN OLD AGE

Many people give way too easily to disease when they are getting old. They regard such ailments as Rheumatism and Pains in the Back, Swelling Joints, and Bladder trouble as inevitable and incurable.

But take the case of Mr. Frank Leeland, a well known farmer of St. Raphael, Ont. At the age of 61 he writes to thank us for what Gin Pills have done for him. He had suffered with pains in his back and sides to such an extent that he was forced to quit work. After taking six boxes of Gin Pills he was completely relieved of his pains and says he is as strong as when he was thirty. He is younger than his wife, and she has been greatly benefited by taking Gin Pills.

Probably the sufferings you put down to advancing years will disappear with the use of Gin Pills. They are well worth a trial. Mr. Leeland started with our free sample. A sample will be sent to you free upon request. All dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A WELL LAID PLAN

But One Element In It Had Not Been Provided For

By F. A. MITCHEL

When I entered the detective business I was very young. I had not grown a beard and had a peachlike complexion. My voice was of a medium pitch for a man; but, having once taken a girl's part on the stage, I had learned to speak in falsetto, very like a woman.

One day I was handed a newspaper in which there was a personal that read as follows:

If Annette Thurber will communicate with H. L. B. she will hear something to her advantage.

It was explained to me that Annette Thurber was a niece of one Nicholas Bradford, who had recently died, leaving a large estate. Miss Thurber had kept house for him and nursed him during his last illness. He had told her that he had made a will leaving all his property to her and she would find it in a certain tin box in which he kept his papers, the box being on a shelf in the closet of his home office. After his death she had looked in the box and had not found the document.

No will forthcoming, the property would be divided between the testator's nephew, Henry Lathrop Bradford, the son of an older brother, and Annette Thurber, the daughter of his sister. This Henry Bradford was a scamp. His uncle had befriended him and tried to make a man of him, had failed and had disowned him. Miss Thurber believed that he had stolen the will from the tin box in order that he might under the law obtain half the estate. The personal had undoubtedly been inserted by him with a view to some arrangement with her. What that intended arrangement was she did not know.

A reply was made by Miss Thurber stating that she would receive Henry Bradford at her home any day he chose to call between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. No attention was paid to this, and, the case having been placed by Miss Thurber in the hands of detectives, a new note was dispatched in her name saying that she would meet Bradford at any time or place he might appoint. Miss Thurber then received a bit of paper on which was written, "Lincoln park, 6, 25, 9 p. m."

It was evident that Bradford did not propose to give Miss Thurber any evidence against him. He might deny that the personal had been inserted by him or that he had sent this bit of paper, his object being to meet her without witnesses for some rascally purpose. The opinion of the chief was that Bradford had stolen the will; that he feared to be accused of the theft and wished to make a compromise by which he might receive his share of his uncle's estate.

Miss Thurber and I were brought together, and it was observed that we were about the same height and build. Having secured all the information that was to be had on the matter, I was arrayed in one of her costumes, and at 9 o'clock in the evening on the 25th of June (the sixth month) I tripped daintily into Lincoln park. I had been shown a photograph of Bradford and Miss Thurber was known to him, so, since Lincoln park was simply a block set apart for a breathing space, there was no difficulty in meeting and recognizing each other.

It was not long after my entry into the park that a well dressed man stepped up to me and remarked that it was a fine evening.

"Are you Mr. Bradford?" I asked.

"Yes."

"What is the meaning of all this secrecy?"

"Come this way," was his reply, "and I will tell you."

He led the way to a bench. I sat down, and he sat beside me.

"I wish to see you," he began "about Uncle Nick's will. It has been intimated to me that a certain person knows that a will exists bequeathing all the estate to you. This person will produce the will for a consideration."

"How much does he want?" I asked, coming at once to the point.

"The estate is worth $300,000. The will will be surrendered for a third of the value of the property. You give a note for the amount to be taken up three months after receiving the property."

"No" I said, after feigning to think the matter over. "If a will exists I would rather take my chance of its coming out. And if it does," I here assumed a threatening tone, "I shall send the person who stole it to the penitentiary for a long term of years."

There was silence for a few minutes, at the end of which he asked me how much I would consent to pay. I told him that I would not bind myself to pay anything until I had seen the will and was convinced that the property was left to me and the document was genuine. If so convinced I would give a note for $40,000. He keyed me up to $50,000, which closed the bargain. I had no object in dickering with him, except to induce him to believe that I was making a real deal.

I asked him when and where the exchange of the note for the will should take place, and he replied that he had made arrangements for that. The transaction could be executed at once. He had a cab in waiting, and we would drive to a house where I could sign a note and receive the will. I was rather taken aback by this, for I had expected to report to the chief what I had done and receive his instructions as to my next step. I protested against such haste, but my objection tended to convince the man that I was making a bona fide transaction.

"I need time to think this over," I said.

"And to make arrangements to trap me. Suppose we meet a few days hence what is to prevent your having a force on hand to take the will without giving me the note? No; this matter must go through, if it does go through, between you and me alone and immediately. When it is finished there will be no proof that you signed the note under duress."

"A note," I said, "must be in payment for something."

"I have drawn it to read, 'For and in consideration of his relinquishing all claims on the Bradford estate.'"

"But the will being produced you have no claim on the Bradford estate."

"The will will not have been produced when the note is signed."

"You should have demanded cash."

"You have no cash. Besides, this matter must be settled secretly and at once. Delay would be fatal to me."

"Suppose after I have received the estate I decline to pay the note on the ground that the transaction is criminal?"

"In that case you will not long enjoy your property."

I had been inclined to think his case very weak; but, considering that he was, or supposed he was, dealing with a girl who would not care to live in terror of her life, I changed my opinion.

"But why," I asked, interested more and more in his plan, "would it not be wiser for you to destroy the will and inherit half the estate as heir-at-law?"

"That question I decline to answer. There may be a number of reasons. I may know of another will that I cannot control and which is sure to be produced. My uncle did not trust me and might have put a duplicate will in some one's hand to be used in case I captured or disputed the one he had made. I have no knowledge of such a will. I simply state the case to you hypothetically."

There was no doubt the rascal had thought it all out and had provided for every possible contingency. What was I to do? Delay would be as dangerous to Miss Thurber as to me. I resolved to go with him and take advantage of any favorable circumstance that might arise. So long as he thought I was Miss Thurber I had a great advantage of him. I had a thick veil on my hat, but in the park did not put it over my face. Later, if obliged to face the light it might avail me.

I accompanied my man to a car waiting without the park. We entered it, and he drove away. Presently he stopped and told me he must blindfold me. After objecting I consented, and after that I did not know where we went. When we reached our destination he helped me out of the car and guided me up a few steps into a house. When he removed the bandage from my eyes we were standing in a furnished room. It was dimly lighted, but I put my hands to my eyes to cover my face, pretending that the transition from darkness to light was painful. Nevertheless I caught a glimpse of a table with writing materials on it in the center of the room.

When I took my hands from my eyes I turned my face from the light. I did not know how well the man knew Miss Thurber, but I did not wish him to see my features until I could no longer avoid giving him an opportunity to discover his mistake. Meanwhile he had unlocked a drawer in a bureau and taken out a document, which I surmised to be the will. What appeared to be a note lay on the table. He was unfolding the document, and I surmised intended to hold it up for me to inspect. In another moment he would doubtless call on me to do so and would see my features.

While his eyes were bent on the document I caught sight of the letters, "Last will and testament," printed on it. This was enough for me. I determined to risk its being what I wanted. When he turned from the paper to me he looked into the muzzle of my revolver within an inch of his nose.

Of course he was armed. But what use is a weapon which costs a man his life if he makes a motion to use it?

"Drop that document on the table," I said in my own husky voice.

Surprise, irritation, horror, were written on his face. He dare not disobey. He tossed the will on the table, and I, never taking my eye from his for an instant, picked it up, taking the unsigned note at the same time. Then I began to back out of the room. I backed into a hall and out through a door, he following me, alert to take advantage of my changing my glance for an instant to draw a weapon. I was obliged to back into the unknown; but, having come over the ground even though blindfolded, I had some idea of it and got safely down the steps, on to the sidewalk and kept on till I backed up against an automobile.

The problem was now to get into it and start it without giving him an opportunity to draw and shoot me. I thought it necessary to order him to throw up his hands, enforcing the order by putting a bullet close to his ear. He obeyed readily, and, though I was encumbered with my skirts, I tumbled into the car behind the wheel. What I could not do with my feet in starting I did with my right hand, holding the wheel with my left. In this way I got off, but the moment after I turned my face from my enemy a bullet whistled close to my ear. I ducked, and before another came I was not clearly distinguishable in the darkness.

When I returned to the office with the will, for which I had paid nothing, great was the surprise of all concerned. Miss Thurber bought the unsigned note of me for $10,000, signing it in payment. I afterward set myself up in business with the funds.

The Truth About Corns

You have read much fiction about corns. Were that not so there would be no corns. All people would use Blue-jay.

Here is the truth, as stated by a chemist who spent 25 years on this corn problem. And as proved already on almost a billion corns:

"This invention—Blue-jay—makes corn troubles needless. It stops the pain instantly, and stops it forever. In 48 hours the whole corn disappears, save in rare cases which take a little longer."

That is the truth, and millions of people know it. Every month it is being proved on nearly two million corns.

So long as you doubt it you'll suffer. The day that you prove it will see your last corn-ache.

It costs so little—is so easy and quick and painless—that you owe yourself this proof. Try Blue-jay tonight.

Justice Galt Has No Fear At Hands Of Commissioners

Evidence Will Show Findings Justify Charge Against Rogers.

WINNIPEG, June 8.—Justice Galt was shown the statement of Premier Borden in the House announcing a commission to go over his findings against Hon. Robert Rogers, and an announcement that the minister had resigned for the time being. He refused to comment, but seemed satisfied no injury would be done to his reputation by any commission which had the evidence before it of the great college injury.

Politicians of affiliation here claim this ends the political career of Rogers; that it was the Premier's way of letting his colleague down easily and clearing the way for coalition.

Winnipeg's member has been on the down grade politically for the past year, and the surprise of the year was Sir R. L. Borden's inviting Rogers to accompany him to England to the war council.

Justice Galt comes of an old Conservative family in Toronto and Montreal, and never had any leanings towards the Liberals previous to going on the bench. Intimate friends of Rogers who returned this week from Ottawa stated to-night they anticipated the blow was coming.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

OPPOSED TO SMALL SHIPS.

Committee of Manchester, Eng., shipping men, in opposing building of small ships, says that comparing ships of 2,000 and 16,000 tons displacement, carrying 650 and 8,575 tons cargo respectively, and taking north Atlantic passage as a basis, there would have to be built each year 2,460 of smaller ships, and only 185 of the larger. Smaller ships would cost £111,000,000 and larger only £46,000,000.

WOMEN LEARN HOW TO MILK ON DUMMY COWS

How Girls of All Ranks Are Trained To Be Farmers

At the call of National Service about 2,500 women have gone to training farms all over the country to work in connection with the sixty-four agricultural committees. They have not been daunted by the picture of hard, heavy, and dirty work presented to them at the Albert Hall by Mr. Prothero, but have set against this the peace of the country, its wholesomeness and kindly sounds, and the new friendship with dumb animals which it promises. Already some of the women are working on a farm containing the most famous herd of Jersey cows in the country.

A small party left St. Ermin's Hotel, says the London Times, to visit a home-farm in Essex, where some ten girls are in training, or rather going through the four weeks' test of their capacity for farm work. From this centre were visited various farms in the neighbourhood which are supplied with women from the training farm.

The fame of these workers has spread throughout the country, for the owner of the home farm is now taking women direct from the National Service Selection Boards. He has been training women for about a year.

A woman farm bailiff met the party at the first of the farms, neat in gaiters and a long coat of heavy drill. She is the leader of the land workers and says that the women, drawn from varying social grades, forget their environment and work like good comrades. A colonel's daughter, two maid-servants, a colonial girl, two munition workers who broke down from too much indoor work, and a young girl from shop-gazing Kensington, are among the students, and they have somehow got the country into their blood, thrown nerves and town life aside, and, in the clean, sweet air, are improving in physique. Only healthy girls are taken, but these quickly add to their vigour. As the girl bailiff swung open the door of the cow-shed, where the new hands were milking or doing the very dirty work of cleaning the sheds, which is the first thing they are put to, one saw the same look of radiant health. It was, if anything, more pronounced in the girls who, out of their training, were at work in the neighbouring farms. The dummy cows—there are two of them—were ready for practice-milking—square woodmen bodies with wooden legs and wide udders. Brown Bess, the favourite, had introduced many novices of the soothing art.

Use Dummy Cows.

"Most of the girls who come," said the bailiff, "have never fed or even touched a cow, and they cannot be taught on the cow, since the value of a milch cow is now about £50, and wrong handling will ruin them. So they learn on 'Brown Bess,' and she filled the dummy cow's udder with water and sat down and showed how the novice gained strength in her wrists. "Girls who play the piano," she said, "and girls who play hockey learn very quickly. Some get into it at once, and when they have learned they practice for a day or so on goats, and then they take to the cows. The most important thing is to get the girls accustomed to the cows and the cows to the girls."

On the home farm the goats were busy acting as lawnmowers in their feeding time and saving the farmer the loss of another gardener. In milking the goats the girls gain confidence, as they cannot hurt them. Old goats are the best for this purpose, and they are made to stand on a table so that the udder is about the same height as a cow. The goat's milk is given to the delicate babies in the village. Before learning to milk the cows the girls are taught to feed them and then, when the cows are used to them and to their voices, they learn to groom them.

GREAT WHITE WAY BEAD BECOMES GREAT MILKY WAY

NO GAY WINE PARTIES—NOTHING BUT RATTLE OF COW CARTS.

NEW YORK. — In Europe they set the clocks ahead an hour in the summer time and save thereby an hour of daylight each day. In New York City they are now setting the clock in Broadway ahead three hours every evening and saving thereby three hours worth of electric light bills and a headache Sunday morning. Europe has saved her daylight, and New York city has lost her night life.

All of which is one way of presenting the fact that Broadway has turned over a new leaf—leaf No. 4,862. For last night ended the second week during which Broadway after one o'clock in the morning has been as "dry" as the annual report of the Society for the Collection of Doorknobs in Abyssinia.

The Great White Way after one o'clock has become nothing more or less than a paved street until the rumble of early dairy wagons, around 4 o'clock, makes it the Great Milky Way.

On the profit side of the ledger might be written the fact that thousands of persons reported themselves to stenographers and fellow clerks during the week as having awakened for the first time in years with a desire to jump over the foot of the bed and do a fandango. Tongues are no longer the size of telephone books in the morning, and calls for "brain dusters" have decreased perceptibly.

On the other side of the sheet may be written in red ink the authoritative fact that hundreds of persons have found themselves without work; restaurants have with few exceptions noticed with dismay the shrinkage of receipts in the cashiers' offices every night, and hotel keepers have found themselves for the first time this season with vacant rooms.

These entries, however, are based upon mercenary considerations solely. Over against them upon the profit side, must be placed the moral value to a community united in observance of a patriotic edict. An investigation during the two weeks found not one restaurateur, cab driver, waiter, bartender or any other person of the thousands affected directly by the closing order, who upon the score of money losses, desired a change back to all night licenses.

"No matter what the effect on my business if the law is good. I'm for it and will observe it faithfully," was the usual answer to inquiries regarding conditions.

In almost all restaurants, cabarets, and other amusement places up and down Broadway, the clock has simply been advanced. Performances which began at 1 o'clock have been set forward to 10 o'clock. Midnight suppers may now be eaten at half-past 10 o'clock. Service to the theatre parties has been speeded up so that when 1 o'clock strikes the guests have just finished the demi-tasses. Chorus girls who have been accustomed to entertaining themselves after entertaining audiences, have learned anew to take home edibles for the little gas range in the kitchenette.

As one experienced restaurateur phrased it, most persons only sit up late because they are afraid something will happen after they are gone and they won't be there to see it. They are perfectly willing to go home at 1 o'clock or 10 o'clock, or any other hour just so long as everybody else must go home, too. All they needed was a mayor along the lines of the Old Woman who Lived in the Shoe, who would whip all her children soundly and send them to bed, before she could know what to do.

PRONOUNCING "JOFFRE"

(From the New York Herald)

To the Editor:

Will you kindly give the correct pronunciation of the name of the hero of the Marne? Is the "o" in the name to take the sound of "o" in "job" or in "Jove"? It is being pronounced "As You Like It."—R. H.

New York City, May 31, 1917.

The initial "J" has the sound of "Zh." The "o" has the short sound of the "o" in coffee—not our familiar American "cawfee"—in God and in not. Thus we get the first half of the name "Zhof," and in the remaining "fre" the "e" is mute and is slurred, so that the whole name is pronounced as if it were one syllable "Zhofrh"

Sometimes a plain meal can be made interesting by adding a very good dessert.

Food Situation Grave Declares Hon. J. D. Hazen

The greatest economy and frugality must be exercised, and that condition will continue to exist between now and the next harvest, in order that the people of the British Isles may have sufficient food for their wants. As a matter of fact the condition is so serious that for three or four weeks before we left Great Britain no potatoes at all were served at the hotel where we were staying or at any hotel in the city of London. Sugar was extremely scarce, and flour was scarce and had to be carefully husbanded. At the hotel where we were staying, under the order of the director of food supply, Lord Davenport, only a small portion of bread was served to the guests at each meal, and we saw no such thing as white bread, because the wheat flour was being mixed with rye and with meal made from barley. In order to make the wheat flour go as far as possible."

The above statement was made by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries in parliament upon his return from England, where he attended the Imperial War Cabinet. They are serious words made in all seriousness by one who knows whereof he is speaking. Every Canadian can do his part in the next six months — the vital ones of the war—in eliminating waste and in practising real economy in foodstuffs.

West Virginia Hits Loafers

CHARLESTON, W., Va.—When it comes to simon pure democracy, the bill passed by the legislature of this state is put forward for consideration.

It provides jail for any kind of male loafer between the ages of 16 and 60.

It declines to distinguish between a tin can hobo and a handsome Harold of silver spion marked nativity wandering the links with gold-mounted golf clubs—not even if his income were wice as large as Rockefeller's and Carnegie's together.

All Must Go to Work.

His position of living in elegant idleness on his income is as reprehensible under this law as that of the hobo mooching backdoor handouts. He's got to go to work in thirty days or beat it beyond the boundaries of West Virginia or be arrested and put to work mending roads, digging ditches, and building fences, plowing fields, or hoeing potatoes, besides being fined $100.

The law is designed to wipe out all idleness in the state until the war is over, and is scheduled to include all able bodied male idlers, loafers, and loafers," and in no case shall the possession by the accused of money, property, or income sufficient to supoprt himself and those legally dependent upon him be a defense to any prosecution under this act."

Must Work 36 Hours a Week.

Under the law a loafer is one "who shall fail to or refuse to regularly and steadily engage for at least thirty-six hours per week in some lawful and recognized business, profession, occupation, or employment, whereby he may produce or earn sufficient to support himself and those legally dependent upon him, and shall be held as a vagrant and be guilty of misdemeanor."

If the loafer has dependents, some compensation will be given them for his enforced labour by the state, but otherwise he'll not get a penny for himself.

Only bona fide sudents are exempt and these only during school terms.

PUT WOMEN IN TENTS.

Circular Tents being Supplied by Militia Dept. for Fruit District.

Thirty-five circular tents are being supplied by the Militia Department for the use of the women who are going to help out the fruit farmers this summer in the Niagara belt. The Department of Trades and Labor of the Public Works Department have received this intimation from Ottawa. At first marquees were suggested by the department but the Militia department and the Hamilton representatives thought circular tents would be better.

So far as known the following are the number of women who will be at work this summer in that district:—Beamsville, 50; Bronte, 12; Oakville, 12; and Victoria, 20, makin ga total of 94, all of whom are willing to sleep in tents. The arrangement at present is to place three women in each tent, and if more tents are needed the Militia Department will likely supply them.

BRITISH CONSOLIDATE THEIR GAINS

FRENCH STOP ENEMY'S SEVERE ATTACKS

The New British Success Is A Strong Menace Towards Lille

From Now On Germany Must Keep an Unusually Strong Force Always Opposite the Ypres Sector ---British Are Busy Consolidating Gains and Preparing For Counter Attacks Which So Far Have Been Noticeably Weak---German Attacks On French Gain No Ground.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, June 9.—The counter attack stage was reached by the British advance in the Ypres-Wytschaete sector to-day. All through the night, front despatches said, the victorious British were busy consolidating their new positions, digging fresh trench systems and preparing for the expected enemy counter thrusts. The German assaults of this type which, according to the rules of the war game, may be expected to follow immediately after an advance by the British, have all been noticeably weak. The demoralization caused by the unprecedently terrific British artillery fire and the mine operations all seemed to have had their effect on the Germans. With the Messines-Wytschaete ridge now held by the British—the "impregnable position" taken—it was pointed out to-day that from now on Germany must keep an unusually strong force always opposite the Ypres sector, because of the menace toward Lille. The British victory therefore is not alone important in the ground gained, the commanding strategic positions on the ridge now held, but also because it will further deplete the reserve strength of the enemy by the necessity of the Germans massing forces around Lille.

The War Office official statement regarding the fresh British attack on the Lens front to-day says: "Operations were carried out by us with complete success last night, further south on a wide front from the south of Lens to La Bassee. South of the Souchez River our troops entered the German positions on a front of over four miles and penetrated to a depth of more than half a mile. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy, and more than seventy prisoners and a number of machine guns were captured by us. Our own casualties were light. The enemy trenches were also entered successfully north of the Souchez River, south-east of Lens and south-west of La Bassee. Large numbers of Germans were killed and great damage was done to the enemy's defences. A further forty-four prisoners, including three officers, and several machine guns, were taken by us. The sector of the Hindenburg line still held by the enemy west of Bullecourt was raided by our troops last night."

LONDON, June 9.—Three German officers were killed and the Kaiser himself barely escaped, when a railway station at Ghent was bombed by aeroplanes recently, according to advices to the Exchange Telegraph Company to-day. Von Hindenburg, Commander-in-Chief of the German armies, and Prince Eitel were also present at the station, besides other members of the General Staff. None of them were injured, the despatch said.

BRITISH WIN AGAIN SOUTH OF THE SOUCHEZ

LONDON, June 9.—A powerful German attack directed over a front of six miles, covering all the ground just won the great British drive in Belgium, was completely broken down by the British Are, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day.

The British attacked last night south of the Souchez River and entered the German positions on a front of more than two miles, the War Office announces. The German line was penetrated to a depth of more than half a mile. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans.

LONDON, June 9.—Major William Redmond, M.P., brother of John Redmond, Irish Nationalist leader, died of wounds to-day while returning in an ambulance from the victorious British attack in Flanders.

LONDON, June 9.—Foreign Minister Arthur J. Balfour reached a British port to-day, back from his special mission to the United States and his visit to Canada.

LONDON, June 9.—Major-General Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Force to France, was formally received by King George in a private audience to-day. General Lord Brooke, formerly of the Canadian forces, made the presentation.

PARIS, June 9.—(French Official).—Germany's continued counter offensive blows against the French lines were again fruitless after a severe night fighting, the War Office reported to-day. "North of St. Quentin, during the night, artillery fire was very active," the statement said. "On the Chemin de Dames front, south of Filain, to the east of Corny, the enemy renewed his attacks, with the accompaniment of artillery fire, in all sectors. North-east of Corny four successive attacks were broken up in our fire. North of Froidmont two German raids were checked with heavy losses. South-east of Corbeny, and south of Courcy, in Chevalier Wood, enemy detachments were repulsed."

BOULOGNE, June 9.—The announcement that French aeroplanes had bombarded German submarines on June 2 and 4 was officially made here to-day.

ZURICH, June 9.—Emperor Charles has asked Dr. Wekerle to undertake the formation of a new Hungarian Cabinet, according to despatches received to-day from Budapest. Premier Tisza resigned several weeks ago. Count Andrassy has been unable to obtain a Ministry which would survive the present unsettled political and economic situation in Hungary.

PETROGRAD, June 9.—Four regiments of the Seventh Russian Army refused to obey the orders of their officers to-day. One additional regiment was reported to have arrested its own officers. Minister of War Kerensky ordered the arrest of all responsible for the incident, and they will be court-martialled.

THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE TO SPLIT THE LIBERAL PARTY

Mass Meeting of Liberals in Toronto To-night Means Parting of the Ways Between Conscriptionist Liberals and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "Anti" Section

MAY MEAN NEW LEADER

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 9.— Although Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not resigned from the leadership of the Liberal party in the House of Commons, it is expected here that the mass meeting for conscription called by the Ontario Liberals for Massey Hall to-night will be practically the formal parting of the ways between the conscription and anti-conscription Liberals of Canada. In other words a definite split between Sir Wilfrid's anti-conscriptionist followers and the Liberals who uphold the immediate selective draft measure will be endorsed by them to-night. It will leave the way open for the appointment of a new leader for the conscription section of the Liberals, which includes the majority of the Liberal members of Parliament. Foremost among the speakers will be Michael Clark, M.P. for Red Deer, Alberta, and believed to represent the views of most of the western Liberal M.P.'s, and N. W. Rowell, leader of the Liberal Opposition of Ontario, who is thought to have a mandate from the Ontario and Maritime Provinces Liberals in the matter. Hon. George P. Graham, Sir Wilfrid's chief lieutenant in the Commons, or Frank B. Carvell, M.P., of Carleton, are regarded here as the most likely for the new leadership. Graham has probably the best support at present.

HANLAN HOWARD IS HOME IN HIAWATHA

The return of Private Hanlan Howard this week to his home in Hiawatha, and the reception by his Mississauga friends offers another evidence of the long arm of war. Some of the volunteers from the little Rice Lake settlement will never return, some of them have distinguished themselves in the service and scarcely an eligible man remains at home. And these are Canadians who have never received the franchise, they have yet to cast their first vote. Although they did not enjoy Canadian citizenship, as such, their young men volunteered almost to a man. Some day, perhaps, the patriotism of Hiawatha may be fittingly recognized.

FIVE CANADIANS HAVE BEEN AWARDED THE VICTORIA CROSS

Are Listed To-day Among Thirty Recipients of the Coveted Decoration--Two Are Ontario Men---Peterboro' Members of Cobourg Battery Are Home on Last Leave ---To-day's General Military News.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, June 9.—Five Canadians, including two Ontario men, are listed to-day among thirty recipients of the coveted Victoria Cross. Sergt. E. W. Sifton, of Williamsburg, Ont., who enlisted at St. Thomas, his comrades being held up by machine gun fire, went on alone till he put a machine gun crew out of action, then held back single-handed in the trench all German reinforcements till his fellow Canadians had gained the position. He died at his post, but saved many comrades' lives, and practically captured the position himself.

Captain T. W. Macdowell, D.S.O., of Maitland, Ont., officer of an Eastern Ontario battalion, with the assistance of two gunners, captured two machine guns with two German officers and seventy-five men, and although wounded in the hand, held the position for five days till discovered and relieved by his battalion.

Other Canadians who received the Victoria Cross for conspicuous bravery are: Lieut. F. M. W. Harvey, of Medicine Hat; Private Wm. Johnstone McNeil, of Moose Jaw, Sask.; and Major Fred. Lumsden, of the British Marine Artillery, but formerly staff officer with the Canadian corps. The latter recovered captured German guns from counter attacking German infantry with extreme gallantry.

Eight Peterborough members of the Cobourg Heavy Battery are home on their final leave for the week end, the drafts to which they belong being slated to leave Cobourg the latter end of next week. The eight local boys who are home and who will return to Cobourg on the 8.10 G.T.R. train on Tuesday morning are Gunners Frank Barrie, Jack Vincent, Scott, J. Turnbull, Clarence Hallowell, W. McGee, Alf. Hargrove and J. McLeod. There are several other Peterborough soldiers in the Cobourg battery at present, including A. D. Hone, of the Collegiate Institute staff.

Word has been received to the effect that Private George Herbert Porter has been wounded in the right arm and left leg. He is now in a military hospital at Calais. Private Porter, whose home is in Sherbrooke, has local relatives.

Cobourg Battery Recruiting.

Cobourg, June 8.—About 30 more recruits have signed up with the Cobourg Heavy Battery in the past week, including ten Toronto men, the others coming from Belleville, Windsor, Niagara Falls and Stratford, as well as this locality. There are about 130 men enlisted with the Cobourg Heavy Battery overseas draft here.

Lieut. Nickle Returns.

Kingston, June 8.—Lieut. William Nickle, 21st Battalion, son of W. F. Nickle, M.P., Kingston, has arrived at Quebec, and is proceeding to Ottawa to visit his father. He was twice wounded, once while a private with the Princess Patricias, and in April with the 21st Battalion.

CHAPLAIN'S LETTERS TO MR. JOSEPH PICARD, SR.

Of the many expressions of sympathy received by Mr. Joseph Picard, Sr., in the death of his son, Capt. R. E. Picard, killed in action, two of the most comforting letters were received from the Catholic Chaplain of the 1st Brigade and the Church of England Chaplain of the 3rd Battalion, and formerly the 81st Battalion, C.E.F., with which Capt. Picard enlisted. The letters are as follows:

1st Can. Inf. Brigade,
France, May 6, 1917.

Mr. Jos. Picard,

Dear Sir,—I want to express to you my deep sympathy and sorrow at the death of Capt. Picard. As a soldier he was fearless and conscientious. The battalion hadn't a better officer. But as the R.C. chaplain, it is not of that I wish to speak. I have been a year at the front, and in that time many Catholic officers have come and gone, but I never had an officer such a practical Catholic as your son.

In this work it is often difficult to get word to the battalion about church services, but I never had any difficulty about the 3rd Battalion.

Captain Picard always organized and notified the men whether the service was on Sunday or week day. He would take beads to the front line in case any of the men should need them, and he was always to the front in giving them, a good example. He went to confession and communion with his men just before going into this last battle.

I cannot enumerate his good works. God alone has kept a faithful account of them. Were this world alone the end of our striving I know that his death and loss would be irreparable. But I know also that a good Catholic boy such as he was could have sprung only from the best of Catholic parents. That, moreover, while feeling heartbroken over his loss, they, by their faith, will recognize the goodness of God even in their affliction.

May God, Who alone can measure the greatness of your sorrow, mete out to you the courage and strength to bear up under this great affliction.

Yours with deepest sympathy,
F. M. Lochary, R.C. Chaplain,
1st Can. Inf. Brigade.

OFFICIAL STORY OF BRITISH VICTORY

British Casualties in Capturing Messines Ridge Were Comparatively Light---German Report Admits Loss of Important Position.

ELABORATE DEFENCES

LONDON, June 9—The British losses in yesterday's attack in Belgium were light, according to announcements issued here to-day. The statement says the battle became a gauge of the ability of the Germans to stop the British advance under conditions as favourable to them as an army can ever hope for, with every advantage of ground and preparation, and with the knowledge that an attack was impending. The Germans admit the loss of several points to the British forces.

The announcement follows:

"The position captured by us yesterday was one of the enemy's most important strongholds on the Western front. Dominating as it did the Ypres salient and giving the enemy complete observation over it, he neglected no precautions to render the position impregnable. These conditions enabled the enemy to overlook all our preparations for attack, and he had moved up reinforcements to meet us. The battle, therefore, became a gauge of the ability of the German troops to stop our advance under conditions as favourable to them as an army can ever hope for, with every advantage of ground and preparation and with the knowledge that an attack was impending.

ELABORATE SYSTEM OF DEFENCES.

"The German forward defences consisted of an elaborate and intricate system of well-wired trenches, and strong points forming a defensive belt over a mile in depth. Numerous farms and woods were thoroughly prepared for defence, and there were large numbers of machine guns in the German garrisons. Guns of all calibres, recently increased in numbers, were placed to bear not only on the front, but on the flanks of an attack. Numerous communicating trenches and switch lines, radiating in all directions, were amply provided with strongly-constructed concrete dugouts and machine gun emplacements designed to protect the enemy garrison and machine gunners from the effect of our bombardment. In short, no precaution was omitted that could be provided by the incessant labour of years, guided by the experience gained by the enemy in his previous defeats on the Somme at Arras and on Vimy Ridge.

NINETEEN MINES EXPLODED.

Despite the difficulties and disadvantages which our troops had to overcome, further details of yesterday's fighting show that our first assault and the subsequent attacks were carried out in almost exact accordance with the time table previously arranged.

"At 3.10 a.m., nineteen deep mines were exploded simultaneously beneath the enemy's defences, by which large portions of both his front and support trenches, including extensive dugout and mining systems, were completely wrecked. Immediately upon the explosion of the mines, our guns opened and our infantry assault was launched.

"Within a few minutes the enemy's first line system was carried on the whole front attacked. Our troops then pressed on, with scarcely a pause, up the western slopes of

MANY DIFFICULTIES IN THE PATH OF IRISH CONVENTION

Prospects Continue to Rise and Fall Like a Barometer, and Each Passing Day Sees a Change

NO CHAIRMAN YET

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, June 9th. — The prospects for the Irish convention continue to rise and fall like a barometer. Each passing day sees a change. Delay, which is always dangerous, has been greatly increased by the action of the Orangemen. The government plan was ready more than a week ago and the Irish leaders without accepting any responsibility but in order to help expeditite matters, agreed to the proposals but the Orangemen balked and insisted on first holding a committee rather than a general council. And so the days have past without anything definite being accomplished.

If this attitude of Orange irreconcilability be persited in it is quite possible though not probable that the proposed convention for the settlement of the Irish home rule question may never sit. Under the government plan every county, city and town in Ireland would be represented thus covering the entire urban and rural population. Five members are allowed the Orangemen, only about one-fifth of their representation. The same number of delegates was allowed the Southern Unionists and three members to the Protestant churches as compared with four alloted to the Catholics. Though the former represents only a fourth of the population, what the Orangemen dread is that all parties in Ireland, including the Southern Unionists, will combine against partition and partition still seems to be their unalterable demand.

On the other hand, Murphy of the Independence, is leaving no stone unturned in his attempts to wreck the convention by the vilification of the Irish leaders and mendacious suggestions that they are helping Premier

A MOST USEFUL BOOK.

There has come into the possession of The Examiner a little book entitled, "The Children's Guide to Christ and the Lord's Suppe·," by Rev. Robert Pogue. This excellent little book is published by Rev. Douglas Fraser Toronto, who has charge of the Sunday school and juvenile religious literature of the Presbyterian Church. He has long been seeking a little work dealing with children's relation to the Lord's Supper and the practical Christian life. Two manuscripts on the subject were submitted to him and that of Rev. Mr. Pogue chosen and published. The choice appears to have been a wise one, as one may see by a perusal of it. It seems to meet the want long felt by educationists of the importance of the very early beginning of the religious instruction and training of the young. It is divided into eight chapters, leading logically from first principles to the culmination of the Christian life and experience in the solemn associations of the great sacrament instituted by our Lord. It is written in plain, simple but strong and terse Anglo-Saxon. It may be used by parents and teachers to their children and pupils, and by ministers in "Communicants' Classes." The little book should, and no doubt will, meet with large use and with profit to all those interested in the welfare of "the lambs of the flock." The Rev. Mr. Pogue has put into the book much of the devotion and spiritual earnestness that characterize his ministry among us from week to week.

The proper fitting of our children for lives of usefulness is one of the most difficult problems of Christian civilization.

BAD EITHER WAY.

The Rogers episode in parliament is in one sense a good thing. If Hon. Robert Rogers is not bluffing—if he feels that he is innocent of the offences that Mr. Justice Galt found him guilty of—it is to be hoped for the credit of Canada that he will be able honestly to have it demonstrated. The credit of Canada is involved in having it made manifest that a Minister of the Crown, an adviser of His Majesty the King, is not justly the besmirched man that Mr. Justice Galt's judgment made him. On the other hand the credit of the country is equally involved in the consequence of Mr. Rogers' possible exculpation. If he is innocent of the Galt offences, then we have the spectacle of a Judge of the Supreme Court, unable or unwilling, to estimate and weigh evidence, and guilty of biassed, vindictive judgment, and if so, as unworthy to hold his place as is the Minister, if the judgment pronounced against him is justified and just. Mr. Justice Galt was appointed by the present government upon the recommendation of Mr. Rogers; and it seems a strange thing that he should, without very strong justification in evidence and facts, condemn his appointor, and administer reproof to the appointment for having appointed a man to the bench who shows himself unworthy of his office. We demand rigid, uprightness of our judiciary, considering that we have prided ourselves upon in the past; it must be composed of men in whom we can unreservedly trust; and we sincerely hope that it may be shown Mr. Justice Galt has not done anything unworthy, anything that does not measure with strict justice and fair judicial dealing. And it is to be sincerely hoped that Hon. Robert Rogers, as a Canadian Minister of the Crown, may have it demonstrated that he is not guilty of the offences, that if committed, make him utterly unworthy of holding office, or even enjoying liberty at present. We must demand as high a standard from our public servants as from the Judges on the bench. The situation is plainly a difficult one; if the Minister is right in his claims of innocence, then the Judge is in the wrong. If the Judge is in the right, then the Minister is in the wrong. In either event, the penalty, as is the way of the world, comes upon the innocent, the people of Canada, who stand to be injured in reputation on account of the wrong doing of one of our public servants.

Three hundred years ago, George Herbert, the English poet, aptly asked, "Canst thou both have thy cake and eat it?"

THE PENNY BANK.

The Examiner has received the reports for March and April of the Penny Bank, Toronto, one of the head offices of the system. The report covers twenty-eight of the thirty-four centres. The monthly deposits average 51 cents for the two months, and the total deposits for March, 1917, in the Penny Banks was $34,686, nearly $15,000 in excess of March, 1916; for April, 1917, the total deposits were $31,626, nearly $16,000 in excess of the deposits for April, 1916. The total amount to the credit of the Penny Banks in the Post Office savings bank is $383,000, earning at 4 per cent., $13,220 per year for the juvenile capitalists.

These seem small figures in these times when we speak and spend in millions, but it means an income of $39.17 per year for each of the school centres of the Penny Bank, or under the pending legislation giving authorization to invest Penny Bank funds in war securities, at 5 1-2 per cent. yield, the averaged interest income of each Penny Bank centre would be $58.75—income derived from money saved which but for the Penny Bank would have been wasted. If the total deposits of 34 centres total, as they do, $383,000, increasing them tenfold would increase the total of deposits to the credit of Canadian children in their teens, to $3,820,000, or nearly four million dollars.

The unthinking and unsympathetic with saving and thrift, may jeer at and disparage the Penny Bank in the schools, but it is considered of so much much importance that the government of the country and parliament have taken so much notice of the Penny Bank that they have made it the subject of an Act of Parliament; and on Wednesday last the Minister of Finance introduced amending legislation to authorize the Penny Banks to invest in government securities at virtually 5 1-2 per cent., instead of depositing funds in the Post Office savings banks, which Sir Thomas White said, paid by special arrangement, 4 per cent. Think of the many millions of money that would be saved from foolish and even harmful squandering, if all the eight million population of Canada should practice saving in a manner similar to the few Penny Banks! And think, too, that in addition to the extent to which the country would be financially strengthened and materially benefitted, of the gain that would come from universal practice of the virtues of citizenship that would be inseparable from the practice of habits of saving and thrift.

But the mere saving of a comparatively trifling amount of money is not the chief benefit of the Penny Bank. That benefit consists in practically instilling into children's minds the great idea of saving and thrift, and developing habits of saving—two things that will operate upon children all their lives and make them better citizens, who, when in process of time the whole population would be added, would rank as a thrifty, prosperous nation, of higher potential usefulness as citizens of a country that would be immensely developed by the possession of such citizens with such habits.

A penny saved is tuppence clear; a pin a day's a groat a year.

County Good Roads Overseer Has Resigned

LINDSAY, June 9. — It took the Victoria County Council some time to recover from the surprise they received on Friday when Mr. Jas. B. Begg announced to the committee on Roads and Bridges that owing to unforseen circumstances he would be compelled to resign his position as County Good Roads Superintendent. Before making this announgement Mr. Begg reported that he had gone over the system with the engineer, and a little repair work had been done in Eldon township. It was difficult to know just where to begin work when he had been advised to go easy for the present in expenditures and there were 350 miles of road to consider. He had endeavoured to get a gang of men to do repair work, but they were almost impossible to get, and the wages demanded were excessive. Mr. Begg thought he could not do justice to the work under existing circumstances, and suggested that for the present the reeves of the different townships look after the work at hand.

The Joys And Advantages, To Individual And State, Of Owning One's Home

The proper way to figure the cost of owning one's home is to count interest at a fair rate on the entire investment, together with the taxes, insurance, up-keep, repairs and so on, and it should be remembered that when one rents, the landlord must not only charge enough to cover all those expenses but to cover his profit besides. The landlord can not afford to rent his property for a sum that will bring him merely ordinary interest on his investment—he could loan his money and get that, without risk or trouble incidental to property ownership.

Owning one's own house means saving the landlord's profit. The fearsome "depreciation," or "keeping up the place" bugaboo, which deters so many from buying or building, is mostly a false-alarm; in any live, growing city or town the appreciation in the value of the property will more than offset the depreciation of the improvement thereon. As an incentive to save, there is nothing better than going into debt for a home.

Then there is that great satisfaction and pride of being under one's own roof, and the gratification of being able to "potter around" and "fix things up" to one's heart's content, knowing all the while, that every added convenience or improvement is adding in dollars and cents to the value of the property, and that some day, one will "have something," even though it be only a three-room cottage with a yard hardly bigger than a table-spread—but it will be "home."

One Couple's Story.

Here is the story of how one young couple bought a house:

"Three months after we were married we started housekeeping in a four-room "shack"—it deserves no better name—for which we paid $7 a month.

"We were then living in a small town, and it seemed the natural and proper thing to do—to live in a rented house. Most of our slender savings had gone for furniture; my salary was small, and a house of our own seemed far away as the mountains on the moon.

"About eight months after we had commenced keeping house something happened to start me thinking. Accidentally, I learned that our landlord had borrowed a sum of money with which to build more houses—like the one we occupied—to rent.

"I reasoned; there must be money made in renting property to other people; so that night I did some tall figuring.

"The house we were in had cost about $800 to build; the land was worth $100; a total of $700.

The landlord was borrowing money at 6 per cent. interest, and allowed us to use it for trifle more than 15 per cent; for we were paying $108 a year for the use of that $700 worth of "shack."

"Even after counting off his taxes, insurance, upkeep and so on, we were paying him a mighty good profit on his investment. Right then and there we decided that, some way, we would get a house of our own. We would take the landlord's profit ourselves.

Made the Plunge.

"Two months later our chance came. Our first house was of modest proportions; still we hoped at the chance when a five-room cottage, in reasonably good repair and with a fair-sized lot, was offered us for $850. Scraping together all our real cash, we found that we could pay $150 down. The owner accepted this, provided that we would pay 8 per cent. interest on the blance and $60 on the principal every six months; he would not be bothered with monthly payments. We bought the house and moved in.

"After we had been a year in our new home we did some more figuring. The expense outlay of our ownership for the year had been $81.36; this included interest on the debt, taxes and insurance for the year, upkeep and repairs to the amount of $19.82. This was $86.64 less than our rent for the year before. Our average monthly disbursement for the second year had been $16.78—$6.78 expense and $10 applying on the debt—as against $9, all expense, for the previous year. Besides, we were living in a better house and had the pleasure and satisfaction of owning our home, which is not the least thing to be taken into account when considering the question of renting vs. ownership.

Second House.

"A year later we moved to a larger town. Our home in the smaller place was leased to a good tenant for a year at $10 a month, and, being still determined that we would pay no landlord's profits, we purchased our second house for $1,700—new location.

property being a trifle higher in our "We paid $200 down, and agreed to pay $200 a year, with 7 per cent. interest. This place had been renting for $15 a month; our expense per month was $11.85. When the lease on the house in the smaller town expired, we sold the place for $100 profit. Instead of paying on our second house the money realized from this sale, we bought two lots in a good location in the larger town for $650, paying down the cash received from the sale of the first house. When, after another year, we disposed of the second house at a profit, we found that we had enough money to finish paying for the lots, and, with our accumulated savings, to leave us a few hundred dollars over to put on the house which we intended to build. Our income was by this time much more than it had been when we were married which naturally aided a lot; but, looking back on it all, I am doubtful if we would have ever realized our ambition of having a home of our own, built, just like we want it, if we had not had the mortgage on one of the two first houses staring us in the face all the time, compelling us to save.

Realized Ideal.

"We are now in the sixth year of our married life, and have occupied for almost a year the house which we built on our lots. This house is an embodiment of our own ideas. Although not large, it is thoroughly modern, with hardwood floors, hot water heat, fire places, electric lights basement, running water and a fair quota of other conveniences. Within three months after we moved in, we were offered a profit of not quite $500 on the place, and, since then, two adjoining lots, the same size as our own, have sold for $2,000. Of course the place still numbers a mortgage among its other 'modern improvements,' but the mortgage is not quite as husky as it once was and every twelve months it suffers another relapse. It is not worrying us, for it has been our experience that a debt of this kind is a constant incentive to added effort and thrift."

THIN, YOUTHFUL WOMEN IS FALL FASHION'S DECREE

She must be thin next winter. And hipless—absolutely so. But more—she must be youthful.

It's a next winter fashion tip—just out. It was decided by the style dictators on the last day of the national cloak, suit and skirt manufacturers' convention at Cleveland, Ohio.

Yes, it's a bit cruel to 'em—the women, we mean—after allowing them all kinds of liberty with their figures and sanctioning the fat ones, among them, to go jumping back to the sylphlike figure again.

The happy days of the barrel skirt, full gathered around the waist, and the flare hip, and the shirred yoke, and the bouffant, and the bustle effect will be over soon. And instead will come mealless days and eatless nights, the annoying necessity of giving up candy and cake, and bread and potatoes and pie and everything that's good and makes life livable; and there will have to be rolling and Turkish baths, and massages and long corsets, and everything.

Advance modes exhibited at the convention showed simple lines combined with excellence of tailoring, producing a youthful figure. Waist lines were adjustable, a correct blending of high and low effects being the test of smart models. The approved suits and coats show straight lines, collars varying from the mannish coat to the adjustable buttoned at the threat, snug fitting tailored sleeves, belts encircling the figure, or partially. Coat lengths are from finger tip length to the knee, and pockets have come into their own.

TERRIBLE NEW SHELL

U. S. Inventor Completes Device Multiplying the Destructive Efficiency of High Explosive

One of the fields of greatest activity in the creation of new or improved devices, for warfare, has been the tremendously powerful high explosive shell. Most improvements in them, however, have been in the way of making them much more powerful in their explosive effect. But, the main difficulty has been to give the explosion the greatest possible efficiency—have it occur where it will be most destructive and most injurious to the enemy. At the present time, practically all of these high power shells bury themselves below the surface of the ground before exploding. The result is a "crater" from ten to thirty feet and thirty feet or more in diameter. Consequently, their destructive effect is limited, practically, to this small space. A United States inventor has just completed a device which will cause these large calibre high power shells to explode six feet above the ground regardless of the height or distance from which it is fired. It may also be applied to the larger bombs of various kinds. It is a very simple device and practically infallible in its operation. It is simply a rod extending lengthwise through the shell and projecting beyond the nose of the shell. It is arranged to detonate or explode the shell the instant that it strikes the earth. It will strike the earth a few feet ahead of the shell, of course. The result is that the shell explodes with full force above the ground and any men within a radius of three hundred feet, unprotected, are nearly certain to be seriously wounded or killed. Thus, the destructive efficiency of these shells has been greatly multiplied.

BROKER ARRESTED ON GIRL'S CHARGE SWALLOWS POISON

Brooklyn Man Attempts Suicide in Automobile While Guilty.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Following his arrest on serious charges made by a young girl, William Kaylor, 52 years old, a broker, of No. 2,125 Albemarle Road, Brooklyn, attempted to commit suicide by swallowing lysol. He made the attempt in his automobile, at Marcy Avenue and Hancock Street, Brooklyn, a few minutes after he had been placed under arrest by Detective O'Connell. Kaylor was removed to Bushwick Hospital, where it was said that his condition is not serious.

The charges against the broker are made by Mildred Schwartz, of No. 587 Franklin Avenue, Brooklyn, who disappeared from her home last December and remained away for some time.

By pre-arrangement with the detective the girl made an appointment with Mr. Kaylor to meet her at Marcy Avenue and Hancock Street. He appeared, driving his automobile, and the detective placed him under arrest. Mr. Kaylor took out a cigarette and searched his pockets, as the detective thought, for a match. Instead he drew out a small bottle and swallowed the contents. He was rushed to the hospital, where quick action saved his life.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MR. G. N. GORDON ON THE PRICE OF COAL

Peterborough, June 8, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Mr. A. Murray's letter Thursday night in The Examiner sets forth exactly the reason why the meeting held on the market square did not have Mr. George Keen, general secretary of the Co-operative Union of Canada, address it, or that I was not present.

A deputation waited upon me and asked me to obtain information as to coal prices, and suggested that Mr. Keen could give me that information. I had at that time some information as to prices and later on I succeeded in getting prices of coal at the mines, at the Suspension Bridge, cost of transportation to Peterborough, loss by screening, cost of labor, delivery, and all the detailed costs until it reached the purchaser's coal bin.

I telephoned Mr. Keen and told him that I would personally pay his expenses if he came to Peterborough, but he told me that the only knowledge he had of the coal situation was the general information he had obtained and that he did not know that he could give the details of fact sufficient to answer our purposes. I was then under the impression that Mr. Keen had succeeded in clearing up the coal famine in Brantford but I found that his efforts had been directed towards purchasing under the co-operative system, and of course that did eliminate the profit that was made by the retailer. My investigation proved that it was not the local dealers that were at fault, as they could not get coal, but it was rather the fault of the government to make arrangements with the United States government to remove the embargo, and to allocate to Canada and distribute among Canadian towns and cities sufficient coal to meet the needs of the people. In addition to that, the government might have prevented the railroads allowing their motive power and rolling stock to become so depreciated so that there is a scarcity now for transportation purposes which has also assisted in creating the coal famine.

I stated all these facts before the deputation who met me on Saturday, and they then were under the impression (the same as I was) that we did not have sufficient facts to warrant any contention on my part that it was through local combination that the difficulty had arisen.

I enclose herewith a copy of a letter which was produced on Wednesday upon the application for a Municipal Coal Yard. The letter is written by W. F. O'Connor, Acting Commissioner, re Cost of Living, appointed by the Minister of Labor, and I presume the facts stated in it are true, as they cover practically the same figures that I was able to obtain.

Yours truly,
G. N. Gordon.

Minister of Labor, Canada.
Ottawa, May 29, 1917.

Dear Sir: I have your letter of May 25. I have investigated coal conditions at Peterborough, and found them quite satisfactory for my purpose, which is to see that excessive charges are not being made. My Peterborough investigations so far have covered only anthracite coal. I think that the best way to answer your inquiry is to extract for you some references to Peterborough from a report now in process of being written.

The immediately following figures give Peterborough's average costs and prices for 1913, 1914, 1915 and 1916, but the 1916 figures run only to December 1st, for the reason that abnormal conditions known to have arisen in that month dictated the policy of considering that month with the other winter months of January to April, 1917. This was done. Remember that the following figures are averages:

	1913	1914	1915	1916
Cost f.o.b. mines	3.29	3.32	3.32	3.53
Freight	3.04	3.04	3.04	3.05½
Receiving costs, overheads, and fixed charges	1.25	1.38	1.45	1.60
	7.58	7.74	7.81	8.18½
Selling price	8.00	7.50	7.60	8.50
	.42	.24	.21	31½
	Profit	Loss	Loss	Profit.

The losses shown for 914 and 1915 were due to a price cutting war among the dealers.

During December, January and March the same costs would rule, except in cases where any necessary purchase was made of so-called "independent" coal operators in the United States, the regular operators not being able to deliver, in which case the extra cost of coal would justify a relatively increased price. For instance, some coal purchased in February cost over $9 but was sold at $9 under contract. This was the ordinary rate for nut during the winter and it yet prevails. The normal winter cost was about $8.60 as against the average of $8.18 1-2 shown for the year 1916, as for all anthracite coal. The present cost of nut coal at Peterborough is: Coal, $3.57; freight, $3.35; and delivery and other costs, $1.60, in all $8.52, and the presently prevailing price for coal there delivered is $9. The profit shown would be for April sales, 48c per ton, but on May 1st at same price this profit dropped to 38c. Coal has advanced 40c. If an anticipated freight advance comes on June 1st the profit will fall to 3c. You will observe that these calculations are upon purchases made by dealers at lowest possible prices and from the regular operators who allow the usual spring premium off their prices. Dealers who cannot secure coal from the regular operators will have to pay more and profit less. I have not yet received the May returns but I assume that an advance has been made in the price. It would be unavoidable, as my figures show.

Yours truly,
W. F. O'Connor,
Acting Commissioner re Cost of Living.

BUILDING COLLAPSES.

Three Persons Carried Down in the Ruins, But Escape Injury.

WELLAND, June 8.—A two-storey section of the Arlington Hotel, 30 ft. by 60 ft., built of concrete blocks, collapsed yesterday. It is a complete wreck. The lower floor was being changed into a theatre, and removal of the partitions is thought to have left the top storey with insufficient support. Mr. and Mrs. McCamon Russell and G. P. Ash went down in the wrecked portion, but escaped injury. The accident fortunately happened at noon when the workmen were out of the building. Byan & Gardner were the contractors making the alterations, and Whalley & Toyne are the owners of the building. The loss may reach $1,000.

Committee Decide To Purchase A Combination Chemical And Hose Wagon

Machine Will Carry a Forty Gallon Chemical Tank, 1200 Feet of Hose and a Number of Men—Not Enough Money to Buy a Pumper—The First Step Towards Motorizing the Fire Department.

A long stride in the direction of a more modern and adequate fire department was made last evening when a Committee of the Whole Council recommended the purchase of a combination motor chemical and hose waggon. One thing that commends the was arrived at after nearly four hours' deliberation and only after the aldermen were individually convinced that it was impossible to purchase a pumping car and not exceed the debenture issue of ten thousand dollars, authorized by the Provincial Legislature. The Aldermen were caught between two fires. They had the choice of purchasing a pumper and exceeding the funds available by about three thousand dollars, or purchasing a motor chemical and hose waggon. On thing that commends the action of the Aldermen and that is, they decided to buy a high-class piece within the price limit fixed by the debenture issue irrespective of the various manufacturers, whose tenders were considered. Ald. Weir took a strange stand in that failing to purchase a pumping engine he advocated the purchase of the cheapest chemical engine that could be got. This was not favoured by the Aldermen as a whole and it was finally decided to purchase one of the best type of motor driven combination motor chemical and hose waggons offered by the American La France Company at a cost of $8,800 equipped with a forty gallon chemical tank and rated at one hundred and five horsepower. The same Company offered three cheaper makes which the committee turned down .It was generally felt that in making a purchase of this kind the best was none too good and only a high class product should be obtained. Those who approved of the purchase were Aldermen Smith, Duncan, Worth, Stratton, Taylor, McIntyre and Saunders.

WANTED A PUMPER.

The majority of the Aldermen were in favour of a pumping car, but it was impossible to get the cost within the price limit determined by the debenture issue and the idea was finally abandoned in the hope that another year will provide a means of securing a pumper. In the meantime the present steam pumping engine will be kept in commission.

THE TENDERS.

The tenders submitted were as follows:—

G. A. Gillespie—Studebaker combination chemical and hose waggon, forty horse power, price $3,600. Weight 5,000 pounds, without hose or men. Forty gallon chemical tank.

White Company—Motor driven combination chemical engine and hose car. Price $8,207 f.o.b., Peterborough. 66 horse power. Forty gallon chemical tank, weight 7,000 pounds.

American La France—Type 12. One hundred and five horse power, weight 6,500 pounds. Price $8,600. Type 10. Seventy-five horse power, weight 6,000. Price $7,925. Type 20—Sixty five horse power, weight 5,500 pounds. Price $6,775. Type D—Weight 5,400. Price $5,500. Above cars are complete with forty gallon chemical tanks. Add $300 for double 35 gallon tanks.

THE DISCUSSION.

Ald. Smith said he thought that the Council was wasting time discussing chemical engines. He believed that the bulk of the ratepayers favoured a triple pumper. fi

Mr. Fellars, representing the White Company was permitted to address the committee. He enumerated a number of business firms throughout the country using commercial trucks. He said the White Company not only manufactured trucks, but also manufactured bicycles and sewing machines. When he mentioned the number of trucks purchased by the Standard Oil Company, Ald. Smith was prompted to enquire how much money the Standard Oil Company had invested in the White Company. "White commercial trucks are used on all fighting fronts," said Mr. Fellars.

Mr. Fellars said that the local blacksmith could make the body. The copper tank was a simple piece of equipment. The chassis was the main thing. The speaker repeatedly referred to his "competitor." "Any good coppersmith can build the tank and any good waggon-maker can build the body," said Mr. Fellars. He said that a chassis that was built to carry hose was no different to one built to carry sand or brick.

THE FIRST DECISION

Ald Worth—"First let us decide what we are going to get—a chemical or pumper."

"That's getting down to business," echoed some of the Aldermen.

Ald. Dobbin described the present steam engine as a show piece. He thought that the city should have a first-class chemical truck in addition to a pumper.

Ald. Weir—"The trouble is you don't know what kind of a fire you are going to. You should be prepared for the worst."

Ald. Smith said he was ready to take full responsibility for supporting the purchase of a triple pumper with chemical tank combined. Ald. Smith moved that the city buy a combination pumper with a 500 gallon capacity.

A TRIPLE PUMPER

At this stage, Mr. Thomas of the La France Company was invited to address the Aldermen. Mr. Thomas recommended the purchase of a triple pumper with a chemical attachment. The machine would travel to all fires. "It is quick action and pressure you want," said Mr. Thomas. "You can make a two-mile run and put out a residence fire with a chemical, or run to a fire in the downtown section and the machine will pay for itself in the first hour. It is like sending for a doctor in an emergency. You want quick action and pressure. Waterworks pressure is just as likely to fail as a human being. A pumper means you have a two-fold protection. Pembroke had a one hundred and seventy five thousand dollar fire because they could not get water pressure for half an hour.

Ald. Duncan said he was not in favour of spending the money required for a triple pumper. Ald. Langford questioned the need of a pumper. He thought that the waterworks supplied ample pressure. "The steamer has not been used half a dosen times in ten years," said Ald. Langford.

Ald. Smith—"For the reason that you never had it there."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—In your account of the meeting held by the mayor on Thursday to promote the early opening of the Trent Canal, at its present completed depth, I was amazed to read the stand taken by Mr. R. R. Hall, who spoke up strongly for the G.T.R., but had not a word to say for the early opening of the Canal. What can all that mean? You heard the Chief Engineer at the Mayor's banquet, you know that for five years we have all been warning Mr. Cochrane against the bridge difficulty, you know that Mr. Cochrane stated that he had taken the necessary measures to obviate the difficulty. Yet Mr. Cochrane's recent "explanation" is before the government and the people. I have met his objections or explanations, or whatever one may call them, and I can assure you the members of the government seem to be astonished. If Mr. Cochrane is like Mr. Hall, he has more sympathy for the "poor" Grand Trunk than he has for an earlly opening of the Canal, and for cheap coal and other necessaries that could be brought in by water now if the bridge difficulty—foreseen by everybody — had been met in a business-like way. We do not ask for expenditure. We ask for fair treatment, and so long as I represent West Peterborough I shall try to represent its interests and those of Canada and not those of the "poor" heavily subsidized railways. If you want the canal, get after it, and keep after it, or the railway will beat you out. It was to moderate and control railway charges that the canal was projected, and now we have men standing up for the railways and not the canal. If this sort of thing is kept up, it will be a long time before we shall have the canal. Governments except constituencies and their representatives to look after their own business, and our government is no exception It is sympathetic, no doubt, but that the Minister of Canals needs waking up, is plain, at any rate in this particular.

However, I have done my duty, and if there is not a big deputation down here next Friday, or at least a strong one, then the G. T. R. will have triumphed in connection with something that at very little expense could have been gone out of the way. When, however, Ministers see political opponents, ex-M.P.'s, like Mr. Hall, opposing my representations, would they not be justified in concluding that I was wrong in my urging, and that any old time for opening the canal would do, so long as it suited the railways?

The Premier would not have taken up this matter if the Minister of Canals had not already given his answer. Does anybody accuse the Premier of consenting to a humiliation of his Minister?

Two Ways To Acquire An Estate

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family as yours may be, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered, or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

Two Ways To Bequeath An Estate

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape of Court. Requires Court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator — you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of Court proceedings—no expense of Court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor Court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

The Milk Bottle Is Mightier Than The Sword

In Summer Use Extra Care In Choosing Baby's Milk

MILK must be considered as a Food of exceptional value, as it contains all the elements of nutrition in the proper proportions.

MILK, however, to produce beneficial results, must be absolutely Pure, Clean & Safe

The millions of babies in Canada all drink Milk. The babies of to-day are the Fathers and Mothers of to-morrow, and the grand-fathers and grand-mothers of the day after. THEREFORE, THE FOOD OF THE CHILD IS THE HOPE OF THE NATION.

MILK is an inexpensive Food. ONE QUART OF MILK IS EQUAL IN FOOD VALUE TO ANY ONE OF THE FOLLOWING:—

8 Eggs;
2 pounds of Chicken;
3 pounds fresh Codfish;
2 pounds of Potatoes;
¾-pound of lean Round Beef.

A QUART OF MILK A DAY FOR EVERY CHILD IS A GOOD RULE EASY TO REMEMBER.

SAFEGUARDING THE MILK BOTTLE

It is our aim to produce milk and supply it to the customer as pure and as sanitary as is possible.

PASTEURIZATION—Milk is a delicate and highly perishable product and is more susceptible to contamination than almost any other food.

All of our milk is pasteurized. The process will absolutely destroy more than 97 per cent. of any germs that might be contained in the milk.

Pasteurized milk is neither cooked nor sterilized, its taste has not been altered and its digestive and nutritive qualities have not been impaired by the process.

Germs of disease can be carried in raw milk and epidemic outbreaks are often traceable to that source. No epidemic has ever been traced to pasteurized milk.

CLARIFIED—You will notice that there is absolutely no sediment in the bottom of any bottle of milk or cream that you receive from us. This is because we clarify all milk so that every bit of sediment is removed. Every bottle is washed by live steam and rinsed in clear cold water. This is absolutely necessary to produce absolute sterilization.

Our milk is all bottled by modern and sanitary fillers, perfectly Hygienic, so that at no time is the milk touched by human hands from the time of the milking of the cows until the bottle is delivered to the consumer.

Under no conditions or circumstances do we ever permit milk to be bottled on wagons. We do not deliver milk in any way except in a perfectly sterilized bottle.

The Fashionable Separate Skirt. Do Not Mistake the Meaning—Fashionable For Both Dress and Sport Occasions.

The consensus of opinion must be that the separate skirt apart from its modishness is a garment suitable for practical purposes. Fashion must have looked at it from this view point for she has brought it from oblivion and given it a position of prominence in the Fashion theatre.

FOUR MODISH SKIRTS.

You might call it brown in color, if the wearer was at a standstill, but with the first stride that caused the box pleats to spread, tones of blue grey and yellow would be revealed—the yellow just edging each pleat with a narrow binding, as it were. Strictly tailored and finished with belt; material is serge. Price $22.00

A combination of rose and green in striped effect, and fashioned of silk faille. Summer colours, indeed—nature herself is quite partial to them. High crush belt, from which fall neat folds. Price $25.00

Colours have their merits no doubt, but for simplicity we must seek the simple cream serge if our quest is a skirt. This model is evolved from a fine quality French serge whose only deviations from plainness are pleats and huge patch pockets, each trimmed with a lone pearl button. Price $13.00

Material is satin of a golden hue, which in turn is bedecked with knots of Wisteria tinted flowers, hanging at the sides are spacious saddle pockets prettily contrived. You will be completely enamoured with its trim appearance. Price $19.50

Sergt. Edwards Relates His Experiences In A German Prison Camp

Interesting Lecture in the Collegiate Institute—Sergeant Edwards Was Taken Prisoner at St. Eloi in 1915 and Some Months After Made a Successful Escape.

Perhaps never has a clearer insight into the terrible conditions of the German prison camp been given than that given last night at the Collegiate Hall by Sergt. Edwards, late of the Princess Pats.

Sergt. Edwards was taken prisoner at St Eloi on May 3rd, 1915 with nine others. At the outset a conference was held by his captors as to whether they should shoot the prisoners or whether they were worth keeping. Their fate hung in the balance, but it was decided to let them live and they were marched on. The first place they were housed was in a church in Roulles, with 140 other prisoners, mostly Belgians. The brutality shown the prisoners here and in their 36-hour ride in filthy box cars was indescribable. They were struck on the slightest provocation and fed the most disgusting German bread and given no water.

Lively Reception at Camp.

At the end of their journey a lively and hearty reception awaited them! The ladies were heartiest spitting in their faces. In the camp there were twelve thousand prisoners all told, consisting of Russians, Belgians, French and a few British. The suffering of the wounded was pitiable, and amongst the miserable sufferers there was no medical aid but one French doctor and some orderlies captured at St. Julien. The daily rations consisted of: Breakfast, 1-2 pounds of black bread and 3-4 pint of coffee, made from acorns. Dinner, an issue of potatoes and at supper the water the potatoes were boiled in. The bread was of the calibre the eater must hold his breath, take a large bite and swallow quickly.

Giessen Camp.

The Giessen camp is considered the best in Germany. The treatment is a little less brutal and the parcels come with fair regularity. The conditions are fairly sanitary and the French always clever at theatricals, are ever ready to get up plays to lessen the monotony. The prisoner writes his letters without interference, half the time the censor consigning them to the stove. The Russians there, as everywhere else, suffers worst because of his cringing nature. He cowers when he is struck, whilst the British stand together and won't stand brutality.

Plans Trip to Switzerland.

The first trip Sergt. Edwards took he headed for Switzerland. He had been employed at farming when he and three others cut the wires and "beat it." They were out four or five days when a small boy gave the alarm and back they were brought. Fourteen days in cells and six months in military prison was their reward for that escape. The huts at the prison were a horror. Five hundred were packed like sardines in one on shelves two feet apart. Each hut is heated by two peat stoves, and swamp water was the best procurable, and this the Russians alone could drink. This life Sergt. Edwards endured one week and again made a dash for escape.

Off to Holland.

They cut the barbed wire, and in the midst of a volley from the prison, headed for the swamp. Passing through a village a civilian saw the men, gave the alarm, and the order was given to halt or they would fire. However, the wood was gained, and they doubled, coming back to where they started. This was in January, and with enough biscuits to have one in the morning and one at night, it was hard going. At last Holland lay within four miles, with a flooded river between. After spending two nights looking for a raft they finally located a bridge, crossed and walked into the arms of a German patrol. They were tied together, marched up the street and returned to spend a month in a military prison and marked dangerous. This camp lay by a swamp, always an aid to escape. Sergeant Edwards and some kindred spirits again planned a "get away" and saved up food against the day they should make the bolt and head for liberty.

And Holland Again.

Sergt. Edwards and others were sent to hoe turnips and whilst the captors had their dinner, bolted out the back door. In half an hour the alarm was given and every farmer was "on the job" watching for them. They reached a wood narrow as an ordinary street and lay in a ditch one foot deep in water over which the pursuing patrols stepped within a few feet of them. After this they picked up what food they could. Their trip was a tedious succession of crossing rivers as best they could, sometimes swimming, at others improvising rafts from gates, etc. One swamp took five hours to cross, with mud to their waists. At last the promised land lay in sight, but their were difficulties still. A German patrol passed within three feet of them and it was then Sergt. Edwards knew the meaning of hearing his heart beat, but all went well and they stepped upon Holland soil.

Off to England.

At first they trod gently, fearing which way Holland sympathy might be, but they were speedily reassured and the peasants treated them with utmost cordiality. They received many invitations to breakfast and refused none. Finally Sergt. Edwards found himself in Rotterdam and later in England, where he found he had been "dead 15 months."

Plea For Parcels.

Parcels, Sergt. Edwards said, are not only necessary but essential. The food is revolting at all times and the water undrinkable. Some parcels don't reach the prisoner, but getting six out of ten is something to be thankful for and worth the cost of the lost ones. The Russian prisoner is the greatest sufferer, as there seems to be no Red Cross or such organization for their comfort.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Logie, chairman of the evening, moved a hearty vote of thanks to Sergt. Edwards for his splendid speech.

The musical numbers of the programme, solos by Corporal Lightheart and Miss Florence Scott, were greatly enjoyed.

Many Difficulties in the Path of Irish Convention

Lloyd George to rig the convention, and by also demanding the most impossible conditions before they will consent to enter the convention.

THE CHAIRMAN PROBLEM

The difficulty of finding a satisfactory chairman for the body, still continues. General Smuts, of Boer war fame, would willingly consent to preside over the convention if all parties demanded him but the Orangemen suspect him to be too good a home ruler. Speaker Lowther of House of Commons, who is probably the next choice, finds that he has too much work already on his hands to accept the chairmanship even if the various factions could agree on him. Other names which have been considered are Lord Shaughnessy and Lord Chief Justice Madden of Victoria.

If the convention in spite of all the obstacles thrown in the way, finally does succeed in convening, it is quite possible that business and professional men, of whom fifteen will be nominated by the government, may finally induce the politicians to get together and agree to some acceptable compromise. However I certainly feel that I must warn the American public, especially the Irish section of it, that the proposed convention will be no more end than it will begin the Irish question.

In the meantime signs continue and even multiply that in our own interest and that of our Allies, England must in some manner settle the question for all times. The protest of the Russian government joins that of American opinion against the very great inconsistency of fighting for the small nations and the principle of nationality in Europe while leaving principles unrealised in Ireland. And indeed, England to-day is much more anxious for a settlement of this long disputed question than is Ireland.

UNREST IN MANY SECTIONS.

A state of unrest still persists in many sections of Ireland, although John Devlin received one of the biggest receptions of his life last Sunday in Connemara. He was met at every station along his route by enthusiastic and cheering crowds.

If the convention can soon be summoned; if its composition is such as to satisfy Ireland, and then if its membership is able to reach a reasonable compromise, Ireland will probably soon settle down, as all that is sane and honest remains inflexibly attached to the Irish party. The relief of the Sinn Fein prisoners will certainly take place, the delay in the matter being entirely due to a desire not to give the Orangemen any further reason for delaying or refusing to take part in the proposed convention.

Interesting Event at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Redpath, Murray Street

Last night about twenty young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Redpath 144 Murray street, for a surprise party, given to Mr. and Mrs. Redpath in honour of the tenth anniversary of their wedding. Mr. W. Hancock read a suitable address to the young couple, wishing them all happiness in the future, whilst Mr. C. Morton presented them with a beautiful set of silver knives and forks. Mr. Redpath made a graceful reply, thanking the young people for their kindness, after which a dainty supper was served.

ISOLDE MENGES

Played the Violin at Three and a Half Years of Age

The brilliant young English Violinist, Isolde Menges, is to make her first appearance in Canada at the Ritz Carlton on Friday evening, March 23rd.

This young lady, notwithstanding the fact that she is English, has remarkable qualifications as a violinist, and she has been placed by Professor Leopold Auer, amongst the world's greatest artists. At three and a half years of age she gave her first recital at Brighton, England, and so much attention did she attract at that time that it was feared that she might be brought out as a protege, but her parents were guided by the best expert advice and they refused to let their daughter come out until she was 19 years of age.

From the age of three until she made her debut Miss Menges practiced daily from eight o'clock in the morning until noon. The afternoon was spent on her scholastic education which was carried on by a visiting tutor. The evening again was spent in practice, so that Miss Menges, for sixteen years, averaged about eight hours a day practice, before she came out. When one considers the enormous driving power of such hard work, added to natural genius, it is no wonder that this young lady should be bracketed amongst the greatest artists in the world.

Difficult To Get More Ford Cars

Dealers Running Short—No One Can Foretell How Long Present Prices Can Be Maintained

The public have been frequently informed of the fact that prices of automobiles have been advancing and that many large motor car companies have already been compelled to announce increases. Along with this condition, comes the information that it is difficult to get Ford cars—that dealers are running short and are beginning to hesitate to book orders for future delivery.

To protect those who may desire to avail themselves of present stocks on hand and present low prices, Mr. Duffus, of the Duffus Ford Garage, advises prospective buyers to hesitate no longer.

It has been asked:—"At $485 where could you get value equal to the 1917 Ford Touring Car?"

The Ford's attainments have certainly been winning many customers this season—so many, in fact, that the local dealer reports that stocks on hand are running short, and that it is hard to get enough to keep the salesmen supplied.

But Peterborough Ford sales this season, have been phenomenal. All records have been broken; and it would seem that, if any stronger demonstration was needed that the Ford is a "universal" car, its claims to the title have been duplicated and confirmed.

"To build a motor car of light weight, like the Ford, attractive in appearance and low operating cost, to equip it with devices for comfort and convenience; and to offer such a motor car at a price made possible only by scientific manufacturing and a great volume of business has made a lot of sales for the Ford.

Mr. Duffus has challenged any buyer to find another car in the world which combine so many satisfying qualities as the Ford, at the price. Every purchaser of a Ford sets his own value on the saving the Ford gives him—a saving which enables him to "put the balance in the bank."

Some of the Ford's best claims are set forth in another column, which makes it clear that price is not the only attractive feature which the Ford possesses. It would seem that prospective buyers should close their order without delay, seeing that no assurance can be given when additional cars can be shipped after present limited stocks are cleaned up.

A QUICK TURN-OVER OF REAL ESTATE

It Pays to List Your Property With H. J. McCannon For Quick Service

Last night H. J. McCannon, real estate dealer, received a 'phone message from a client that he desired to list his property for sale. Mr. McCannon went to see the property, and after looking it over, was returning to his office. On the way down town he met a gentleman and his wife whom he thought he could interest. Then went back to the property, looked it over and the sale was made.

Not half an hour elapsed before the listing of the property and the turn over. This looks like a record for quick selling.

THIN-BLOODED MEN AND WOMEN

Thin-blooded people do not remain so from choice but from indifference, in some cases from despair. People who are pale, languid, with palpitation of the heart, some difficulty in breathing and a tendency to be easily tired are suffering from thin blood. They need only the resolution to take the right treatment and stick to it until cured. The remedy that can be relied upon is Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People. With every dose they make new blood, and new blood means health and strength. The red cheeks, good appetite, increased weight and strength that follow the use of these pills prove their great value to thin-blooded people. Here is an example: Mrs. J. McDonald, Jr., Hay, Ont., says: "I honestly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. Some years ago I had anaemia, and as I did not realize the seriousness of the trouble I soon became a complete wreck. I got so weak I could hardly walk, I neither ate nor slept well, and could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. At times I had an almost unbearable pain in my back and would have to remain in bed. I suffered almost constantly from a dull headache, and when sweeping if I would stoop to pick up anything I would get so dizzy that I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. At times my heart would beat so fast that I would have a smothering sensation. My eyes were sunken and my hands and limbs would be swollen in the mornings. I tried several kinds of medicine without benefit and my friends thought I would not recover. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before long could see and feel that they were helping me. I gladly continued the use of the pills until I was completely cured and I cannot say enough in their praise and I strongly recommend them to run down girls and women."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COAL PRICES INFLATED IS THE BELIEF IN CLEVELAND

Toronto Council is Thoroughly Investigating the Market Conditions—Mine Owners and Operators Drunk With Profits

CLEVELAND, Ohio., June 5.—As much concern and uncertainty is being felt here as in Toronto over the coal situation. One fact pretty generally established is that the prices are highly inflated. The uncertainty is whether present conditions will continue. The Federal Trade Commission says that the prices are bound to come down inasmuch as more coal is being mined to-day than ever before. The local authorities say that it is true that more coal is being mined, but they are decidedly dubious about prices coming down. They say that this result will only be achieved when there is federal control of the mines.

The situation here is just as serious as that in Toronto. A high official of this city who has been in immediate touch with the problem of supplying coal for the city's heat and light plant to-day, gave a concise presentation of conditions. His analysis is best told in catechism form.

"Will prices go down later in the year?" he was asked.

"That question is as hard to answer as if you had asked me when the war will end. No one knows. We are not taking any chances, but are now putting in an emergency supply for next winter."

"Can all the coal that is required or wanted by the districts usually served by the mines in Ohio and Pennsylvania be secured?"

"Yes, if you pay the mine owner's price."

"Who is responsible for the high prices?"

DRUNK WITH PROFIT.

"The mine owners and operators. They are drunk with profits and there seems to be no end to their unreasonable demands. They can charge what they like and no one can do anything to stop them. The only way we can possibly get relief is to have federal regulation."

"Are the middlemen also responsible for the prices that people are obliged to pay to-day?"

"Yes, they are working together just the same."

"Are the local dealers also in the combine?"

"I do not think so."

"Are the railways responsible at all?"

"They are and they are not. That is a hard question to answer, and I did not think anyone can say definitely. There is a shortage of cars, but one cannot blame the railways for not buying new cars now when steel is so high. They cannot raise their freight rates to make up for the increased cost of cars."

"Has the panicky feeling among the people anything to do with the high prices?"

"It has to some extent. The owners and operators and the middlemen are just playing on the alarm that is generally felt. A shortage of cars on the railroads makes this easy for them."

PANICKY CAN DO HARM.

Panicky conditions are a great help to the brokers in their manipulation of prices. Toronto people would be well advised to sit tight for a while until Mayor Church and Commissioner Chisholm have had a chance to thoroughly probe to situation. The United States Federal Trade Commission says there will be plenty of coal for everyone next winter. It is going to see that the mines are operated to their fullest capacity. Miners are to be spared from war work and the Commission has said that the mine operators will give their summer reduction. About this there is considerable doubt. Cleveland officials do not have much faith in it.

However, the outlook is much brighter than it was some time ago, but absolute assurance of a sufficient and uninterrupted supply in Toronto will be best secured by municipal action. A city coal yard will be the most efficient way to outwit the broker and supply the people. There may be difficulty in achieving this object, of course, due to the fact that individual municipalities all over Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Ontario are making demands of the mines. The prices to be asked rest therefore very largely with the mine owners and operators and brokers—the last named being the worst type of middlemen to contend with.

LOOK INTO COMBINES.

Toronto people may rest assured that if combines of dealers in Toronto have been boosting prices in addition to the inflated prices placed on shipments by the mine owners they will have their activities nipped in the bud. City officials in Toronto do not believe that there has been any price manipulation among the local men here, but they are going to find out and satisfy themselves on that point. Whatever price boosting occurs, it is believed, happens before the coal reaches Canada. But this matter will not be neglected in the efforts now being put forth to assure Toronto of an adequate supply of coal next winter. Any price manipulation on this side of the line, of course, is beyond the jurisdiction of Canadian officials.

What the city officials who have the coal question in hand are doing is getting at the facts. And they are getting at them promptly. Before they are thoroughly conversant with all details of the situation no action will be taken, but Toronto citizens have placed their case in able hands.

Official Story Of British Victory

the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge and three hours after the commencement of the attack had stormed the entire crestline from south to north.

"Shortly afterwards the whole of Messines was captured, and before midday the capture of Wytschaete village also had been completed after hard fighting.

"In the second stage of the attack our troops pushed down the eastern slopes of the ridge and advanced against a powerful line of German rear defences which lay like a chord of an arc across the base of the salient formed by the ridge itself.

OOSTTAVERNE VILLAGE CAPTURED.

"Heavy fighting took place in a further series of woods and strong points, but at 3.45 p.m. the village of Oosttaverne, lying just west of the centre of the line, was captured.

"By nightfall practically the whole of this trench system was also in our hands and we had gained the whole day's objectives. Great numbers of German dead lying in the captured positions proved the severity of the enemy's losses, a large proportion of which was again borne by Bavarian troops. Our own losses were light. The enemy made no attempt during the night to recover his lost positions.

"Following on the great care and thoroughness in preparations made under the orders of General Sir Herbert Plumer, the complete success gained may be ascribed chiefly to the destruction caused by our mines, to the violence and accuracy of our bombardment, to the very fine work of the Royal Flying Corps and to the incomparable dash and courage of the infantry. The whole force acted in perfect combination. Excellent work was done by the tanks, and every means of offensive at our disposal was made use of, so that every arm of the service had a share in the victory.

"We captured a German post last night north of Havrcourt Wood and took a few prisoners. A hostile raiding party was repulsed southwest of La Bassee."

FOE ADMITS REVERSE.

Berlin, June 6—The German forces on the Belgian front have withdrawn from the salient protruding westwards to a prepared "nerve" position between the Canal bend north of Hallebeke and the Douve basin, two kilometres west of Warneton, says the official statement issued to-day by the German Army Headquarters Staff.

The text of the statement reads:

"Western theatre: Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: On the coast and on the Ypsr front fighting activity will remains slight.

"The attacks delivered by the English between Ypres and the Ploegsteert Wood, north of Armentieres, after a day's strong destructive fire, were repulsed to the southeast of Ypres by the lower Schleswig and Wurtemberg regiments. We also fought successfully on the southern wing of the battlefield.

SAY BRITISH DRIVEN BACK.

"On the other hand, the enemy succeeded as the result of numerous explosions in penetrating into our positions at St. Eloi, Wytschaete and Messines and advancing after stubborn and variable fighting via Wytschaete and Messines. A strong counter-attack by Guard and Bavarian troops drove the enemy back in the direction of Messines. Further north he was brought to a standstill by fresh reserves.

"Later on our regiments, which were fighting bravely, were withdrawn from the salient projecting toward the west into the prepared nerve position between the bend of the Canal to the north of Hallebeke and the Douve basin, two kilometres to the west of Warneton.

"On the Arras front the artillery duel was greater in intensity in several sectors.

"Many aerial engagements occurred, principally on the Flanders front. Twelve aeroplanes were brought down. The enemy machines were shot down by anti-aircraft guns."

OFFENSIVE CHECKED.

The War Office to-night issued the following communication:

"The English to-day were unable to continue the battle in Flanders with the force which they employed for the attack yesterday. A local advance to the east of Messines was repulsed."

SUNDAY BALL FOR PATRIOTIC CAUSES.

First Lord's Day League Game in New York in Many Years.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Announcement was made to-day that the total gross receipts in the championship game between the Highlanders and the St. Louis Browns, scheduled to be played at the Polo Grounds a week from Sunday, will be turned over to the First Regiment of Engineers, now being organized for service in France.

The Sunday game, the first to be played at the Polo Grounds on Sunday in many years, is expected to draw an immense crowd. Ban Johnson said to-day that in addition to this game, others would be played on the same basis, and that it was hoped by this method to raise a large sum of money for patriotic purposes. Mr. Johnson said the Highlander and St. Louis club owners would bear all the necessary expense, and that not a cent would be diverted to any other purpose.

Toronto's Coal Mission Returns

Mayor Church Cautions People Against Panicky Condition

TORONTO, June 8.—The city coal mission is back. Mayor Church, Ald. Robbins and Property Commissioner Chisholm have returned from a visit to Cleveland, Philadelphia and other cities, where they investigated the coal situation. No contract for coal was made for the city, although the delegation received several quotations.

Avoid Panic.

"We shall make a report to the Board of Control," said the Mayor to-day. "The people should not get into a panicky condition over the situation. There is lots of coal down there; the difficulty is getting it here. It is a matter for joint action on the part of the Federal and the United States Governments. We just went down to make a survey of the whole situation. One present condition is not a local one, but exists on both sides of the line. They are trying to get a supply for the allies for overseas and there is difficulty in getting cars.

An Emergency Supply.

"The city will have to get a supply, but we cannot be expected to buy coal for the needs of everybody. The prices are beginning to drop, and the prices quoted to us show a large profit on one end or the other. From the prices quoted it means a difference of about $3 between here and the mines. There is no regulation of rates at the mines and no regulation of freight rates. We got quotations, however, and Mr Chisholm will make a report to the Board of Control."

IDEA.

(Southern Lumberman.)

What a lot we are hearing now about Red Cross work! It is interesting to reflect that as late as 1873, much prejudice existed against women nurses, and that 50 years ago there were no trained nurses in this country. When certain ladies of New York decided to establish a school for nursing at Bellevue Hospital, the doctors were the chief antagonists of the plan. They said the women were interfering with what was none of their business. A year later the same doctors passed a resolution heartily endorsing the work.

Want Lavergne-Bourassa And Co. Arrested

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Ont., June 9. — The Kingston Standard to-day editorially demands the arrest of Bourassa, Lavergne and men of that ilk for their anti-conscription utterances, and says ninety per cent. of the people of Kingston will back them up in this demand.

The Isolde Menges Concert

The concert to be given in the Conservatory of Music, Monday night by Isolde Menges, the great violinist, will be a high musical treat. The violinist is one of the greatest of the present time, and she will be assisted by a clever local danseuse, Miss Eileen Wedd who will appear in a programme of classic dances, including a dance interpretation of the great violin virtuoso, Kreisler's "Liebes Freud." Miss Wedd's dancing will have greater interest from the fact that she has been adding to her well-known proficiency by studying the art in New York, during the past winter. The combination of the violin and the dance will provide a splendid programme.

To Keep the Face Fresh, Clear, Youthful

More important than the cosmetic care of the complexion is its physical care. To keep the face clear, fresh, youthful there's nothing better than ordinary mercolised wax. It absorbs the soiled or faded worn-out skin particles. Cosmetics simply add unwholesomeness to the complexion. That's the difference. By all means, acquire the mercolised wax habit. It's so easy to get an ounce of the wax at the druggist's, apply at night like cold cream and wash it off next morning. There's no detention indoors, the old skin coming off so gradually no one suspects you're using anything. When in a week or two the alluringly youthful, rose like underskin is fully in view—well, you won't want or need a make-up complexion after that. It must be apparent that this process means complete riddance of all cutaneous blemishes, like freckles, pimples, blotches and blackheads.

For a wrinkled, loose or sagey skin, a face bath made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, surpasses massage cream and everything else for results. Its action is instantaneous, and perfectly harmless. It improves facial contour wonderfully.

How Ball Players Keep Score of Their Bond Sales

CHICAGO, June 7.—That ball-players possess salesman qualities, and that the ball fan is responsive to the call of patriotism, was demonstrated when announcement was made to-day that more than $40,000 of Liberty Bonds were sold at the National League Park.

Just as rain ended the contest between the Phillies and Cubs, 50 bond salesmen, at the invitation of Manager Fred. Mitchell, entered the stands and circulated among the spectators. When the ball-players of both teams realized what the purpose was, they volunteered their services and were accorded an enthusiastic reception by the men and women in the stands.

"A scheme of "averages" was quickly worked out, whereby a "hit" was credited to each player disposed of $1,000 worth of bonds. A two-bagger called for $2,000, a triple for $3,000, and a home-run was the reward for a $4,000 sale. The tabulated averages compiled to-night showed that Catcher Killifer of the Phillies led at the bat with a home run and a triple, representing $7,000. Stock and Saier had three-baggers, while not a man on either team failed to get a "hit," though a Philly pinch-hitter was credited with a "bunt" on a $500 sale.

Hon. Pres.—Rev. Peever.

1st Vice President—Mr. T. Shields
2nd Vice President—Miss L. Higgins.
Sec. Treas.—Miss J. Bedford.

BOWLING

All Peterborough bowling enthusiasts should be at the Alleys Monday, June 11th, when the Five Pin league games will be started. The five pin game is an exceptionally entertaining summer game, and should especially appeal to lawn bowlers on hot evenings. The alleys will be equipped with a new outfit of specially selected balls for the occasion. There will be several fine prizes and trophies among which will be a bag of that precious stuff known as sugar, to be presented to each bowler on the winning team given by Lantic Sugar Company.

A special feature of the five pin game is that everybody practically has an even chance. There are no five pin champions or any steady high averages. This is any man's game. A novice will in all probability win the prize. The following teams are entered and will bowl as follows:

Monday, June 11-17—West Ends vs. Grocers.
Tuesday—Printers vs. C. G. E.
Wednesday—East City vs. King Pins.
Thursday—South Ends vs. Allies.

Everybody should come and see the first games rolled, for the sweet prize.

REPORTS ARE NOT DEFINITE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—Reports still indefinite regarding the casualties and damage at San Salvador, Nicaragua, whose earthquake has apparently overwhelmed the city. Local firms here have received messages, "All Well" from their representatives there, indicating perhaps, that the loss of life was not so great as at first thought.

Church of England Chaplain with the 3rd Battalion, but I am writing to you because I have known your son for such a long time. I was in the 81st with him and counted him a very good friend indeed. He lost his life, as you know, during the severe operations last week, and it was just as his men were distinguishing themselves wonderfully that he fell. I believe that he died at once, without a moment's pain.

I want to tell you how much he is missed here — a splendid officer — steady, full of courage and cheerfulness, and a perfect leader of men. He was always the same, even in the old days in the 81st, but all his good qualities showed at the very best in these difficult days over here. His place will not soon be filled.

It is with loving memory I commend his soul to that God Whom he served with such true devotion. I don't know any man out here whose faith was such a strength to him, and I am confident that in Him "he sleeps well." May God in His mercy be your comfort.

Yours very sincerely,
W. L. Archer, Chaplain.

Mrs. H. Dwyer, 470 Stewart street, has received the following letter from England in regard to her husband:

H. Division, Hut 2,
Farm Camp, Woodcote Park,
Epsom, England.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines, as Harry asked me to drop you a line for him, and I'm sure it gives me much pleasure to write for him and tell you how he is getting along. Well Harry arrived back from France and is now in England getting along fine. He doesn't expect to go back to France again and he is nowaya put out about it.

Charley and George are still in France. He never heard from them in about six weeks, but hopes they are well. Charley is working in a mill back of the lines. It sure is better than in the trenches, and he likes it fine, for I was speaking to him before I came over from France, so if you see his people, tell them he is getting along fine and is as fat as ever.

Harry was telling me he was not getting any mail from you and to tell you to write often. I know all the lads worked with them in the camps and on the drive and worked for their father, so they are friends of mine. All the boys are in good hopes of the war coming to an end this summer, and I hope so, for we are getting tired of soldiering, and Canada would look nice to us.

I will write a letter for Harry again soon and will ring off for this time with Harry's love to you all.

PTE. DAN GOOLEY.

176th Joins the 12th.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 8.—Letters received by relatives in the city state that the 176th Battalion, which left here for overseas recently, is to be merged with the 12th Reserve Battalion and will be sent to France inside of a month.

Cobourg, June 8.—M. Jex and Co., contractors, who have the contract direct from the Hospitals Commission, began work yesterday on the big additions which are to be erected at the military hospital here, which will increase the capacity three times. The new buildings, three in number, two of which are 220 by 40 feet, and the other a dining hall, 60 by 40 feet, will fill in the space between the building long used for old Victoria University and the old site of Faraday Hall. A staff of one hundred and fifty men will be required to construct them.

Toronto, June 9.—Mayor Church yesterday received the following cablegram from Sir George Perley, acting High Commissioner, in London: "Understand from newspaper clipping you are making arrangements to cable sporting news to certain newspapers here and would like to arrange to have such news reach the men in the trenches. A small daily sheet, called The Canadian Daily Record, is now published here under the Canadian War Records Office, 14 Clifford street, west, which is a branch of the Canadian Overseas Department. This daily record is intended to provide information for the Canadian troops and I should be glad if it could be provided with copies of your messages.—Perley."

The Mayor will arrange for chief sport results to be sent through.

Windsor, June 8.—Recruiting at Windsor to-day slumped to the lowest figure since January, only eight men enlisting, all of them British-born and from the United States.

The failure of Premier Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier to "get together" on the former's plan to form a coalition Government is blamed by Windsor officers for the dearth of recruits.

"With the shadow of conscription over them, local men were coming in well during the last three weeks. But now that compulsory service legislation seems likely to meet with defeat, interest has waned. Men will not enlist without some kind of compulsion, that is evident," declared one man whose work in the recruiting field has brought him into prominence.

New York, June 8.—The British Recruiting Mission announced today that in its campaign for enlistments an active canvass would be undertaken at once to locate British and Canadian citizens in the United States eligible for military service. Names of British and Canadian citizens registered in the draft would be placed at the disposal of the British Recruiting Mission. It was said, which with aid given by British Consuls, was expected to supply virtually a complete record of all British subjects in the United States from 18 to 45 years of age.

Last night the members of the Card Room of the Auburn Woollen Mills gathered to present to Mr. James Firth, foreman of the room, a beautiful signet ring on the occasion of his leaving to join the 57th Regiment, overseas company.

Mr. Firth has always been extremely popular with the young people in the card room, who, whilst admiring the spirit which actuated his departure and wishing him every success and a safe return, are loth to see him go. The following address was read by Miss Nellie Healy, whilst Mr. Jerry McCormack made the presentation.

June 9, 1917.

Mr. James Firth:—

As you have been our foreman for some time and have shown great kindness to all whilst with us, always obliging us in every way, we would like you to accept this little gift on the eve of your departure to enlist. We hope you will always remember the card room staff and that you will return some day to be our foreman again. We may get another foreman in your place, but we can hardly hope to get a better one than you.

(Signed) The Card Room,
AUBURN WOOLLEN MILLS.

Peterboro' Floral Co. Motorize Their Delivery Service

One of the smartest motor delivery equipments in local retail service is that recently purchased by the Peterborough Floral Co. Painted in a light brown, it is unusually attractive and appropriate for its particular work. The business of the company has so increased that a motor delivery was found necessary to provide for customers as complete a service as possible. The business receives the personal supervision of Mr. Cecil Williamson, who is in charge at the Water street greenhouses. Mr. Roland Denne and Mr. Williamson are the proprietors of the Peterborough Floral Co., which in its present season has set a new high level business mark.

CARLOAD OF MAXWELLS CAME TO THE CITY.

Gillespie's Garage Turning Over a Number of Cars.

The Gillespie garage, agents for the Maxwell, have just unloaded a carload of new Maxwells, which the Gillespie garage says, is becoming quite popular in this district. One of the new features is an extra wheel, that is carried instead of an extra tire. If a motorist has tire trouble all he has to do is to take off the wheel on which the trouble is and put on the extra wheel, a very simple operation.

MR. TURNER'S PROPOSAL MAY BE REALIZED

Mr. J. J. Turner's suggestion that the Trent municipalities form an association in which they could stand together at least until the canal is completed, may be realized next Friday, if the deputation to Ottawa is sufficiently numerous. Such a body, if thoroughly representative of the Midland district, should prove useful, and the lack of organization largely accounts for the fact that Toronto and Ottawa have both overlooked this part of the Province to the advantage of the united counties in Western Ontario.

U.S. WHEAT CROP OUTLOOK.

Slight Increase Over Last Year's Harvest is Anticipated.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The prospective wheat crop of the United States this year was forecasted to-day by the Department of Agriculture at 656,000,000 bushels, combining a revised estimate of the badly damaged winter wheat crop and the first estimate of the new spring wheat crop, based on June 1 conditions. That compares with 640,000,000 bushels harvested last year and 806,000,000 bushels the average crop for 1911-15. The condition of winter wheat was 70.9; spring wheat, 91.6; acreage spring wheat, 19,809,000.

MONTREAL, June 9.—The Presbyterian General Assembly passed a resolution with much enthusiasm, endorsing a "Policy of selective conscription as applied to the battlefield, and also as applied to the wealth and talent of the country, for the service of Canada at this time when so much is at stake."

PARIS, June 9.—A despatch to the Matin from the British front says the German hatred against the British grows daily. British prisoners are forced to work under the fire of guns, and for the slightest misdemeanor, are bound to stakes and deprived of food for whole days. A repatriated French ambulance worker says he himself buried thirty-two British who died of ill-treatment and hunger. Such victims are often left unburied. In one case a sick prisoner was excused by the surgeon, but a field officer had him bound to a stake, naked, and he died during the night.

FOOD SITUATION GRAVE SAYS HON. MR. HAZEN

"The greatest economy and frugality must be exercised, and that condition will continue to exist between now and the next harvest, in order that the people of the British Isles may have sufficient food for their wants. As a matter of fact the condition is so serious that for three or four weeks before we left Great Britain no potatoes at all were served at the hotel where we were staying or at any hotel in the city of London. Sugar was extremely scarce, and flour was scarce and had to be carefully husbanded. At the hotel where we were staying, under the order of the director of food supply, Lord Davenport, only a small portion of bread was served to the guests at each meal, and we saw no such thing as white bread, because the wheat flour was being mixed with rye and with meal made from barley in order to make the wheat flour go as far as possible."

The above statement was made by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries in parliament upon his return from England where he attended the Imperial War Cabinet. They are serious words made in all seriousness by one who knows whereof he is speaking. Every Canadian can do his part in the next six months—the vital ones of the war—in eliminating waste and in practising real economy in food stuffs. B-1.

AMERICAN WARSHIPS CONVOY HUGE LOAD OF GRAIN TO FRANCE

PARIS, June 7. — American warships have arrived and are now anchored off the coast of France, an official announcement said to-day. Le Matin announced that the vessels convoyed from the United States a great transport loaded with wheat.

The official announcement adds, "The French navy greets with joy on their arrival these new brothers in arms, who under the flag of the great American republic, have come to participate until final victory in the struggle against the common enemy."

The Matin says the arrival of the transport means that the provisioning of the army is well under way before the arrival of the troops, and that accordingly the American forces will make no call on the French stock of food.

Washington June 7. —The naval collier Jupiter has arrived in France, Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced to-day, laden with 10,500 tons of wheat and other supplies.

Despatches from a French port declare the American vessels were accorded a tremendously enthusiastic reception. Here in Paris all newspapers rejoiced in the latest and visible evidence of American aid to France.

Official permission is granted today to announce that great preparations are in progress for disposition of American troops whenever they shall arrive. Camps have been surveyed and assigned, aviation parks laid out, and complete details mapped out for Gen. Pershing's expedition at whatever time in the future it may reach French soil.

CARNEGIE GIVES UP SKIBO AS A HOME

Denied that he is Seriously Ill, Though He Has Been a Semi-invalid since Attack of Grip.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A report that Andrew Carnegie was seriously ill at his home in New York, was denied by friends who have talked to him within a day or two. A further indication that his health was causing no immediate anxiety was the fact that he was making preparations yesterday to accompany his family to their new summer home at Lenox, Mass.

When surprise was expressed that Mr. Carnegie should take a permanent summer home in this country in view of his great love for his estate at Dumfermline, Scotland, it was announced that he nor any member of his family probably would ever again visit Skibo Castle, because of changes, physical and sentimental, caused by the war.

Mr. Carnegie is feeble and a semi-invalid, and he has been under the care of two nurses for some time, but this condition, it is said, has resulted from the grip and a threatened pneumonia attack of more than a year ago. His somewhat secluded life and withdrawal from all public activities have given rise to frequent statements concerning his health. Mr. Carnegie is in his eighty-second year.

Since his retirement he has been compelled to limit the number of his daily visitors, and he now meets and talks with only a few of his oldest and closest friends. This is not to his liking, but in obedience to his physician, who decided that Mr. Carnegie frequently overtaxed his strength by seeing all callers.

Identified so long with the international peace movement, Mr. Carnegie is more severely affected by the world war than most men. In talks with his intimate friends he has expressed his disappointment at the way it has spread and continued. One of his confidants said:

"The war came, as we all know, as a shock to Mr. Carnegie. The continuation of it over so many months has been even a harder blow to him and to the cause which he had so close at heart."

Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, head of the Carnegie Foundation, said he and his associates frequently consult with Mr. Carnegie, although all of his philanthropic activities had long ago been placed in charge of the various authorized administrative bodies, of which the foundation is the general supervising power.

Shadowbrook, the new summer home of the Carnegies, recently purchased from the estate of Anson Phelps Stokes, is the first country place owned here by Mr. Carnegie. It will be recalled that he formerly spent his vacations at Skibo Castle, in Scotland. It is said that no member of the Carnegie family will ever desire to live in the Scotland mansion again, principally because of the changes brought about by the war. Many of the people there whom Mr. Carnegie knew as neighbours and friends, have gone away, some have lost their lives in the war, and conditions as they may exist after the conflict do not appeal to Mr. Carnegie.

The Carnegie estate in Scotland and one other comprise the larger part of one county. While the castle and grounds are attractive and flourishing a large part of the estate is not adapted readily to cultivation. A few days ago when Sir Howard Peters of Montreal called on Mr. Carnegie and discussed intensive farming throughout Britain to meet the U-boat menace and made the suggestion that the Skibo lands be used, Mr. Carnegie replied:

"Yes, maybe potatoes could be grown there, but if any one can raise a crop of anything it would be more than I have ever been able to accomplish."

Best Ways To Control Most Common Insects of Vegetable Garden

Insect Pests Which Materially Reduce the Output of the Back Yard Garden Can Be Controlled With a Little Care —Cut This Article Out and Save for Future Reference

FOR GREATER PRODUCTION

(By Arthur Gibson, Chief Assistant Entomologist, Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont.)

Vegetable and flowering plants are liable to attack by many different kinds of destructive insects. In the space at our disposal it is only possible to refer to several of the more important of these insects which are liable to reduce materially crops of vegetables which will this year be grown in back yards, vacant lots, or other areas within or near Ottawa, or to destroy or in some way effect the beauty of flowering plants which will adorn many gardens. The great world struggle in which Canada is taking so important a part necessitates the production of "more and still more" crops of all kinds. Leaders in agriculture everywhere within the Dominion recognize the importance of emphasizing this fact, and in the efforts being put forth, the backyard vegetable garden has indeed an important place.

Cutworms.

Few insects are better known to the gardener than are the various kinds of caterpillars known commonly as cutworms, which, hiding by day, they come out at night, cut off young plants near the ground or climb up and feed upon the leaves or succulent stems. The poisoned bran remedy is the simplest method of controlling them. The formula is bran 20 lbs., Paris green 1-2 lb., molasses 1 quart, water 2 gallons. Mix the bran and Paris green thoroughly in a wash tub while dry. Dissolve the molasses in the water and wet the bran and poison with the same, stirring well so as to dampen the bran thoroughly. Scatter near the plants to be protected after sundown. A simple formula for small gardens is one quart of bran, one teaspoonful of Paris green and one tablespoonful of molasses, with sufficient water to moisten the bran. In gardens containing rows of vegetables the mixture should be scattered along the row on either side. Flowering plants may be protected by placing a small quantity of the poisoned bran around, but not touching each plant.

Root Maggots.

The Cabbage Root Maggot destroys freely the roots of cabbages, cauliflowers, turnips and radishes. The Onion Maggot attacks only the onion plant. The Seed-corn Maggot injures seriously crops of beans, corn and peas. The three species occur in the Ottawa district, the two former causing almost every year much destruction. Cabbages and cauliflowers may be protected from injury by placing around the stem at the time they are planted out, a disc made of one-ply tarred felt paper. These disks are described in Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Radishes may be largely protected from the maggots by watering them, using an ordinary watering can, with a small spout, once a week until they are ready for the table, with a decoction of fresh pyrethrum insect powder, or white hellebore, 2 ozs. to each gallon of water. Frames covered with cheese cloth, are useful for protecting plants from root maggots. At Ottawa we have used a frame 8 x 2 x 2 ft., covered with cheesecloth, placed over plants when they were set out, or under which to grow radishes. In protecting onions, in gardens, the decoctions above mentioned have proved the best remedies. Under acre conditions a poisoned bait spray composed of five grams of sodium arsenite dissolved in a gallon of boiling water and one pint of cheap molasses added, has proved valuable. Such a mixture applied as a coarse spray of large drops once a week in strips across them through the summer will attack and kill numbers of the female flies before they have laid eggs from which the maggots come.

White Cabbage Butterfly.

The caterpillar of the white cabbage butterfly, generally called the cabbage worm, destroys large numbers of cabbages every year. It can be controlled by dusting the plants with fresh pyrethrum insect powder and flour, one part of the former in four parts of the latter.

The powder and flour after thoroughly mixing together should be kept in a tight vessel for 24 hours before using. The mixture may be applied from a cheesecloth bag tied on the end of a short stick, the operator holding the bag over the plants and tapping the stick with a can held in the other hand as he walks along the rows.

The small, dark coloured "flea beetles" so-called from their habit of leaping or jumping, eat holes into the leaves of turnips, potatoes, tomatoes, radishes, etc. They are most injurious in spring. The usual remedy is to spray infested plants with Paris green or arsenate of lead, the former in the strength of 1-4 of a pound to 40 gallons of water, with 1-4 pound of freshly slaked lime, or arsenate of lead three pounds to 40 gallons of water, or with the well-known Bordeaux mixture used alone.

Potato Beetle.

Towards the end of May and also in June the over-wintered female potato beetles lay clusters of bright, orange eggs on the undersides of the leaves which soon hatch into the well-known dark-coloured grubs. It is important to destroy the beetles early in the season and as soon as they are seen to be present, remedial measures should be applied. Spraying is the most satisfactory method of applying poison. Some of the larger growers in the Ottawa district prefer to use arsenate of lead paste in the proportion of 4 lbs. to 40 gals. of water, or 2 lbs. of powdered arsenate of lead to the 40 gallons. At the Experimental Farm the following formula has given satisfaction: 8 ozs. Paris green and 1 1-2 lbs. of powdered arsenate of lead to 40 gallons of water. Both Paris green and arsenate of lead may be used in Bordeaux mixture and if such is done the above proportions are suitable for 40 gallons of the mixture. Such a poisoned Bordeaux mixture (6 lbs. bluestone, 4 pounds of unslaked lime, 40 gallons of water) not only destroys potato beetles but also protects the plants from blight and rot. Applications should be made in the beginning of June, then early in July and about August 1st, 15th and 31st.

Blister Beetles.

In the Ottawa district, the Black Blister Beetle and the Ash-gray Beetle have caused destruction to potato foliage similar to that effected by the Potato Beetle. Beans, beets, peas, tomatoes are also attacked as well as flowering plants such as clematis, zinnia, asters, chrysanthemums, etc. These slender soft bodied insects congregate in large numbers and appear suddenly often entirely ruining a crop in two or three days. Paris green or arsenate of lead applied as recommended for the Potato Beetle will control Blister Beetles. Being easily disturbed they may be very often driven off the crop by two or three boys walking through a field and waving from side to side boughs of spruce or other branches. In small gardens many may be destroyed by beating them from the plants into pans containing water with a little coal oil on the surface.

Striped Cucumber Beetles.

In addition to the cucumber this insect attacks, freely, melon and squash plants, particularly when the young plants appear above the soil, at which time they are often visited by the over-wintered black and yellow striped beetles about two-fifths of an inch in length. In small gardens during the early part of the season the plants may be protected if grown beneath cheesecloth screens, the frame supporting which may be made of barrel hoops cut in two, crossed, and the ends stuck in the ground. Later when the vines are too large to be thus protected the beetles may be largely controlled by spraying with poisoned Bordeaux mixture, using arsenate of lead, which adheres to the foliage longer than does Paris green.

Plant Lice.

These sucking insects which live upon the juice of plants occur on most kinds of vegetables and flowering plants. The well-known kerosene emulsion is useful in controlling them, or whale oil soap in the proportion of 1 lb. to 5 gallons of water. Of recent years tobacco preparations have been used extensively for controlling aphids, or plant lice, one of the most useful of which is "Black Leaf 40" sold by all seedsmen. It should be used in the strength recommended on the can. Whichever insecticide is used, must be applied so as to reach the places where the insects are clustered, which is chiefly on the underside of the leaves. All of the above mixtures only kill when coming into contact with the insects.

Rose Slugs.

Three kinds of false caterpillars called "slugs" known respectively as the American Rose-slug, the Bristly Rose-worm, and the Curled Rose-worms, are common in Eastern Canada wherever roses are grown. The first two skeletonizes the leaves and the latter eats the entirel substance of the foliage, feeding along the edges. These false caterpillars are from one-third of an inch to two-thirds of an inch in length. All may be readily controlled by spraying with a weak solution of Paris green, one ounce in fifteen gallons of water.

Rose Leaf Hopper.

During recent years this small pale, greenish-white sucking insect has been much complained of by rose growers. It feeds on the underside of the leaves, causing whitish patches to appear. Any of the contact insecticides mentioned under Plant Lice are useful in controlling this insect, as well as the Grape-vine leaf hopper which renders unsightly the foliage of virginia creepers. It is important to apply the remedy early, before the insects attain their wings.

Red Spider.

The foliage of plants in gardens, particularly during hot, dry seasons, is much injured by small, whitish mites, popularly known as red spider. The presence of these creatures on the plants is indicated by the leaves losing their colour, having a white, bleached appearance and becoming stunted. One of the best remedies is to spray the infested plants with flowers of sulphur in the proportion of one ounce to every gallon of water, in which has been dissolved two ounces of laundry soap, forcing the spray well up among the foliage.

Snails and Slugs.

Very often these slimy, soft-bodied mulluscs are injurious in flower and vegetable gardens. As they come out to feed in the evening an excellent remedy is to broadcast lightly over the soil, before nightfall, freshly slaked lime. This adheres to their bodies and soon kills them. Three applications on consecutive evenings are advisable. Shingles placed here and there throughout an infested garden will attract many slugs, forming as they do suitable shelters for these animals. If the shingles are turned over in the morning the slugs there hiding may be easily destroyed by crushing them with the foot.

The Great Iron Key to the War and to Peace

For some time past there has not been a soldier, not a civilian, who has not understood that iron is king in this war. Iron produces cannon, shells, machine guns, rails and all sorts of implements of war.

Remain master of the iron and you keep the inexhaustible means of conquest. Be deprived of iron and you come to the end of your resources of courage in the shortest possible time.

Hence there is no reason to be astonished that Germany, from the very beginning of the war, has sought to maintain the possession of the Basin of Briey, which represented 80 per cent. of our iron production, and that the attack on Verdun has been for the purpose of confirming and perpetuating this possession.

One is thus less astonished at the severity of her submarine campaign, which aims to deprive us of English and American iron by torpedoing the transports.

Have we, on our side, done all that is necessary to turn against Germany this blockade of the iron which she has only made half succeed against us?

This question dominates all the present war. On its solution will depend the end, for a Germany deprived of iron would be a Germany stranged by the absence of those very munitions which up to now have been her power in the East and West.

Now, to understand all the tragedy of the problem it is necessary to know that it is precisely the Basin of Briey which is the battlefield for the sovereignty of iron between Germany and France. The basin of Briey, lies between Verdun and Metz, like a gigantic key of the war, thrown at equal distance from these two fortresses of the Lorraine frontier.

From this fact may not one perceive the interest which the Germans have in taking Verdun — an interest equal to that which we should have in retaking Metz?

Certain reliable figures, collected before the war and since the war began, will impart to all Frenchmen the truth.

Before the war Germany produced annually 28,000,000 tons of iron, of which 21,000,000 tons came from that part of the Basin of Briey which had been annexed to Germany since 1870-71.

France produced annually 22,000,000 tons of iron, of which 15,000,000 tons came from the part of the Basin of Briey which had remained French.

Since the war began France, having lost the Basin of Briey through invasion, has been almost exclusively furnished with iron from England and the United States.

Germany, on the contrary, having occupied at the same time the Basin of Briey in France and in Luxemburg, has put in operation nearly all the great furnaces there and thus adds to her 28,000,000 tons, before the war, the 15,000,000 tons of our Basin and the 6,000,000 of the Basin of Luxemburg—that is 28 plus 15 plus 6, making 49,000,000 tons of iron for herself and her allies.

If we recall that in Germany, thanks to the Rhenish foundries, 100 tons of pig-iron produce 92 tons of steel, Germany has at her disposition about 45,000,000 tons of steel for military and naval appliances of all sorts.

Far from having realized against Germany the essential brockage, which would be the brockage of the iron, the prime material in this war, we have, on the contrary, left her in the possession and the enjoyment of 90 per cent. of our French production of iron and of 80 per cent. of the national production of steel we had before the war.

The artless proof of what I set forth here has been for some time furnished by German documents which the Comite des Forges de France (Committee of the Foundries of France) has published in its circulars Nos. 655, 666, and 3,287.

Here, notably, is what one may read since May 20, 1915—just a year ago—in the "Confidential Memorandum on the Conditions of Future Peace" which was addressed to Von Bethmann Hollweg, Chancellor of the Empire, by the six great industrial and agricultural associations of Germany.

"If the production of pig-iron and steel had not been doubled since August, 1914, the continuation of the war would have been impossible. At present the mineral of Briey furnishes from 60 to 80 per cent. of the appliances made from iron and steel. If this production be disturbed the war will be practically lost."

Confirmed by various reports of the principal German ironmasters, notably those of M. E. Schrodter, of Russeldorf, to the General Assembly of the Verein Deutscher Eisenhuttenlente, these declarations suffice to explain the prolonged fierceness of the attack on Verdun.

Once masters of Verdun and the Germans will be able to believe themselves masters of the indefinite continuation of the war, because the Basin of Briey incloses in the totality of its subsoil more than 3,000,000,000 tons of iron.

On the other hand if we remain masters of Verdun and again, by our armies, become masters of Metz we shall, by the same stroke, put an end to the war, because we shall have taken from Germany 21 plus 15 plus 6, amounting to 42,000,000 tons of iron of the 49,000,000 tons which the empire contains—that is to say nine-tenths of her total production of steel, the entire key to her production of war material.

It is not within my province to draw strategic deductions from this problem, but it was my duty to present it.

Suffered From Severe Headaches

FOR TWO YEARS

Headaches are many and varying; but when the head starts to ache you may be sure there is some chief cause. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that unless the cause is removed some other baneful disease is liable to assert itself.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches and has proved itself to be a remedy that cures where others fail.

Mr. I. N. Petershen, Dnieper, Man writes: "I am only too glad to be able to state that I derived wonderful benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters. I suffered from severe headaches for two years. I was treated by several doctors but received no benefit until by chance I heard of B.B.B., and I at once procured two bottles and in a short time I was completely cured. I am and always will be grateful for what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am glad to recommend it to all who suffer from headaches.'

B.B.B. is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HARDEN WARNS THE GERMANS

When in Die Zukunft of March 24, a copy of which has just been received in New York, Maximilian Harden, the German publicist, devoted thirty pages to explaining the causes of the Russian revolution and warning his fellow-Germans against expecting that the change of Government in Petrograd will be of any advantage to the military rulers of Germany. Harden's article, which was entitled "Between Two Czars," and which was mentioned briefly in a special cablegram began by pointing out that a modern nation could only enjoy real prosperity in proportion as its neighbors were prosperous and not in opposition to, but in co-operation with it, declared that the happiness of Germany could not be based upon the misfortunes of others, as then it would be a horror to humanity and could not endure and continued:

"The first earthquake shock of the Russian revolution is the great test of German politics. Humanity is enriched if the Russian people place themselves at its service and transform the gloomy domain of the Czar into the roomy, cheerful dwelling place of free men engaged in happy labor. The German Empire that exists since 1890 could not endure the change with serenity, neither in its economic nor its political constitution.

"Does this prove that Russia must remain as it was yesterday and refuse to follow the path leading to a nobler destiny? No. It proves that since 1890 the German Empire has allowed itself to be misled into highways and byways in which the heavenly signs of the times did not beam, and has striven for objects which, if they were attained, would be bound to result in bitterly disappointed hopes.

"Wherever the ascension of at least 160,000,000 human beings into a state of freedom, self-government, and well-being is lamented as a national misfortune and a cause of gloomy forebodings, all the foundation walls of the mode of will and thought are rotten and good for nothing but rubbish. Vain thoughtlessness looks for the blame elsewhere.

"What will happen in Russia, what Russia will become, no mortal man knows to-day. No one knows if the events in March, the forced abdication of Nicholas Alexandrowitch, the programme and actions of the Government created by the revolution, will strengthen or weaken the desire for war. Why, then, do hundreds of persons act as if they knew something that they cannot know? Why all the foul-smelling mess of silly fairly tales that contradict each other, and the shameless nuisance of venal tale-bearers? One fellow is quite sure already: "It was all done by the English. Another: 'It couldn't be any worse for the Entente than now; there is terror in London and panic in Paris. The third vows that the nonsense he uttered yesterday is verified by to-day's announcement.

"Every little word of the new men, who are as yet unfamiliar with their business and atmosphere, is chewed over; perhaps a drop of sap will come out of it. In his last edict the Czar spoke of war and victory; there is nothing about that in the two edicts issued by the rebels; therefore they are for peace. Didn't I tell you yesterday that the Social Democracy would impose its will upon the moderates? But it will not be able to maintain itself; and then chaos will come. Therefore, Russia really does not count any more, and we may congratulate ourselves."

"All hands on deck to make matters still more confused for the Germans, who find politics the strangest stuff, anyway. Is the confession then that no one can know anything so hard, and does honesty bring shame to the war contractors of public opinion? Yet in the Winter of 1789, months after the oath in the tennis court and the people's dash upon the Versailles palace and the Tuileries, it was impossible to make a forecast of the outcome and effects of the French Revolution. Of ten men wise or foolish in statecraft nine would have said: 'Nothing can come out of that. Sieyes, Brissot, Lenard, Vergniaud; such little chaps will not throw the world from its axis.' The whole racket will only be an episode.' And yet, it became a turning point in the history of the world.

Harden then quoted an article written by himself twelve years ago, in which he advised the Czar to abdicate. In conclusion he paid tribute to the versatility and possibilities of the Russian character.

QUEER PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN MESOPOTAMIA

Except February, Which is Solemnly "Burned" Each Year.

Edmund Candler, special correspondent with the Expeditionary Force in Mesopotamia, writes: The East Syrians, better known to the world nowadays as Nestorians, form an interesting unit in the Ottoman Empire. They are the remnant of a once powerful community who claim that the first tidings of Christianity were brought to them by the Magi.

The greater number of this ancient remnant dwell between Mosul, Lake Van and Lake Urmia, and they may be divided into two sections, the Ashiret or free tribesmen, and the Ryat or subject people. The Ashirets dwell in the great Zab Valley, through which Sir John Mandeville travelled and encountered so many fearsome objects, so terrible, indeed, that he likened it to passing through hell. South of this on the right bank, is the valley of Lower Tiari, with its centre at Ashitha ("avalanche"), the whole valley being Nestorian, and forming the most independent and powerful section of the community.

The Tiari Nestorian is a very warlike person. Every man above the age of fifteen or sixteen possesses a rifle or an ancient long flintlock gun, and he carries a "hanjar," or daggar, in his belt. He very rarely leaves the house without his rifle, and takes it to bed with him at night as in this delightful country one is perpetually at war with some one or other.

Believe in Saturday Baths.

The Tiari man is religious, too. He prepares for Sunday on Saturday morning, when he descends to the river with his wife and family. Water is heated in a big iron caldron, and, when hot enough, he will squat on his haunches while his wife bathes him and combs out his two long pigtails. Having tubbed their lord and arrayed him in clean linen, the wife and daughters proceed to wash the clothes he has discarded and their own. Apparently the women possess only the one garment (except their silk holiday attire), and on Saturday afternoons the valley is full of sylphlike forms (a veritable Garden of Eden) skipping on the stony banks until their raiment is dry. It seems obvious that Sir John Mandeville did not travel through Tiari on a Saturday.

Some Strange Superstitions.

The Nestorians abhor anything in the way of pictures or images, and nothing of the kind is ever seen in their churches. No water is permitted in the sanctuary, and if by any chance the rain leaks through the roof the church cannot be used until the bishop has been to reconsecrate it. Every Wednesday and Friday throughout the year and at certain other seasons for a long period, the Nestorian fasts rigidly and until recently the Tiari men made an annual Good Friday visit and entirely pillaged a neighbouring Jewish village, while at Easter and other great festivals the Nestorians exchange visits to "bless the feast."

On the first day of each of eleven months of the year they attend church for the purpose of blessing the month. February is the exception, which, for some unexplained reason, is "burnt" on the last day, all the community contributing a branch or more to swell the great bonfire.

At Ashitha, the place of avalanches, instead of making a long detour to reach the village, as is necessary during the summer, one has only to sit on one's waistcoat, slide down the glacier, and "Wa Allah!" there you are, down 2,000 feet right in the middle of the village in a couple of minutes.

WOMEN'S BACKS BEAR THE BURDEN

"Campaigns of thrift," "Speeding up for production," and other present day slogans have influenced the women of Canada quite as much, and indeed in some quarters more, than the men.

How many thousands of women everywhere who always kept a "maid" are now doing their own housework to release another pair of hands for the munition factory. Other thousands of young girls who formerly did not find it necessary to offer their services for hire are doing effective work in the munition factories, stores and elsewhere.

This change of work, or the undertaking of new duties, has found the weak spot in the armour. We hear women say so often now-a-days, "If it weren't for my back I could stand the work fine." The reason for that sore back is the kidneys and nothing else. The remedy is Gin Pills. Just try one box and see how soon the pain in the back is relieved, and tired, swollen joints in the hands and feet are reduced. 28.

Constipation is the usual running mate with Kidney and Bladder Trouble—Gin Pills will relieve both in short order. If not as refund your money. Sample free if you write National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

GERMANY PLANS TO EXPLOIT TURK WHEN WAR'S OVER

LONDON, June 8.—"During the last few months Turkey has been overrun," says a Berne despatch to the Daily News, "with advance agents from German capitalists and syndicates who are busily preparing the ground for a systematic exploitation of the Turk, which is planned for after the war. The German-Turkish Mining Society, a recently constituted organization, is buying up wholesale likely mining areas.

"Influential members of the American colony who have just reached here state that the general internal situation of the Ottoman Empire is chaotic, but on the other hand no signs of its imminent break-up are apparent.

"Turkey," said an American merchant, who had left Constantinople after a continuous residence of nearly twenty years, "is existing in a state of perpetual crisis. The conditions of the poor are appalling. The antagonism between Germans and Turks is extremely acute. The country is admittedly bankrupt, yet the Government is either unable or unwilling to break away from its Allies."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

My Burglary

It Had Farreaching Results

By ELINOR MARSH

I am of an artistic temperament. From my earliest girlhood I had loved beautiful scenes. I took to drawing pictures early and in time became a water color sketcher. In summer time I drove around in a vehicle called a rockaway, drawn by an old horse that had been in my family a long while and in whom I had every confidence.

At night I would sometimes stop at a hotel, sometimes at a farmhouse, and occasionally would place my blankets on grassy ground and spend the night in bivouac.

One evening when I was some miles from a town, which I expected to reach before dark, Bob went lame. Looking about for shelter—for I could not get on with a lame horse—I espied a short distance ahead of me, perched on a ledge, a cottage. It was as artistic a piece of architecture as I ever saw, with its grounds and vines growing over it. Indeed, the tout ensemble constituted a thing of beauty. If I could only be permitted to spend the night there I would be delighted.

I managed to get Bob to the gateway of the place and up a short winding road leading to the house. I was disappointed in not seeing any one about, and as I drew near it occurred to me that the place was unoccupied. The blinds were not closed and there was nothing to indicate that the house was empty. What was it that told me that the place was deserted?

Leaving Bob standing in the roadway, I went to the house and rapped on the front door with a brass knocker. It did not seem to me, if there had been any one within, that those knocks would have sounded so hollow. I listened, but there was no indication of any one stirring. Going around to the rear I failed to see any indication of a living being. There were no chickens, no dog, not even a lonely cat. Only a few flowers in beds near the house that I judged grew without being cultivated. There was a woodshed and some wood in it, but plenty of room for Bob in case I should have to leave him there.

Looking in at a window, I saw a library with a fine broad fireplace and among the furniture a large lounge. The sash was locked, and I went to other windows, but found them locked also. A trellis led to an upper window. It looked easy to climb, and I went up it and found the sash unlocked. I went into a bedroom and down a staircase. The front door was locked and no key, but I opened a side door by turning the latch.

I could understand the fascination of burglary so interested was I in appropriating the premises to my use for the night. There was a zest in temporarily owning this place, so beautiful and yet so desolate, which was enhanced by my having to break into it and learn what there was suited to my necessities.

The next thing was to unharness Bob and give him his supper. Then I went into the house with my lunch box, in which I always kept something and in which I now fortunately had enough to satisfy my appetite. There were cupboards in which eatables might be stored, but they were locked. After eating I lighted a lamp in the library and looked over the books. It was evident that whoever had filled these shelves was a well educated and intelligent person. I have never before come upon a library in which every book had a value. And what surprised me most was that some of the books were up to date. I read till quite late, then, throwing myself on the lounge, put out the lamp and went to sleep.

On awakening in the morning I was astonished to detect the odor of coffee. What did it mean? Was the house, after all, occupied? Had the occupants returned late? I arose and went into the dining room. The table was set for breakfast, but for only one person. Hurrying on, I entered the kitchen. On the range a kettle was simmering, and there was a coffee pot that emitted the odor. A toast rack stood on the range, filled, and a couple of eggs were ready for boiling.

I started to find whoever had come in, to apologize for my burglary, and, not finding any one on the ground floor, went cautiously upstairs. The bedroom doors were open as I had left them the night before, but no one was in any of them. The house was as free from any person except myself as it was when I broke into it.

I went downstairs again, looked about me and listened. There was no sound save the simmering kettle in the kitchen.

Was I in my right mind? Was I asleep and dreaming? Was I enacting a play for a movie show?

But the odor of the coffee, the remembrance of the toast and the eggs, to say nothing of a dish of radishes and some tempting butter on the breakfast table, overpowered wonder, and, going into the kitchen, I boiled the eggs, and, removing them and the toast to the breakfast table, I sat down to eat. My grace was:

"Fairy godmother, I thank thee."

Never did a breakfast taste so delicious. There was no great variety, but there was all I wanted. After I had eaten I removed the dishes to the kitchen, poured water from the kettle and proceeded to wash them.

"Fairy godmother," I said aloud, "do me one more favor. Tell me to whom I am indebted for my lodging and especially for the delicious breakfast I have eaten."

"The obligation is all on the other side," said a voice behind me.

Turning quickly, I saw a man standing outside the kitchen, his arms resting on the window sill.

I stood looking at him, not knowing what to say to him. He was an intellectual and refined looking man about thirty years of age. A certain sadness was stamped upon his features, but a change appeared to be breaking over it as a rift in lowering clouds. I was standing with a plate in one hand and a dishcloth in the other gaping at him. Since I had nothing to say he continued:

"You are the first woman who has been in this house in three years. Your being here has broken a spell, I trust forever."

"Will you kindly explain this fairy born breakfast?" I said.

"Certainly. I come here occasionally and happened to come early this morning, having some work to do here. Seeing a horse and conveyance, I proceeded with caution. Looking in at the library window, I saw you sleeping on the lounge. It occurred to me that you would need a breakfast, and I set about preparing it. There was not much to give you, but I trust it sufficed."

"It was delicious. Now that you have explained I trust you will listen to my apology for trespassing on your domain." And I told my story, after which I said that I would not longer keep him out of his own house and suggested that he come inside. But he said that when a man gives up his house to a woman he has no business there so long as she occupies it. To this I replied that I made my own conventional rules. Besides, I would depart as soon as I had finished doing the dishes. But he remained where he was, and when I had finished he placed chairs on the porch, and, I feeling sure that he had a story to tell me, we sat down for further chat. Then for the first time I saw a motorcar standing before the door in which he had come. This was his story:

"I built the house for a summer residence for myself and the woman I expected to marry. She was in delicate health, and we are prone to become more attached to one who is dependent on us for comfort than one who is independent of us. We planned the place together and while it was building used to come out here and watch the materializing of our conceptions. It is not an elaborate place, but we spared no pains to make it dainty.

"Before it was finished I knew that my beloved would not live to enjoy it. She was unconscious of the seriousness of her malady and continued to look forward to our occupancy of it with happy expectation. On no account would I break in upon this anticipation. Instead, I consulted constantly with her how we would have this and how we would arrange that, keeping her interested in what could never be realized in order to shield her from the dread truth.

"While the house was building I continued to make changes in order to prolong the period of construction. In her condition our residence here would not be convenient. She needed the care which she could not have here. When the house was finished I laid new plans for the grounds. One spring—the last of her life—we came out here frequently, and I worked with and directed men in planting and garden improvements, while she lay here on the porch and looked on, making such suggestions as occurred to her.

"Meanwhile my beloved was growing more and more feeble. But not till the day she left me did she realize that we were to be separated; that she would never occupy with me that on which we had lavished so much thought and care.

"All was finished at last. The place was ready, and my beloved's stay on earth came to an end. Perhaps had I not lost an object in the completion of what had so long occupied me I would have borne my bereavement more stoically. As it was, I became one of those who nourish a grief. I have kept up this place and have come here occasionally as another would visit a grave. That cloud has been lifted. When I looked in at the library window and saw a human being there, sleeping, that castle of grief which I have created tumbled about me; these premises, which I have made a tomb of melancholy, have been restored to what they really are."

I listened to this recital with a sympathy that I did not try to conceal. I understood perfectly the change I had wrought. I appreciated the motive—his seeing a living woman in his home—that had led him to prepare a breakfast for her. For years he had had no one upon whom to lavish a single kindly act. Suddenly a woman appeared, and he took advantage of it. Indeed, he told me that the preparation of that meal, his watching me eat it, which he had done surreptitiously, was the happiest moment that came to him in years.

Upon examining Bob we found his still lame, but my new friend found the cause and removed it. He insisted on harnessing the horse to the vehicle, and when I left him he said to me:

"This will be the first day that I have ever spent here free from melancholy."

My forcible entrance to another person's property occurred several years ago. The next time I entered it was as the bride of the owner. Since the place was perfect when it was inhabited there is nothing to do with it but enjoy it. But if I should ever tire

Something New.

Many advertisers are constantly trying to think up "Something New" or "Different" and the results are startling to be sure, but certainly not convincing nor conducive to increase in the business of the advertiser.

The craze for originality is a mistake. People do not care for stunts or mental gymnastics. They do want to know the facts in regard to your business and whether you can offer better prices or better quality than your competitors.

Tell the facts in a straightforward, unassuming manner. You will gain the confidence of your patrons, and you will find that advertising pays abundantly.

REPORT MISERABLE MONTH.

Past Month Cold, Cloudy and Wet Throughout Dominion.

In summarising May weather for the Dominion the Weather Man says that from Lake Superior eastward to the Maritimes the mean temperature was below normal on the average of five degrees, but reaching as much as eight or nine below in some parts of northern Ontario and western Quebec. Westward of Lake Superior to western Saskatchewan the normal was slightly exceeded, and thence to the east it was again in defect, especially in Vancouver Island.

The rainfall was light and very much below normal from northern Ontario westward to the Pacific, except in some few sections of central Alberta and the interior of British Columbia. From southern Ontario eastward it was generally above average but for a small deficiency reported in Quebec City. In British Columbia the month was abnormally cool, rainfall below average, and the season backward.

The greater part of the month in the western provinces was fine and warm, with an almost entire absence of rain in Manitoba, eastern Saskatchewan and an insufficiency farther west. During the last few days of the month a severe frost did some damage to crops and gardens. At Hillview, Man., ice was half an inch thick on the streams May 30th.

In Ontario the month was unusually cool and unsettled with many strong winds. Rainfall was above the average in southern districts. In Toronto and vicinity both the mean temperature and sunshine were below normal, and rain fell on 16 days. Vegetation at the end of the month was quite backward, and, owing to retarded germination, garden seeds in many cases decayed. On May 24th many insectivorous birds were in a half starving condition owing to cold and high winds, causing scarcity of insects. Orioles arrived on the 16th, and apple trees were not in bloom till 31st.

Quebec reports this May to be the coldest month in 50 years. Fresh northeast winds prevailed during the greater part of the month, and the temperatures were near freezing point on many days.

The Maritimes describe this May as the most unfavourable month for sowing and planting on record, it being cold, wet and unseasonably backward, with excessively high winds and continued cloudy. In Nova Scotia rain fell for twenty days, and snow on two days. Little seeding or planting was done in New Brunswick, and P. E. I. found it to be the coldest May in many years. At the Charlottetown Observatory only 83 hours of sunshine were recorded, and as late as the 23rd snow fell.

A bright eyed little boy in a sailor suit saluted the occupants of a passing motor car so quaintly that they stopped to give him sixpence, according to Tid-Bits. "You're very polite, little fellow," the lady motorist said. "Do you salute all the strangers who pass in the same way?" "No-no, ma'am, only motorists," the boy stammered, fingering his sixpence nervously. "Father says I've to be polite to them, because motor cars bring him trade." The lady seemed disappointed. "What is your father's trade, my little man? Does he repair motor cars?" "No, ma'am; he is an undertaker," was the little fellow's response.

NEW OIL-BURNING ENGINE

Lord Shaughnessy Inspects Latest Construction From C.P.R. Shops

A NEW Decapod locomotive just turned out by the Angus Shops for the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been inspected at Montreal by Lord Shaughnessy and a number of interested railway officials.

What strikes one most about this wonderful engine is the comfort and safety under which the engineer drives his train, and the ease with which so many tons of machinery can be operated from the luxurious shelter of a protected and cushioned cab. The locomotive engineer is not a machine but a human being, his cab is to some extent his home, and up-to-date railway managements are recognizing this by providing him with pleasant quarters. There is no doubt sound policy in this, for the less disturbed he is by weather, or other physical conditions, the more care he can devote to the locomotive and the train itself. Under the severe climatic conditions which sometimes prevail in the mountain divisions, this naturally conduces to safety, and so far as the locomotive engineer is concerned Safety First and Comfort First go hand in hand.

The interior of the cab, which is roomy and well ventilated, has spring cushioned seats which can be moved on a slide, while the sliding arm-rest on the window is also comfortably cushioned. A coat cupboard with swinging pegs takes care of the surplus clothing. The windows are double sashed with storm windows for winter and are constructed with small panes—a great advantage, as they are more easily and quickly replaced and occasion less discomfort if broken. A wind deflector enables the engineer to see the track without hurting his eyes, while a wind deflector on the roof of the cab stops the back draught and keeps the cab free from dust. The cab itself has double ventilators and is pleasantly warmed in winter through having the insulation on the boiler head made in panels which can be easily lifted out. The roof is painted a cool green, and cool green shades cover the lights, while the eyes are further protected by a deflector on the fire door which eliminates the glare. The motor gearing is protected with a screen to avoid the glass breaking, and, indeed, every possible device that human ingenuity has so far invented has been provided for the safety and comfort of "the man behind the gun."

A great improvement is the power reverse gear worked by air, as easy to work as the handle of a sewing machine, which eliminates the old heavy hand lever and reduces the physical strain upon the engineer.

So far as the exterior of the locomotive is concerned, this has been designed so that repairs can be made without the men having frequently to go inside or under the engine. One of the old worries of the engine crews is removed by a new type of air strainer, drawing cool air into the pump which requires little or no attention. A noticeable feature of the exterior is the Laird crosshead, an old type revived because it ensures such excellent lubrication and is easy to maintain. A safety strap is applied to the guide bar to prevent it from dropping. The guide is self-centering and maintains alignment better than the ordinary guide, while the leading driving wheel is flanged with one inch extra sideplay, and is provided with wedge play to ensure proper guiding. The engine trunk is provided with side resistance, procured by a sliding inclined plane, and here again the safety of the engineer is considered in the automatic clamp which prevents the trunk from sliding forward on to the cab in case of collision.

Twenty-five such Decapods are under order for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and will be in service on the mountain divisions, where power for minimum weight is the keynote of their construction. The locomotive itself weighs 125 tons, the tender 82.5 tons; loaded, while the tank capacity is 5,000 gallons of oil and 7,000 gallons of water.

Notwithstanding high prices of materials, the Canadian Pacific has additionally added to its cars and engines, having built 1,500 cars last year and another 2,000 under construction at the present time.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

TRANSMITTING MUSIC BY WIRELESS.

Tina Lerner's Playing on Board Ship Heard on Other Vessels 500 Miles Away.

Imagine sailing on a ship in mid-ocean and being able to hear your favorite pianist in a concert that he is giving on board a vessel hundreds of miles away! The possibility is not as remote as one might surmise, for Tina Lerner, the distinguished young Russian pianist, gave a recital on board the Ventura on her homeward journey from Honolulu, and enjoyed the unique thrill of feeling that her music was being heard by wireless operators on board passenger and freight steamers as far as 500 miles away.

In the concert room where Miss Lerner was playing a transmitter was placed, and by means of a recently perfected wireless telephone apparatus the music was sent out over a large radius.

The experience of listening to this concert was far more novel than participating in the demonstrations which have recently been tried successfully when singers and speakers in San Francisco were heard at meetings and banquets in New York. At these functions the guests were provided with telephones, through which they heard every tone distinctly. Even the applause that the singers received on the Pacific Coast was accurately transmitted, and all the thrills that attended the real concert were felt by this "Proxy audience" on the other side of the continent.

That, however, was over telephone wires. To play the piano while isolated in mid-ocean and have the notes float through the air and bring pleasure to those far distant does much toward the complete annihilation of space and causes us to wonder what to-morrow may bring forth.

When we are far from home—and think of the loved ones left behind, shall we be able to commune with them through music?

War Resourcefulness in Choir Work.

If you ask the conductor of practically any choir in the city about his work the answer will almost invariably be, "We are managing to carry on, but our male section is shot to pieces." Through enlistments and the extra demands upon men's time these days the bulk of the responsibility for keeping up the church choirs rests upon women.

One Toronto leader has shown his desire to avoid just letting things drift. He has tried out the experiment of a children's choir to supplement the regular choir, and the experiment, proved a success for at least one Sunday. Such an interest was manifested by the children that the leader feels encouraged in his plans to utilize them further. A display of resourcefulness of this character should be encouraged by all who can lend assistance by their sympathetic interest.

The beneficial results are many. In the first place it is a musical training for the children, the fruits of which cannot be estimated. Then it cultivates a field that should yield many future members for the adult choirs. Also it sows seed that develops a musical atmosphere in the home, where after all music radiates its greatest influence. Yet the result of the children choirs are not all in the future. In itself the music of children's voices in the church adds much to the effectiveness of the service for the grown-ups.

In Adelaide, Australia, there is a women's choir which has made a very good impression, and the formation of which is due to war conditions. It has gathered in the women to keep up the choir, now suffering by the absence of tenors and basses away fighting.

War has wrought many changes that only resourcefulness can cope with, and surely no qualification is more needed to-day in those who are maintaining the high status of our churches' musical services.

NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN FOLK MUSIC

1,100 Songs Collected for the Bureau of American Ethnology by Miss Frances Densmore

Until recently, few people were aware of the fact that the North American Indian had a song literature of his own, and by no means a negligible one. We regarded the music of the Indian as consisting of a weird battle cry, and unrythmic, impromptu hymn of praise, or a crude chant that the Indian mother used to rock her papoose to sleep.

It was with considerable surprise, therefore, that we learned that Miss Frances Densmore has collected 1,100 songs for the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution. These songs she recorded on an especially constructed phonograph that she took into the field. They were taken directly from the Indian songs, with all their native characteristics and peculiarities. Two books by Miss Densmore on Hippewa music are published, another on Sioux music is in press, while others on the Music of the Utes, Mandan and Hidasata are being prepared.

Applying Indian Folk Themes

This work, although intended primarily as a record, has caught the attention of several composers, who have realized the beauty of the Indian themes and have harmonized them. Charles Wakefield of Cadman, whose song, "The Land of the Sky-blue Water," is a household classic, is one of these composers; so also is Alberto Bimboni, who made an arrangement of a Sioux Indian Song for Mme. Marcella Sembrich, which the celebrated soprano used recently in one of her historical recitals.

Peculiarities of the Indian Rhythm.

It is remarkable, says Miss Densmore, that the Indians do not keep a regular rhythm throughout a song, and yet preserve the rythmic completeness of the song as a whole. By experiment, Miss Densmore has found that the melodic and rhythmic forms of the songs express their ideas.

When Mme. Sembrich heard the song of the Sioux Sun Dance she was quick to recognize the chant of the native rhythm and the beauty of the melody. The song was greatly enjoyed by the audience at her recital, and will be published shortly, with Miss Densmore's rhymthic translation and the original Sioux words.

New Material for the Composer

Despite the fact that the Indian themes have had no such potent influence upon folk music as have the Negro tunes or spirituals, their importance cannot be overlooked. With the important discovery of as many as 1,100 Indian songs comes the possibility of their furnishing a new source of inspiration for the composer. With this continent a melting-pot of all nations, with little in music to point to as really its own, this fund of new material may serve as the basis for the strictly occidental music of the future.

Results of Steady Plugging in Choir Work.

One reason why at least some volunteer choirs never get beyond very limited attainment is lack of confidence in themselves. They are content to just drift along, excusing the lack of progress by saying "you know we haven't the material to take up really good things." But it must be borne in mind that it takes a good deal of brilliancy to equal the accomplishments of a group of persons with just average voices but determined to do honest plugging every practice night.

By way of example, there comes to mind a certain choir of forty voices without any outstanding members or any paid singers. When their conductor first ran over with them Tertius Noble's "Souls of the Righteous" the members all thought it was ridiculous to attempt any such impossibility. But the leader seeing the good that was bound to result from his choir's knowing such a good composition set to work with the determination of Napoleon getting his army across the Alps.

After several trials the rare beauty of the music unfolded. Its strains fastened upon them until the anthem became a part of each one. It kept running through their heads at home, at work, morning and night. After persistent practice they succeeded in mastering the composition, and then it was only a short step to "I Will Lay Me Down in Peace" and "Fierce Was the Wild Billow," also by Noble. The knowing of these anthems represented a real accomplishment. The choir then feels it has received some worthwhile training in return for the time spent, which in turn creates a self-confidence that looks around for fresh worlds to conquer.

The conductor's judgment and confidence were primarily responsible for the attainment. But honest plugging rather than brilliant singers enabled it to be carried out successfully. Aim high is a good motto

TORNADO OF FIRE HITS ITALIAN LINE

Austria's Finest Troops Battle Hand to Hand with Foes for Carso Positions — Naval Guns Brought Up

By Perceval Gibbon.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY ON THE CARSO, June 11.—Probably the soldiers of every nation believe that victory is due them as certainly as their pay or their rations, or who would be a soldier? Certainly the Austrians believe it, and have to be led to a more reasonable state of mind.

But the Hungarian Honved prisoners who have come to the rear out of the flames and flying stone splinters on Monte Faiti were the toughest stuff yet encountered upon the diverse and terrible front. They swaggered back along the shrapnel-infested roads, containing themselves with difficulty, to the very gates of the barbed wire compound with the air of men who share the inheritance of victory. They were the best troops the enemy has yet shown us. I was told by a staff officer of the corps which captured these big fellows in the prime of life that they fought like tigers and could not believe they had been beaten.

They were part of the harvest of the fighting which has been going on during the last few weeks. The Austrians, beaten everywhere, with losses standing, at a conservative estimate, at 85,000, have come back at us with a sort of despairing and frenzied gallantry which these generous Italians are the first to appreciate and admit, and they are fighting so much better than during the offensive that overcrowded the prisoner's camps that one has the impression that the uncomfortable fact of defeat and disgrace has taken this length of time to filter through General Boroevic's skull to his brain.

Their main efforts have been upon the Carso, where they maintained an intense bombardment upon those rags of their former line, where the Italian infantry was lying, trying, under fire, to scratch itself a trench of some kind in the stone floor of the Carso. From their heavy calibre positions to the rear of Brestovica and south behind Hermada, around Vizovle, they shelled with vast 10-inch guns, while naval guns that were run up from Trieste upon railways to Sistiana or thereabouts bowled their great projectiles over the hump of Hermada upon the ruined Flondar lines and shallow rabbit scrapes where the tenacious Italian infantry were hanging on to their outpost outside Medeazza, Monte Faiti and all the line that extends thence southward to the western-most cottages of Costagnevizza was enfiladed and spattered with flying steel and high explosives from copious batteries that shelter to the north behind San Marco, opposite Gorizia, where the guns are hidden among the full-leaved oaks of Panowitzer forest.

A DESPERATE BATTLE.

Upon the night of June 3 and 4, when the moment had ripened, the Austrians threw their sturmtruphen forward to blast a way for their main attacking forces into the new Italian positions, Faiti is one of that chain of blunt peaks which bounds the Carso on the north, and the Italians and Austrians have wrestled for months for possession of its crest. The line ran up the western slope of the mountain and turned south at an abrupt right angle upon its highest point, inclosing an angle which was marked upon the trench maps as the tooth of Faiti.

In the darkness of the night of June 3 Hungarian Honved storming troops came up to the two faces of the Italian positions with a tremendous barrage fire shielding their front and shoved their desperate way into the lines. There were two battalions of chosen and eager fighting men, especially trained and equipped for their job, and their impetus and the intensity of the gun fire which supported them, availed for a moment to carry them through. The Italians, penned between the two sides of their salient, fell back, and up the slopes began to move in the dark the Austrian supports who should have taken over the mountain from the storming forces, consolidated it, and held it. But they never got there.

What Italy did not know about gunnery she has learned during the last few months when Cadorna was training his new generation of gunners, and prompt as an answer to a bell came the Italian curtain fire, drawing behind the sturmtruphen and before their supports a very tempest veil of death which none could approach without destruction, and shutting in the stormers as into a chamber with the Italians, who came roaring forward in the shell illumination night to reattack.

Those who came were the Romans of the Tiber brigade, with all Rome's world-glory and world-glamour behind them for tradition. They were four companies of the two Austrian storming battalions actually in some of the Faiti positions when the Tiber men came back, and they fought like trapped tigers. There were desperate and implacable battles, hand to hand, and grenade to bayonet, upon those stoney slopes, while all the guns in the south of Europe blazed at them. Sixty-two scrowling, arrogant Hungarians went back to their cages behind the Italian line. The rest of those four companies, a thousand strong in all, are lying out under the tyrannous sun waiting for burial parties.

Sout of Faiti as far as Costagnevizza every Austrian attack was stopped dead, and there was even some gain of ground by the Italians which at one point carried them forward till they stand at this moment in the first ruined cottages of trench-tangled Costagnevizza itself.

Further south still the fighting is proceeding. There was a certain Italian retirement upon a section of the new conquered positions south of Jamiano, notably upon the northern centre of the sector about Komarie, but already nearly everywhere the lost ground has been retaken.

I have been watching the fight boiling back up the slopes all day and the forward crawl of the barrage fire that strides ahead of the attackers. What is chiefly to be noted is that it goes forward as steadily as water runs down hill, but the details are lost in a surge of smoke that spouts and drifts upon the hillsides and make cauldrons of valleys. We shall know more later but in the meantime the Italians have the habit of victory and they are proving themselves slaves to the habit.

HUNS LOOK FOR THE CONCLUSION OF THE WAR

Leaders So Confident End is Near That They Wrangle Over Taking Indemnities, etc. — Various Factions Row Early and Often — Germany Seeks Annexation But One Leader Advises Better Sounding Word

DEPLORE SWAY OF SOCIALISTS

(By Rene Arcos.)

BERNE, Switzerland, June 11.—The people of Germany still affect to believe that the end of the war is near. Neither intervention of the United State nor the frequently affirmed resolution of the allies to continue the fighting has resulted in shaking this belief. Certainly, all the parties in the empire are trying to fix the conditions of this long-desired "imminent" peace.

Heretofore only the political parties have engaged in the discussion, but now the governments themselves appear to be expressing their views. The Austrian government, through its unofficial organ, the Vienna Frembenblatt, has stated that it would resign itself to a treaty without annexation or indemnity. The Baierische Stattszeitung, the Bavarian official paper, suggests that Germany abandon its indemnity claims for deliveries at low prices of raw materials, advantageous commercial treaties, restitution of its colonies, return of seized merchant ships, etc.

Can Accomplish Only Part.

This newspaper adds:

"In 1870 Germany indicated peace to one enemy. To-day it faces a dozen enemies, including the greatest powers of the old and new world. Hence it must adopt another attitude and content itself with accomplishing only a part of its vast programme."

When one considers that Herr Hertling, the inspirer of the recent articles published in this great Bavarian newspaper, will perhaps be called to succeed Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, one realizes the importance of these manifestations which coincide with the famous note of the Vienna Fremdenblatt, inspired by Count Csernin, outlining the Austro-Hungarian attitude. Austria and Bavaria are having a moderating influence on the German junkers and pan-Germanists. The German Conservatives naturally protest against these "regrettable" manifestations.

Attacks Vienna Newspapers.

The independent committee for peace held a public meeting in Berlin recently at which several pan-Germanists, including Prof. Schaefer and Prince Lowenstein, spoke against the idea of peace without annexation. In the Leipsiger Neueste Nachrichten the pan-Germanists violently attack the Vienna newspapers, particularly the Fremdenblatt and the unofficial Pester Lloyd, charging them with having denounced the exigencies of the German annexationists.

"These newspapers," they say, "are striving to make people believe that the efforts of the German annexationists are unimportant and that the governments of the central powers do not work in accord. Do they wish it understood thereby that diplomats merely converse tranquilly without considering the will of the people and that the conditions of future peace will be fixed without regard for national necessities."

Want Courland and Briey Mines.

The Leipzig newspaper counts among the national necessities the annexation of Courland, Lithuania and the Briey-Lonwy basin, northwest of Metz and the military seizure, economically and politically, of Belgium. It concludes:

"If Vienna and Budapest declare themselves prepared to accept peace without territorial acquisition, they upset all diplomatic customs by offering at the outset prior to any discussion the maximum of what they can give. It is a bad method which should be left to our adversary. We protest energetically against Vienna's pretension that it can teach us a lesson. If the Austrians are mad enough to accept pottage made of water that is their business, but they must cease making us to swallow it."

Deplore Sway of Socialists.

Conservatives continue to deplore the growing influence over the government of the Democrats, Liberals and Socialists, and their attacks on the imperial chancellor are more ardent. In the Deutsche Tages Zeitung the Phince of Salm-Horstmar writes that the decisive hour has struck for the chancellor, and that while he may be the savior of the monarchy he may be its grave digger.

The same newspaper holds the chancellor responsible for Germany's military defeats through his hesitation. It says that he delayed German mobilization, thereby rendering German victory impossible. The Koelnische Zeitung says that the financial committee of the Baden landtag voted unanimously against peace without annexation or indemnities as advocated by Herr Scheidemann and his friends. The government and middle class Socialist leaders in the grand duchy of Baden reject these peace conditions as "regrettable and harmful to the interests of Germany."

English "Liberate," Not Annex.

Deputy Stresemann recently made a speech in Munich on the world situation and Germany's future. He declared that Germany's situation was satisfactory and that England's intention to starve the country had failed, whereas Germany's submarine warfare augmented daily the misery of England. The speaker added:

"We must want the Scheidmann peace. We must not be deceived by the term 'annexation.' The English never 'annexed'; they always 'liberated' peoples. We are particularly entitled to use this expression regarding the Baltic provinces and Flanders, whose future liberty we desire to guarantee.

"Peace between Russia and Germany is possible, insuring the economic development of both nations. Certain frontier rectifications approved by both nations will be made. Regarding war indemnities, we shall find them in the former domains of the czar and the mines of French Lorraine."

Prince Hohenlohe for Peace.

In the Neue Zuericher Zeitung, Prince Hohenlohe, brother of a former stadehalter of Alsace-Lorraine, publishes a remarkable article in which he approves of the demand of the social democracy for the immediate conclusion of peace without indemnity or annexation. The prince writes:

"We who examine the situation of all the belligerent states objectively must realise that their sacrifices of material and blood have attained such heights that there cannot be any question of sufficient indemnitie of cure of the wounds. Moreover, if the war does not cease soon the nations will be completely incapable of furnishing a sum of any importance. Even if an indemnity runs up to billions it will not compensate for the sacrifices made."

Junkers Alone Learn Nothing.

"The army officers and even the monarch have been compelled to modify certain of their strongly anchored opinions and none has been able to preserve his illusions," he says. "The junkers alone have remained like rocks into which the scissors of the modern spirit have been unable to cut."

After condemning the inertia of German statesmen, Prince Hohenlohe writes:

"This ill will serves no purpose. The moment has come to abandon the old track. The people demand the right to speak and collaborate with the government, which in the interior political domain should make to the parliamentary democratic idea far greater concessions than the promised electoral reform, will be compelled to give regarding exterior politics and peace. Such parties and statesmen as cannot or will not understand this disposition of the people will disappear perhaps sooner than they expect."

HIS HEART BADLY AFFECTED

"Fruit-a-tives" Soon Relieved This Dangerous Condition

Conscription Bill Is Introduced

TEN CLASSES TO BE CALLED

SIR ROBERT BORDEN INTRODUCES HIS MILITARY SERVICE BILL

All Men Between 20 and 45 Are Declared To Be Soldiers and Will Be Called Out in Ten Classes. The First Class Single Men Between the Ages of 20 to 23. The Second 23 to 27, and the Third 27 to 31. Exemption Boards In Each County. More Gains Made by the British

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 11.—Sir Robert Borden's compulsory service measure was this afternoon introduced in the House of Commons. It is called the Military Service Act, 1917. This is the name given similar measures in Great Britain and New Zealand.

The bill is a compact clearly expressed document. Its outstanding feature is a clean, definite removal from politics, of compulsory military service and its enforcement. It has been found impossible, it is stated, to produce an intelligible and efficient measure by merely amending the present Militia Act.

Sir Robert Borden's bill commences with a recital of the compulsory service provisions of the Militia Act passed in 1904. It recites also the clauses of that act which render the militia liable to be sent for service in or out of Canada for the defence thereof. It then proceeds to explain that owing to the large voluntary enlistment of those who otherwise would be producers in Canada and to the necessity of maintaining production at the highest possible limit under such circumstances, method of drafting men as provided by the Militia Act is unwise and improvident, and selection is necessary.

The bill provides for securing reinforcements, which unless Parliament further authorizes, are not to exceed 100,000 men. It sets out ten distinct classes from whom drafts will be selected. These classes will be called out in the order named. They are as follows: Class 1—Those who have attained the age of twenty years and were born not earlier than the year 1894 and are unmarried, or are widowers but have no children.

Class 2—Born in the years 1889 to 1893, both inclusive, and are unmarried, or are widowers but have no children.

Class 3—Born in the years 1883 to 1888, both inclusive, and are unmarried, or are widowers but have no children.

Class 4—Those who have attained the age of twenty years and were born not earlier than the year 1894 and are married, or are widowers who have a child or children.

Class 5—Born in the years 1889 to 1893, both inclusive, and are married or are widowers who have a child or children.

Class 6—Born in the years 1883 to 1888, both inclusive, and are married, or are widowers who have a child or children.

Class 7—Born in the years 1876 to 1882, both inclusive, and are unmarried or are widowers with no children.

....Class 8—Born in the years 1876 to 1882, both inclusive, and are married, or are widowers who have a children or children.

Class 9—Born in the years 1872 to 1875, both inclusive, and are unmarried, or are widowers who have no children.

Class 10—Born in the years 1872 to 1875, both inclusive, and are married, or are widowers who have a child or children.

(2) For the purposes of this section, any men married after the day of —— 1917, shall be deemed to be unmarried.

(3) Any class, except Class 1, shall include men who are transferred thereto from another class as hereinafter provided, and men who have come within Class 1 since the previous class was called out.

(4) The order in which the classes are described in this section shall be the order in which they may be called out on active service.

The bill then makes provision that any person not answering the call of his specific class shall be guilty of desertion and punishment by imprisonment.

Any man who is called out and who, without reasonable excuse to report as aforesaid to remain on active service, where placed shall be guilty, according to the circumstances, of deserting within the meaning of section twelve of the Army Act, or of absenting himself without leave within the meaning of section fifteen of the Army Act, and shall, besides being otherwise subject to military law, be liable,

(a) To be tried by court martial and convicted and punished by imprisonment or

(b) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years.

6 (1) There shall be established in the manner hereinafter set out, the following tribunals:

(a)—Local Tribunals.

(b)—Appeal Tribunals.

(c)—A central which may hear evidence on oath or otherwise as it may deem expedient, and for performance of its duties shall have all the powers vested in a commissioner under part one of the inquiries act.

TORONTO, June 11.—The United Press' Ottawa correspondent says to-day: "This afternoon Sir Robert Borden will introduce his conscription bill for its first reading. According to its provisions all men between 20 and 45 years are declared to be soldiers. They are to be called upon in about ten classes, 20 to 23, then 23 to 27, and then 27 to 31, single. The married men will then be started with and if necessity arises will go up to the limit." All those who have been married since May 15 when the bill was first announced will be classed as single. Exemption boards will be created in each county to consider applications for exemption. Elements in exemption will be civil occupations in industries considered to be vital to the state such as agriculture, munitions work and other lines of activity. "The number of dependents will be another feature in determining exemptions."

PARIS, June 11.—Artillery and patrol activity but no general fighting actions, was reported in to-day's official statement. North of the Somme, particularly in the region of Carny, the gun fire was lively. East of Chemin Des Dames, the statement said, an enemy raid failed around Hill 304. In the Woevre patrols were active.

PETROGRAD, June 11.—Sailors on the cruiser Diana adopted formal resolutions to-day demanding that the ex-Czar and his family be confined in the fortress of Kronstadt. "Three times this demand has been made," the sailors declared. "If the Government does not comply, we will fight to achieve it."

LONDON, June 11.—Major-General Pershing conferred with a number of members of the British War Staff to-day. This afternoon he lunched at Buckingham Palace with King George and Queen Mary, and to-night he was to be American Ambassador Page's guest at dinner.

PETROGRAD, June 11.—President Wilson's message to Russia sounds the keynote of Russian feeling so apparently that it might have come from the lips of leaders of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council. It was so regarded universally in Petrograd to-day.

COUNT PLUNKETT AND OTHER SINN FEINERS ARRESTED

INSPECTOR KILLED

Special to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, Ireland, June 11.—Count Plunkett, the Sinn Fein member of Parliament for North Roscommon, and several other Sinn Feiners, are under arrest following an attempt to hold a meeting here last night to protest against the imprisonment of Irish rebels. The meeting had been forbidden by Lieut. Gen. Mahon, commanding the troops in Ireland. While taking these men to jail Police Inspector Mills was stoned or hit with a shillelagh, and died of injuries in hospital to-day.

A WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN FOR QUEBEC SOLDIERS

New Movement Is Developing Among Some of the French Members

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 11.— A new movement is developing among certain of the French members, namely, a disposition to "save the situation, by going into Quebec in a body and conducting a whirlwind campaign for recruits. The subject has so far been discussed only in a private way, but Quebec men who favour it think that Sir Robert Borden could not refuse to give the system a trial if the offer were publicly made in the house by the Quebec section. If such a thing could be accomplished, the government would no longer have to ask itself how it is going to "conscript Quebec," which is undoubtedly the question which troubles Sir Robert Borden most at present.

General Byng Leaves The Canadian Corps

(By Stewart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press.)

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, June 11.—The Canadians in France are no longer "the Byng Boys." Sir Julian Byng bade good-bye to his associates at Headquarters yesterday. Before his departure the Corps Commander issued a special order, in which he said:

"In bidding good-bye to the corps, I find it very difficult to give expression to the feeling of pride and affection which dominate all other sentiments. During the year of my command the unvarying success in battle, the progress in training and in discipline, and the unswerving devotion and loyalty of all ranks are features which stand out prominently in the history of the corps. That history will last forever, and my association with you in the making of it is a joy that can never be impaired."

The men in the ranks, as well as the officers, with whom he was more intimately associated, regret deeply his departure.

PTE. DICK LEWIS.

Pte. Dick Lewis, who enlisted here in October, 1915, with the 93rd Battaloin, is officially reported wounded in the Ottawa list. Pte. Lewis, who was a member of B company of the 93rd, was transferred at Barriefield camp with a draft to a Canadian Pioneer Battalion, with which he went overseas. His relatives live in England, but he is well known in this district.

PTE. S. ALTHOUSE.

Pte. S. Althouse, who became a member of the Havelock platoon of the 93rd Battalion in the spring of last year, has been wounded, according to yesterday's list from Ottawa. Pte. Althouse went overseas as a member of D Company of the 93rd under Capt. Neilson, and was transferred to another battalion at the front.

Mrs. H. White, of Apsley, has received the following letter from her son, Pte. Lionel White, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion:

France, May 16, 1917.

Mrs. H. White,
Apsley P.O.

Dear Parents,—Have received several letters from you since I wrote last, that is about two weeks ago. I have written as often as I could, so I hope you will forgive me. I have got quite a few letters from around home lately. They seem to come all in a bunch, like Brown's cows.

I am glad you are having such good luck making maple sugar. I sure wish I was there to help you. The sugar you sent me sure made me think of old times.

It seems to be years since I was around there, and I long to see the dear old home again; also some of the old time friends. I am rather lonesome sometimes, for there is only Geo. Winters in our bunch now, and I do not see him very often.

Frank Tanner got a nice blighty the other day. I did not see him, but some of the other lads did. I am not able to say anything about the war, for I have not seen a paper for some time. Enough to say is that our guns are firing day and night and they can put the shells about where they want them. A funny thing happened the other day. A Hun aeroplane had made a few trips over a certain place where he should not have been and I suppose he thought he had everything his own way, but our fellows decided he should stay away, so the next time he came to stay. Ha, ha, a sort of warm welcome you know. We are really very kind-hearted that way, but Fritz don't seem to appreciate our good nature.

I am sending you a copy of "The Brazier"; you will find a few jokes worth reading in it.

Well, this is all for this time, so bye-bye. With love and best wishes.

From your wandering boy,
LIONEL.

The Kingston Whig says:

Major Kenneth Mundell and the officers of No. 3 Army Medical Corps Training Depot at Barriefield Camp have succeeded in arranging probably the finest camp of any unit that has ever been under canvas on "The Heights." The arrangement for the convenience, health and amusement of the men are far beyond anything ever before attempted.

The location of the camp is on the same site as has been used for the last two years—midway between the two main parade grounds. It is marked by a building that is used as a dispensary and an office for the examination of men.

The camp is now being decorated with rows of white-washed stone and flower beds, which will be protected from wandering cows by wire netting. The men of the unit have built a garage for the accommodation of the two motor ambulances, a canteen, a kitchen and are now erecting a stable shelter for the horses.

Every tent has a board floor, and such conveniences as earth cellars for the coming warm weather have been made. These earth cellars will take care of much of the food that will be used and will answer even better than an ice refrigerator.

One of the features of the lay-out is a large marquee, which is used as a recreation place by the men. There are magazines and books of all kinds and also writing pads.

Major Mundell expects to have a complete band organized immediately, and concerts, etc. will be given in this tent for the men.

No. 3 A.M.C. Depot is drawing recruits from all over the district, and they are certainly coming to a splendid place to train.

A draft of fifty men and four officers will be leaving for overseas shortly.

BOSTON, Mass., June 9.—When the officers and pipers of the 236th Kilties Battalion, Fredericton, N.B., leave Boston next week they will take with them the realization that they have done more to stimulate recruiting in this part of the country than any American military organization engaged in the work. They came to Boston to recruit Canadians and other British subjects, but they worked in close co-operation with the American recruiting officers, and every day since the Canadians first appeared the American recruiting stations have been crowded with men eager to join the service.

The Canadians have already procured close to four hundred men, all of them of British birth, who have never been naturalized, and they could have had hundreds of Americans, but American applicants were turned over to the recruiting officers of Uncle Sam. It is possible that some of them will be trained by the officers of the Kiltie regiment, all of whom have seen service in the trenches.

GERMANS SUFFER TERRIBLE LOSSES

PTE. DICK LEWIS, former member of 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported wounded.

One Company Was Reduced to 30 Men as a Result of the Heavy Shelling of the British Batteries Who Fired Hundreds of Thousands of Shells

PRISONERS ARE HAPPY

(By Philip Gibbs.)

War Correspondent's Headquarters, June 10.—The ground gained by our troops in the great battle of Messines Ridge remains firmly in our hands, and enemy attempts to counter-attack have been broken by our artillery in most cases before the German troops have ben able to advance. On Friday evening, shortly before dusk, S.O.S. signals all along the line gave warning of German endeavours to thrust back our new front line far beyond Messines Ridge and away north of St. Eloi on the old line of the Ypres salient, now by our victory no longer a salient. Our gunners got to work agoin in spite of night and day strain for more than a week, and for several hours there was another tremendous bombardment from all our heavies and field guns, watched for miles around by Flemish peasants sitting outside their windmills and outside cottage doors looking at this lightning in sky. In many cases rockets which rose from our lines last night calling for the help of the gunners were hardly needed, for though the enemy was seen to be assembling, he did not try to break through our barrage.

Glad to Be Prisoners.

In many cases massed bodies of his men were caught round Warneton, by this new storm of fire which burst upon them, and the night scenes behind the German lines must have been full of terror and tragedy for those poor wretches urged forward along roads plowed up by our shells. Only at Kline-Zillebeke, on the northern flank of our battle line did they gain a temporary footing, and many of them lie dead there after the fierce fight. Then it is no wonder that after such experiences of our gun fire German prisoners show no regret at being in British hands. I saw batches of them to-day, mopped up last night as an aftermath of the battle. They are mostly young boys and middle-aged men, all very sturdy and strong and astonishingly clean after their escape from the tumult of that frightful ground by Wytschaete and Messines. They stretched themselves in the sunshine, and took their ease in the green fields, drinking quarts of water provided by the guards. It is not with resignation, but with joy that they find themselves on our side of the lines, away from all that horror of fire zone.

"Now we shall go on leave," they said to one of our officers, "we are sick of this war." He spoke to two German boys who had been fighting for a year, and who now are only seventeen and look much younger. "You ought to be spanked and sent home to your mothers," he said. They laughed and said: "That is what we should like sir, if you please."

Enemy's Losses Heavy.

The enemy's losses hereabout were very heavy. An officer taken prisoner said that his own company was reduced to 30 men before the battle began. Owing to our bombardment many of their batteries were knocked out, and gunners lie dead before them. Several tanks came to share in the fighting and climbed over all this broken ground, but did not find much work to do as the strong parts had been knocked out. All along the battle-line these brown beasts were nosing about, crawling through sloughs, pitching and tossing over cratered earth and rearing long snouts over sandbag barricades, their pilots and crews out for any kind of adventure, over any kind of ground.

Not Many Casualties.

They did not have many casualties,

GIRL BITTEN BY DOG DOCTOR SAYS WAS RABIES CASE

Head Sent to Toronto and Official Report Is Expected in a Few Days — Animal Was Shot on Sunday

REMINDER OF CITY'S DELAY

Another case of rabies was discovered on Sunday morning when the dog, belonging to Mr. Edward Pemberton, corner of Rubidge and Townsend streets, had to be shot by the police. On Thursday the animal had attacked and bitten a member of the family, Miss Doris Pemberton. On that occasion, it is understood, there was no apprehension that the dog had rabies, but its actions on Sunday left little doubt. Dr. Johnston, veterinary surgeon was called and pronounced the animal a rabies case. P. C. Dannard put it out of misery and meance. Afterwards the head was removed and forwarded to Toronto for examination. In the meantime, Dr. Hammond was called and advised that Miss Pemberton undergo the Pasteur treatment. Dr. Amys, M.O. H., stated that this was unnecessary until the official report was received from Toronto. If it verifies the local opinions, Miss Pemberton will take the treatment.

Whatever the official report may be, this case provides another reminder that the city's "dog-catching" plans, announced weeks ago, have not yet materialised.

CHARMING VIOLINIST APPEARS TO-NIGHT

Concert at Conservatory Music Hall Will Be First Appearance Here of Wonderful Artist

Never in the history of Belleville has any artist charmed an audience as Miss Isolde Menges, the famous English violinist did in her recital, Friday, June 8th, and a return engagement has been arranged.

Professor Ann, of Petrograd, Russia, says Ysaye and Miss Menges are the two greatest artists in the world. Miss Beattie, Miss Menges' professional accompanist, also delighted the audience with her accompanying. Miss Menges has the charm of youth and persuasive manner—altogether a charming personality.

Miss Menges plays with wonderful technique and great expression. Do not miss this once in a life time opportunity of hearing Miss Menges to-night at the Conservatory of Music.

MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1917

ONE THING AT A TIME.

Hon. G. P. Graham has resigned the presidency of the Montreal Herald Publishing Company—he is too busy with his public duties to give both the attention a conscientious discharge of duty demands. Yet popular opinion expects the average newspaper man to run the business end of the concern and at the same time save the country, please everybody, make no mistakes, offend no bodies' susceptibilities, yet hew to the line; condemn every wrong and every wrong doer without offending or antagonising any interest. Mr. Graham is one of the most successful, energetic and capable of our public men, yet he finds that running a newspaper as a side-line demands more than he can give.

The Kaiser may regard Haig's earthquake as an omen—it is the way of earthquakes to herald landslides.

OWNING ONE'S HOME.

The English language is distinguished from many languages, especially the Latin languages, in having the word "home," with all its meaning expressed in one word. On Saturday the Examiner printed an admirable article showing the joys and advantages of owning one's home. The idea of a home, in its real meaning, does not permit of one having a home unless one owns it. Otherwise it is a mere dwelling place, an inn, a caravansery.

A home of one's own is not hard to get. Paying rent is a form of waste. A man living in another man's house, after years of paying rent, has nothing to show for his hundreds of dollars of payment, except some old boots in the back yard. A favorite argument against owning a home is that the money it represents can be more profitably invested. This argument is in fact an argument in favour of owning one's home. Very few of the average wage earners, without some special incentive, save enough money from their income to warrant any solicitude about investment. In most cases all the economy used is to save enough money to meet the rent bill, and in many cases not even this is done. In most cases all the rest of the income is expended.

But if a man with limited means, and even a small steady income, decides to buy a home, he pays a little down and puts the rest under mortgage, one of the few instances in which a mortgage is a good thing. To meet his payments he must economize and devote his savings to paying for his own home. He may have to forego some things; he will be compelled to deny himself and his family some luxuries, but this will be as nothing compared with the luxury of ownership and the pride of possession. When he shall have completed his payments he will be independent, and will have a substantial asset instead of the recollection of vanished hundreds of dollars paid in rent; an asset that has a real cash value—something for his money, that will yield something in case of removal. Besides he will have a place from which he cannot be ousted by a month's notice or having his house sold over his head.

An incidental advantage is that the home owner makes a better citizen. He will adorn his home, plant shade trees, something the usual landlord is not often guilty of. He will help make his home city or the city of his home, more beautiful. And there is something in city beauty. New York city is to spend eleven million dollars to shut out from her Riverside Park a view of near by railway yards and cover them over with iron and concrete, cover with soil and plant with trees and flowers.

Renting a house may be better in some ways than buying and owning a home; but only for the renter who uses his money and invests it profitably. With the great mass, however, there is no saving unless under the spur of necessity of making payments on a home.

We have had brought home to us of late the necessity of saving. Saving is one form of preparedness for eventualities, and if we do not practice it, the future holds many regrets. Earning days will end, and the world's charity for the homeless and the penniless is very cold.

Public ownership is a good thing sometimes; but private ownership is nearly always good.

WOMEN'S WAY.

It is generally held that forecasting election results would be difficult from not knowing what attitude the woman vote would assume towards public issues and public questions. The first exercise of the women franchise was made in the Alberta general election. The result shows that the vote of women had no effect in the way of change upon the party result; the standing of parties. This indicates that women pretty closely follow the party lines of their husbands and their families. Women like men, though we theoretically regard them as angelic, are as human as men, and possibly not less free from the prejudices of educative training, and as subject to the influence of original sin as men. This may apply in cases where there is no great issues involved; in a mere contest involving chiefly keeping office or gaining office; but possibly when some great moral question, like prohibition would be involved, women would ignore party lines, and vote for their own good and the good of the country. Anyway, whether women use the ballot with a proper appreciation of their responsibility, the ballot is their right, not only in the abstract, but they have earned it by the "man's" part they have played in a woman's way in the circumstances of this terrible war.

When we note the mess and mix-up and muddle in the political and governmental situation at Ottawa, we can have a new regard for Masbeth's witches' cauldron.

THE TRUE LIFE.

In another place on this page is printed a most pathetic letter from a gallant Canadian soldier, now dead, but living, in a large and instructive sense, when it was written. Mothers and wives, when they bid good-bye to their sons and husbands, envy the light hearts with which most soldiers seem to take the possibly last farewell. Yet these same soldiers, if they are the men which assuming the duties and dangers of service shows them to be, have serious thoughts under their apparently careless outward bearing. They appreciate the risk they run, but show true nobility of soul in assuming the responsibility. Going to war, besides the benefit of the service to country and cause, has a big influence upon the men, themselves. They face the future with more serious minds; their religion becomes a real thing, when the hour of its testing and its comfort comes. It becomes a real thing in their lives; the ordinarily heedless attitude many of us assume towards it is replaced by a trust in its cheer in the hour of danger, and its triumph in the hour of death. The hope that religion inspires lightens the darkest spots, robs danger of its dread and shines upon the path that though death leads to the real world where this short, troubled life becomes merged in the real life, the life of endless peace. Then, soldiering, apart from its religious aspects and influences, has a ripening and developing effect upon the soldier's life. A new sense of responsibility comes to him, and the best in the man—his resourcefulness, his obedience to discipline his courage and perception of duty become developed, and thoughtless boys become men with a man's sense of responsibility and man's appreciation of the claims of service. The highest human characteristic, work and thought for others, becomes a part of the soldier, as expressed in Lieutenant Glynn's colsing message to his parens—"Don't worry; pray and take care of the rest"—a brief, but eloquent epitomic of the sum of religion, faith in the Father, and thought and care and service for others.

"But whether on the scaffold high, or in the battle's van, the fittest place where man can die is where he dies for man."

A FLIGHT-LIEUTENANT'S FAREWELL LETTER TO HIS PARENTS.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 8.—In connection with the death of Lieut. Bernard Glynn, son of Mr. Patrick Glynn, Secretary of the Separate School Board of this city, and a medical student at the University of Toronto, interest attaches to a letter written by the young officer to a chum in this city, with instructions to have it sent to his parents only in the event of his being officially reported killed: The letter is as follows:

Sunday, December 17, 1916

My Dear Father and Mother:

The only condition upon which you will read this letter is when I have officially been stated to have died, hence this letter. Now, dear mother and father, it may seem disobedience on my part, but you know from the beginning of the war I wanted to go, for I wanted to do my part with all the other boys in fighting for the right, so I hope you have forgiven me for that. You may rest assured, dear father and mother, that I shall be prepared, for I fully realize what great danger I am going into, that all the chances are against me, so don't worry over me when I am gone. Remember baby and the rest of the children, that it is your duty before God to live and bring them up. I go to Mass and Holy Communion every morning possible and my prayers are with all of you at home. When you get this letter I shall have passed into another world whence, in the matter of a few years, we all must go. After all, dear parents, we were only placed here for a few years to do our duty to God and our country, and then be eternally happy forever with Him in Heaven; and if I never see you again in this world, in the matter of a few years we shall all be reunited in Heaven. We know Ignatius (a deceased brother of Lieutenant Glynn's), now a saint, is there waiting for us, and are you not really happier to know he is there than on this earth? Now when you read this, dear parents, I just want you to say "God's will be done," and go on caring for the rest. Do anything you can for the soldier boys that come back safely, for they deserve the best. My real dangers will start in a few weeks when I begin flying. Give my love to all my brothers and sisters and to my neighbors, and don't worry, for when you read this, if you do, your loving son will be in Heaven praying for all of you. Forgive me my faults and misdemeanors, for I know they were great and many, and I was not as good to you, who have done everything possible a mother and father could do for a son. Love and prayers from your loving soldier son, who think of you always. Don't worry—pray and take care of the rest. May Jesus, Mary and Joseph watch and guide over you ever. Good-bye.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice that cut worms are cutting down my cabbages and onions. Will you kindly advise me what I should do to prevent this trouble?

Yours truly,
Amateur Gardener.

An article dealing with this matter appears in this issue under the heading of "Best Ways to Control Most Common Insects of Vegetable Garden."—Editor.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see that there is an agitation on foot for another deputation to go to Ottawa, in furtherance of the completion of the Trent Valley Canal. This sort of thing has been going on for nearly one hundred years, ever since the inception of this project. Now, when the completion of the Canal is in view, our sapient Council made a present to the C.P.R. of our river front, thus intercepting access to the Canal, once it is built. In addition to this they have also included the ends of our streets, running east into the river, from Spaulding's Bay in the south west to the Goose Pond in the north ward.

Now that we are denied access to our own water front, I would like to ask what use will the Canal be to the city, or in going to further trouble and expense in promoting its completion.

The agencies employed in exploiting our city, we are told are in the interests of a "Greater Peterborough." I have said nothing about the ruinous taxation which will be involved by the various schemes of those advocates, that will manifest itself as the years roll by.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN

June 11th, 1917.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I am not at all surprised that Mr. Burnham, M.P., has misconceived the object of the meeting of representatives of municipalities along the line of the Trent Canal that was held in the Council Chamber last week and presided over by Mayor Duffus.

The object of the meeting was either to get a swing put in the Grand Trunk bridge at Campbellford or to have a high level bridge erected at that point so that there would be an unobstructed waterway from Peterborough to Trenton.

To accomplish this purpose as speedily as possible the Mayor was authorized to organize a deputation of representatives along the line of the canal to wait on the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals and to point out to him the great loss and inconvenience everyone on the line of the canal was suffering from, by reason of this Grand Trunk bridge blocking the way.

A little bit of foresight on the part of Mr. Burnham during this last five years would have avoided all this trouble as there was nothing to have prevented a high level bridge being built at this point long ago, had Mr. Burnham been alive to his duties and urged the Government to have this obstruction removed by the time the canal between Peterborough and Trenton was completed.

Mr. Burnham in his explanation which appeared in your Saturday evening issue says "Governments expect constituencies and their representatives to look after their own business and our Government is no exception." He, therefore, acknowledges that he must share the responsibility of this great delay that is taking place in the opening of the canal and the loss that is being borne by everyone in not being able to get in coal and other necessaries at lower freight rates. He now sees he has committed a blunder and has been short sighted and he is now seeking to throw the blame on the Hon. Frank Cochrane, the Minister who has charge of the Canal. He has quarrelled with the Minister He wanted this deputation to join in his quarrel to ignore Mr. Cochrane treat him with disrespect and go over his head, direct to Prime Minister.

At this recent meeting I took exception to this course and said that the deputation would defeat its object if it took this unwise course. I further pointed out that Mr. Cochrane was not unfriendly, and was, I thought, anxious to see the Canal completed and would do what he could to have this unfortunate Grand Trunk bridge built on a higher level or a swing opening made in the present one as quickly as possible.

I thought this explanation was due to your readers owing to the wild and reckless statements that were made in Mr. Burnham's letter to you, not only against the Grand Trunk, but against the Minister of the Crown he supports in the House of Commons and talks against outside of it in the hope of concealing his own short sightedness.

Yours truly,
R. R. HALL.

Press On Arrival of Root Commission

"WON RACE AGAINST TIME."

Brooklyn Eagle:—"The advent of our commissioners in Russia comes at a fortunate time. They have won the race against time, since they have arrived before anything has happened to make their visit futile."

"ARRIVAL AFFORDS A SENSE OF RELIEF."

Pittsburg Sun:—"The arrival in Russia of former Senator Root and the remainder of the commission from the United States is announced from Washington, and the knowledge that the Americans have safely negotiated a dangerous journey affords a sense of relief to the United States."

"TASK ANYTHING BUT LIGHT"

Wheeling (W. Va.) Register:—"Their task is anything but a light one. Possibly history has never known a like instance wherein a mission, composed of men of another race, entered a strange country to bring to their senses a strange people intoxicated with freedom and lust of revenge."

"ARRIVED AT CRITICAL TIME"

Rochester Post-Express:—"Reaching Russia at a critical time, (Mr. Root's) efforts and addresses will, as we believe, be powerfully effective in defeating the tendencies in the great empire that make for anarchy and reaction."

"AN AUSPICIOUS BEGINNING."

Philadelphia Record:—"It is altogether an able commission sent to perform a momentous service in this critical period of the world's history. Its safe arrival in Russian territory is an auspicious beginning."

"ALLIES MUST BACK AMERICANS."

Boston Globe:—"The United States has become the mediator between Russia and the rest of the Entente. This the authorities in the allied capitals should realize. They must back the Americans in Petrograd."

"MOST DIFFICULT JOB SINCE 1914."

Albany Knickerbocker Press:—"The job is the most difficult which has risen since those last days of July, 1914, when a man of commanding ability and force might have averted the whole dreadful war. But there is no reason to suppose that Root cannot cope with it."

"HAVE GENIUS TO HANDLE SITUATION."

Troy Record:—"The task before them is difficult, but they have the genius that should enable them to handle a delicate situation diplomatically and successfully."

TOO MANY PASSPORTS.

Ottawa Inspectors Look Into the Situation at Windsor.

WINDSOR, June 8.—As a result of a visit to Windsor to-day of two Dominion immigration inspectors from Ottawa, it is announced that there will henceforth be a general tightening up in the granting of passports. Since the law forbidding the entry into the United States of men of military age unless they carried passports or other sufficient means of identification became effective, a great number of the documents have been handed out, many, it is declared, to persons not properly entitled to them. This practice will be stopped at once, and only those men whose business duties take them across the river will be given passports. There is also a possibility that a number of the passports will be cancelled.

RECESSIONAL.

Thou whose deep ways are in the sea,
Whose footsteps are not known,
To-night a world that turned from Thee
Is waiting—at Thy Throne.

The towering Babels that we raised
Where scoffing sophists brawl,
The little Antichrists we praised—
The night is on them all.

The fool hath said... The fool hath said...
And we, who deemed him wise,
We who believed that Thou wast dead,
How should we seek Thine eyes?

How should we seek to Thee for power
Who scorned Thee yesterday?
How should we kneel in this dread hour?
Lord, teach us how to pray!

Grant us the single heart, once more,
That mocks no sacred thing,
The Sword of Truth our fathers wore
When Thou wast Lord and King.

Let darkness unto darkness tell
Our deep, unspoken prayer,
For, while our souls in darkness dwell,
We know that Thou art there.

—Alfred Noyes.

CUBS BEAT GIANTS IN THRILLING STRUGGLE

Largest Crowd of Season Sees Mitchell's Team Humble McGraw's Men.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Chicago defeated New York 6 to 7 to-day in one of the most exciting games of the season here. The largest crowd of the season witnessed the game. Hendrix then delivered a timely double, which scored two of his mates, tieing the score. Zelder's double then sent Hendrix home. Score:

The teachers of the city chartered the "Stony Lake" for their first annual excursion down the river on Saturday. The boat left the Peterborough wharf at 9 a.m., arriving at Robin's Landing at noon, where the ladies of the English Church at Roseneath had prepared a dainty lunch under the trees. A most enjoyable time was spent here. After lunch had been served baseball matches were played and umpired by Mr. R. F. Downie. Tea was served at Wallace's Point at 4 o'clock, and the picnickers arrived home at 9 p.m., enthusiastic over the great success of the whole affair. About sixty-five attended the excursion.

FACTORY INSPECTION OF CHEESE MAY BE DISCONTINUED SOON

Mr. G. A. Gillespie bought some of the Lindsay cheese this morning at 20 3-4 cents. Reports from practically all the factories throughout the Peterborough district state that the flow of milk is extremely heavy the make of cheese has been correspondingly large, and the storage capacity of the cool curing room is taxed to the limit with cheese that has been sold, but remains uninspected and unmoved.

All the cheese that has been sold up to the present has been or will be inspected at the factories, but it is altogether probable that in future the only inspection will be at Montreal by the government graders. This is the method that applies to all the factories east of Peterborough, and the new spirit of economy that governs the Canadian cheese export this year, will likely eliminate the factory inspection before many weeks pass.

This is a question Mr. Gillespie was asked to discuss to-day, and he remarked that the change would not be a detriment to the farmers. The Government graders are anxious to give the factories full value for their cheese, and quality will be the only point to be considered. Under the regular system the war has interrupted the representatives of the commission men who were not unmindful of the speculative possibilities of the market. The best cheese brought the best price, and the buyer was naturally anxious to get the finest and at the same time to define sharply the several grades. This was a general custom which the present extraordinary system has relegated for the time being. Mr. Gillespie advised the factory men to consider only one point, namely, the quality of their cheese. The better they made it, the higher the price they were assured. They had nothing to fear from the Government graders at Montreal.

It may be that the limited scope for speculation by the buyers will soon lead to the disbanding of the Board buying. It has been suggested that one man would represent the Government in each district, Mr. Flavelle for Lindsay, Mr. Gillespie for Peterborough, and the Campbellford, Belleville and other boards handled in the same way. This would still further reduce expenses, might mean more money to the farmer since the maximum price has been fixed at 21 3-4 cents, and otherwise facilitate the movement of the cheese.

ENNISMORE WELCOMES GUNNER J. PERDUE

First Township Soldier To Return from Overseas is Presented With a Purse of Gold and an Address

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING

On Thursday evening last the people of Ennismore were present in large numbers to give a welcoming cheer to Gunner John Perdue, their first returned soldier. Rev. Father McGuire acted as chairman, and in the following address, welcomed the returned hero:

To Gunner John Perdue:

On this, the happy occasion of your return from the blood-stained battlefields of France, we feel ourselves called upon to express in some way our admiration for your manhood, which felt and responded to Duty's sacred call.

We have known you as a child in our Public schools, we have seen you grow physically strong and watched you pass from our Public into our High school. There you were always ready and willing to do what seemed to you the best. Boys and girls, teachers and villagers, found in you no mean principles and, as we to-night look back on those days, we realize that, though many a prank you played, yet you expected us to smile, as you did, when we "played back."

Whether from books or no, while still young, the impulse of adventure took possession of you, and, with little warming, you left us, as many another has done, for the golden opportunities of the west. Within a few years, the whole wide world was shaken, when the ring of Germany's sword proclaimed her plighted word naught but a "scrap of paper," and you were among the first to hear England's call to all true mothers' sons to defend right against might. As early as September, 1914, in a Vancouver Battalion you enlisted. Of your experiences since, and thrilling they must have been, most of us have heard but little. So to-night we anticipate, part in sorrow, part in gladness, hearing from your own lips the story so many other lads may never tell, of what it really means to "do your bit."

You, Jack, are the first of our own boys to come back home, and that is why we are here to-night to welcome you heart and hand, once again into our midst. While we are sorry that the shrapnel has left one hand maimed, yet we earnestly congratulate you and your parents on your otherwise sound condition, and we would make you understand that your acts and those of your brother, who is still on the soil of Flanders, pushing Prussian militarism to the background have not gone unnoticed.

We, therefore, as a slight token of our appreciation of what you have done and suffered in our cause, ask you to accept this purse of gold. We hope it may always serve as a link between you and the parish where you were born, and that God's blessing will be upon you in the future, and that, though of wounds you lay down the arms of our King, yet you may be ever and always a soldier of the King of Kings.

Signed on behalf of the township of Ennismore.

The address was accompanied by the presentation of a purse of gold. Gunner Perdue made a suitable reply, but modesty refrained from telling his experiences. He thanked Father McGuire and the audience for their kindly thought in making his home-coming such a pleasant one, and assured them that, although soon to depart for the west, he would carry with him the remembrance of one of the most enjoyable evenings he had ever spent.

Speeches, suitable to the occasion, were made by Mr. John Telford and Mr. Noble Kelly, Bridgenorth. As Mr. John Young, reeve of the township, was unavoidably absent, Clerk Moloney was called upon instead.

A splendid musical programme was then given by the choir, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Telford, and Mr. Jim Jopling of Bridgenorth. After three cheers for Gunner Perdue, the evening was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Gunner Perdue enlisted in Vancouver and was wounded near Courcelette during the battle of the Somme last year.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC GREATER ENEMY THAN GERMANY

Stirring Address by Mr. Ben Spence, Secretary of the Dominion Alliance — "On to Ottawa" Is New Slogan

"Any newspaper that sells its columns to advance the interests of a traffic said by Lloyd George, to be a greater enemy than even Germany, is worse than if it sold its columns to advance the interests of Germany in this country." The speaker was Mr. Ben. Spence, who, last evening, gave an address in George Street Methodist Church. Mr. Spence, who is Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, with headquarters in Toronto, is an authority on matters pertaining to prohibition. He left no doubt in the minds of his hearers as to the future intention of the organization which he represents. The temperance forces have secured all the legislation that the Province of Ontario has power to grant and is now making preparation for a big drive on the Federal authorities at Ottawa with a view of obtaining legislation that will prohibit the manufacture of liquor, the importation of liquor, inter-provincial trade in liquor, and the use of the mails for solicitation of business. As an argument against the suggestion that the liquor traffic is dead, Mr. Spence produced several hundred lines of liquor advertising which he had cut out of a Toronto paper, Saturday night, before coming to Peterborough. "A dead one never advertises," observed Mr. Spence, as he allowed the long string of advertisements to flutter to the floor. Mr. Spence produced figures to show that drunkenness is on the decrease in the interior of the province and on the increase in some of the border towns. This, Mr. Spence contended, proves that drunkenness increases in proportion to the facility for obtaining liquor.

In conclusion, Mr. Spence urged the temperance forces to stand together and help carry the fight on to Ottawa, where it is hoped to secure legislation that will offset the attempts of the liquor interests to nullify the laws of the Province.

"Benediction On This War" Granted in a Resolution of Peasants of Russia

Delegates to Congress Urge Army To Defend Revolutionary Russia and Promise To Recoil from No Necessary Sacrifice To Sustain Fighting Men at Full Strength

Russian Girl Students to Fight in the Field Just Like Men Do.

PETROGRAD, via London, June 11. —Two hundred girl students of the Petrograd Technical Institute have entered their names on the rolls of a woman's regiment which is being raised by Ensign Butchkareff. The aim is immediately to start to the front and to fight in all respects under the same conditions as men.

Scores of girls and women anxious to fight appeared to-day at the offices of the League of Equal Riights for Women, which has expressed its approval of Lieutenant Butchkareff's plan.

Last week the women warriors held their first meeting. They were addressed by Colonel Popoff, of the Twelfth Army, who appealed to the women to shame male strikers and to admit to their hearts only suitors who have actively helped to defend the fatherland.

PETROGRAD, via London, June 11. —The Congress of Peasants adopted a resolution calling upon the army to submit to discipline and defend revolutionary Russia. The Congress affirms the duty of those it represents to defend the country energetically and make every sacrifice to sustain the fighting strength of the army.

The Congress grants its benediction to this war and will not forget the blood which has been shed," are the closing words of the resolution. As adopted by the delegates, the resolution is as follows:

The Congress "grants its benedicpence without humiliating annexation or indemnity and with the right of each nation to dispose of itself. International relations and treaties should be submitted to the control of the peoples interested. Disputes should be settled by an international tribunal and not by force. The Congress approves the union of workers and appeals to the peasants of all countries to force their governments to renounce annexation and indemnities.

"The Congress considers that it is its duty energetically to defend its country, recoiling before no sacrifices in order to sustain the fighting strength of the army and the struggle for the safety of the patrimony of the Russian people. The Congress summons the army to submit to discipline and defend revolutionary Russia, of peasants and workers. It grants its benediction to this war and will not forget the blood which has been shed."

The Minister of War, Mr. Kerensky, has ordered that the resolution be read to all ranks of the army and the navy.

Germans Suffer Terrible Losses

and would have been more successful if our infantry wanted more help from them, but the guns did most of the work beforehand. The completeness of this victory, the march through of our troops, the utter despair of German troops, were due to the guns and gunners who served them. It is only right and just that the highest tribute should be paid to those men, who worked day and night for nearly a fortnight under intense strain, infernal noise, and without sleep enough to relieve nerve rack, and always in danger of death. Gunner officers are hoarse with shouting under fire, they were for the moment hollow-eyed with bodily and mental exhaustion, and ammunition carriers worked themselves stiff in order to feed the guns. They used up an incredible number of shells. The gunners of one division alone fired 180,000 shells with their field batteries, and over 46,000 with their heavies. On the same scale has been the ammunition expenditure of all the other groups of guns.

M'GRAW AND BYRON HAVE A BATTLE.

New York Manager and Umpire Came to Blows at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, June 8.—After the New York-Cincinnati game had been finished to-day, Manager McGraw of the New Yorks and Umpire Byron of the National League were the participants in a fight at the ball park. In a signed statement McGraw admits he hit the umpire, but claimed that he was provoked.

During an effort of the groundkeeper to separate the two, Rariden, the New York catcher, not knowing the groundkeeper, came to what he supposed was McGraw's assistance, and hit the groundkeeper. A general scramble followed, but no one was seriously hurt.

NO BREAK YET IN LIBERAL RANKS

Difference of Opinion To Be Subordinated Until After Bill Is Discussed

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 11. — Pending the presentation this afternoon of Sir Robert Borden's conscription bill, there is a tendency in the ranks of the Liberals to-day to "hang together," despite ominous demonstrations and speeches at the Liberal conscription meeting on Saturday night, which portended a definite break in the party on this momentous issue.

This morning there appeared to be a noticeable closing up of the Liberal ranks, and the subordination of differences of opinion, at least until the details of the bill may be discussed.

It is still felt in some circles that a split is inevitable, but in the meantime party union is the watchword. Some Liberals, however, still think that a compromise between factions of the party is possible.

It is stated here to-day that Lieut.-Col. P. E. Blondin will be recalled to the Cabinet to act as Secretary of State and again administer the Post Office Department in succession to Hon. E. L. Patenaude.

CHAPLAIN MAJOR DAVIDSON IN FRANCE

Official Commendation of His Work — "In Touch With the Fighting Men"

Mr. N. F. Davidson, K.C., Toronto, has received a letter from Col. Almond, director of chaplain services, O. S., military forces of Canada, dealing with the chaplaincy forces. The following paragraph, relating to his brother, Rev. J. C. Davidson, of St. John's will be read with interest.

I saw your brother at No. 3 Stationary Hospital. He is very much beloved and is working very hard. I chose that post especially for him, as it is very near the line and practically in touch with the fighting men, without having to endure the discomforts of the dugout, where I know he would like to be. He has asked to be transferred there, but I do not intend to act on his request. He is looking very well, indeed. I intend writing him a letter asking him if he wishes to be transferred to England for duty. I would be very glad to have him here, as I mean to try and raise the standard of the Chaplain Service in England on a level with the Chaplain Service in France.

With all best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

"JOHN M. ALMOND."

Colonel, Director of Chaplain Services, O.S., Military Forces of Canada.

Four Violent Earthquakes Near Rome To-day

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, June 11. — Four violent earthquakes early to-day caused a panic at Terni. Despatches received here assert considerable damage was done. All inhabitants of the town fled to the open fields and are now camping out there, fearing further earth tremors.

Terni is a town of about thirty-one thousand population, located in the Province of Perugia, forty-nine miles northeast of Rome. A big government arsenal is there. The town is famed for its Roman ruins and a cathedral.

CRUELTIES TO JEWS DEPORTED IN JAFFA

Alexandria Consul Says They Were Robbed, Assaulted and Some Were Slain

POPULATION WAS STARVED.

Tale That Same Fate Awaits All Jews in Palestine—Djemal Pasha Blamed.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The story of how the Jews of Jaffa were deported by the Turkish Government ostensibly as a measure of "military precaution" was received yesterday from the State Department by the American Jewish Relief Committee. Consul Garrels at Alexandria, Egypt, forwarded to the department an account of the happenings early in April, Mr. Garrels said:

"The orders of evacuation were aimed chiefly at the Jewish population. Even German, Austro-Hungarian, and Bulgarian Jews were ordered to leave the town. Mohammedans and Christians were allowed to remain provided they were holders of individual permits. The Jews who sought the permits were refused. On April 1 the Jews were ordered to leave the town within forty-eight hours. Those who rode from Jaffa to Petach Tikvah had to pay 100 to 200 francs instead of the normal fare of 15 to 25 francs. The Turkish drivers practically refused to receive anything but gold, the Turkish paper note being taken as the equivalent of 17.50 piastres for a note of 100 piastres.

"Already about a week earlier 300 Jews were deported in a most cruel manner from Jerusalem. Djemal Pasha openly declared that the joy of the Jews on the approach of the British forces would be shortlived, as he would make them share the fate of the Armenians. In Jaffa Djemal Pasha cynically assured the Jews that it was for their own good and interest that he drove them out. Those who had not succeeded in leaving on April 1and following days were graciously accorded permission to remain at Jaffa over the Easter holidays until April 9. Thus 8,000 were evicted from their houses and not allowed to carry off their belongings or provisions. Their houses were looted and pillaged even before the owners had left. A swarm of pillaging Bedouin women, Arabs with donkeys, camels, etc., came like birds of prey and proceeded to carry off valuables and furniture.

"The Jewish suburbs have been totally sacked under the paternal eye of the authorities. By way of example two Jews from Yemen were hanged at the entrance of the Jewish suburb of Tel Avid in order clearly to indicate the fate in store for any Jews who might be so foolish as to oppose the looters. The roads to the Jewish colonies north of Jaffa are lined with thousands of starving Jewish refugees. The most appalling scenes of cruelty and robbery are reported by absolutely reliable eye-witnesses. Dozens of cases are reported of wealthy Jews who were found dead in the sandhills around Tel Avid. In order to drive off the bands of robbers preying on the refugees on the roads the young men of the Jewish villages organized a body of guards to watch in turn the roads. These guards have been arrested and maltreated by the authorities.

"The Mohammedan population have also left the town recently, but they are allowed to live in the orchards and country houses surrounding Jaffa and are permitted to enter the town daily to look after their property, but not a single Jew has been allowed to return to Jaffa.

"The same fate awaits all Jews in Palestine. Djemal Pasha is too cunning to order cold-blooded massacres. His method is to drive the population to starvation and to death by thirst, epidemics, etc., which, according to himself, are merely calamities sent by God. Those who knew his methods will not be surprised if after a short time severe punishment is dealt out to those who have looted and pillaged under his order, or at least with his connivance. This would be in accordance with his settled policy of exciting one part of the population against the other and exterminating all those who are not Turanians."

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also secure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Food Prices Cause Unrest in England

Failure of the Control Machinery Largely Responsible for Growing Labour Troubles

PLAIN TALK TO THE KING.

William Thorne, Labour Member of Parliament, Tells Monarch Facts About Food Situation.

LONDON, May 31.—Wm. Thorne, the Labour member of parliament, who had an interview with King George the other day, told the monarch what Thorne himself described as "some solid, homely truths." Thorne intimated that the King liked his plain speaking and showed familiarity with the questions they discussed—labour unrest and high food prices.

Censorship regulations which have since been roundly denounced in the press of all shades of opinion, prevented free discussion of the causes of the recent engineering strike, and thereby, in the general view, helped to create a much more serious situation than would have been caused had the strikers' grievances been publicly ventilated. Although the engineering strike was settled by eleventh-hour intervention on the part of Lloyd George, labour unrest still continues, and is closely connected with the continuously increasing prices of food and notorious profiteering which no adequate steps have yet been taken to check.

When Lord Devonport accepted the Food Controllership he did so with reluctance; after others, including Lord Milner, had refused the post, which was wittily described as "a hanging job" for the holder. Ill-health increased Lord Devonport's difficulties, and sympathy has been expressed for him over the attacks to which he has been subjected, one critic for instance asking what but failure could be expected from a "sublimated grocer." The hard fact, however, remains that the British food problems have been complicated, if anything, by the methods by which they have been tackled. The fault is not laid altogether with the Controllership Department. The public's view of the situation was obscured by an injudicious campaign for the immediate introduction of a system of compulsory rationing which relegated the official appeals for voluntary restrictions to the back ground.

Must Cut Profits.

Three aspects of the problem which are now receiving chief attention here and which American reports of Mr. Hoover's plans seem to indicate he has well in view, are a better system of distribution and less profiteering, with a consequent reduction in prices, and due enforcement of of the Controller's edicts. At present the last are scarcely enforced at all, and breaches of the law are widespread and habitual. Sales at prices above the legal maximum are almost monitious, and some people have made fortunes out of them. Profiteering in various forms flourishes. There is no adequate means of detection and little or no check on hoarding. Oats, for instance, of the harvest of 1915 are still being hoarded in certain parts of the country. The numerous department controller and committees which have to do with food are insufficiently coordinated. Thoughtless things have been done for their picturesque effect, such as plowing up the poor soil in Richmond Park. There is plenty of better soil in the country waiting to be cultivated. The production problem is one not of land but of labour. Recently it was announced that the government had taken over control of the flour mills. This control remains merely theoretical—the mills are neither inspected nor rationed, nor is the percentage of mixtures enforced. The Food Controller's effective intervention is still limited to fixing the price of imported wheat. When Mr. Hoover fed the Belgians he went much further—the millers, bakers, every intermediary, worked for him for a commission and no more, and he provided a cheaper loaf than is obtainable in England, although his wheat was bought in the same markets.

EASY TO CONTROL MILLS

The number of mills which grind for bread in this country is only about 750, and there are no serious obstacles to controlling the millers and wholesalers. They ought to have their profits fixed just as the importers have, and then the baker's price to the public could be fixed. Also, at present the retail baker gets very little profit, and the Government itself is about one penny out of pocket in every two-pound loaf by what is virtually a subsidy on freight and other charges. Yet the six pence or six and a half pence which the loaf costs, permits a very considerable profit, nearly the whole of which is scooped up by the middlemen.

Although there is an abundance of meat in the country prices range about double what they were before the war. In several instances the maximum prices fixed by the Food controller have been higher than the ruling market prices, with the result that prices have been forced up, and experience shows that maximum prices have a remarkable tendency to become minimum prices.

Tobacco, though outside the food controllership, affords a striking example of how the official regulation of price works to the disadvantage of consumers and the advantage of the profiteerer The government fixed the price by the pound. The tobacco trade generally augmented its charge to the consumer out of all proportion to the official increase.

The new Food Controller has a gigantic task before him. Public discontent is reaching a high level. The co-operative congress at Swansea yesterday passed a resolution condemning as unsatisfactory the method of food control, which has resulted in high prices and consequent profiteering, and several speakers charged that the poor were suffering while the rich were untouched.

Discontent is not only running high, but is widespread, and as already mentioned, no small part of the labour unrest can be traced to the food questions. One suggestion which is significant is that labour should be represented in the food controllership.

DRAIN INDUSTRIES OF MEN

Social Insurance Statistics in Germany Tell the Story.

On March 1st the number of women employed in German industries covered by the social insurance laws exceeded that of the men by 10,802, according to data found in a recent issue of the Reihsarbeitsblatt. At the beginning of February the men were still in the majority, outnumbering the women by 10,050, but at the end of that month the records of the sick and death benefit associations showed 3,973,457 women on the rolls, compared with 3,962,655 men.

What seems to indicate both a remarkable shifting of male workers from the field of industry to that of battle and a moving of women workers from industries covered by the social insurance rules into other lines of labour is found in a comparison between the figures of March 1 and those for the first half of 1916. At the end of the latter period the number of women covered by the social insurance laws was given as 4,783,472, and the number of men as 5,288,922. by data furnished by the sick and death benefit societies. In 1914, the figures were 3,506,164, and 6,160,912 respectively.

PROTESTS GERMAN SALES OF ALSACE PROPERTY

Transfers of Property Are Null According to French Law — German Disposal of French Property Will Not Be Recognized

PARIS, June 12.—A communication issued by the Foreign Office says the French government has protested through the panish Ambassador at Berlin, against the liquidation by the German government of the property of French subjects in Germany, in the regions of France occupied by Germans and in Alsace-Lorraine, and has declared that it considers these liquidations void.

Reply to the German statement that the property of French subjects is being disposed of in reprisal for the sale of property in France owned by Germans, the communication says no property of Germans has been sold in France except for the purpose of providing funds for the payment of debts due by the owners of such property, as has been done in Germany in similar cases. The liquidations ordered by the German government are now of an entirely different character, says the communication, and are ordered by officials in the absence of liabilities on the part of the French owners and with a purely political object.

The French government calls attention especially to the systematic dispersion by the Germans at auction of furniture, objects of art and historic souvenirs, often of more sentimental than intrinsic value, and says that the declaration will be made to all neutral and allied governments, so that foreigners who may acquire property thus liquidated will know that France considers such sales void, as well as any subsequent transfer. A measure recently passed by the Chamber and to come up at an early date in the Senate declares such transfers are null in the eyes of French law.

EAT BANANAS AND GROW FAT

"Bananas are the cheapest foodstuff on the market," said Lewis Evans, Montreal representative of the United Fruit Company a few days ago. "When one contemplates potatoes at $4 a bag and a loaf of bread at 13c., a dozen bananas for 25c. sounds like a bargain-counter fiction. But it is not. We are handling in our company, 116,000,000 bananas, or over 38,000,000 pounds of this pure and nutritious food every week. Since the outbreak of the war, while the price of other foodstuffs has increased 50 to 100 per cent., bananas have only gone up 25 per cent., and this notwithstanding the tremendous losses by storms in the West Indies last autumn.

"At the present moment, when the attention of the country is being focused, as never before, upon the extreme importance of food, the statement of Mayor Mitchell, of New York, that bananas contain most of the nourishment that meat does, is of the utmost significance. According to leading authorities, bananas are many times more nutritious than potatoes. Albuminates are present in bananas almost in the same proportion as in milk. These facts are most important to the poor of the country, as bananas have admittedly become for them one of the few staple articles of diet which remain fairly stationary, when other leading foodstuffs are given to sky-rocketing beyond the wildest dreams of frenzied speculators.

"Tell the people to try bananas as a really practical solution of the High Cost of Living and see if it doesn't work out well."

The instalment plan is an expensive one, and should be used only by those finding it impossible to make other arrangements.

"Over the Top" Canadian Tells His Feelings

What It Seems Like To Charge the Enemy in No Man's Land

"A Canadian Sergeant" writes in The London Daily Express:

There's a crawling, goosey, hunger sick, maggoty feeling in the stomach of you; a save-the-women-and-children-and-God-help-me grip at the heart. The fear of breaking down clutches and numbs the brain like the icy hand of the Grim Angel.

Have you ever been three hours father to come home and give you the licking of your life? Did you ever see the only girl you could ever love going to the theatre with another fellow? Did you ever sit (or is it stand) in a dock to say whether you did or didn't? Eh? Well, just roll these delightful sensations all into one, plaster a few shovelfuls of sticky clammy mud around your legs and hands (not forgetting to save a little for your rifle). Then finish off neatly with a dash of ice and sleet from the North Pole, and roll into an "assembly trench" in front of your own front line in No Man's land. This is probably the feeling you will have while waiting "to go over."

A few centuries pass. You notice such trivial things as that your puttees are getting frayed. Ah, well! all the easier to get a new pair when you go on leave. Leave? God save us! You poor, miserable microbe, you are just awaiting your execution.

Ages roll by. Some blasted fool is trying to smile—the same ghastly contortion of the facial muscles you would expect when caught by a physically fit and anti-prohibition coalheaver in the arms of his wife.

More gloom, more wintry blasts, more "deeper depths."

Swish, swish, swish. Rapidly, say in half a second.

"There she goes," whispers an old hand in your ear. "She's opened up!"

Some one from somewhere makes a sign, and in about a second you are actually "over the top," in No Man's Land, face set toward—well, whatever it happens to be. You are surprised to find that your blood still circulates, that you can leap, crawl, stagger onward—forward. And in what seems to be a minute of time you are close up to "his" front line. You are glad that he is putting up a scrap. You flop quickly into a shell hole and peep cautiously over the top. You are suddenly conscious that your comrades on your right and left are doing the same. There is no need to worry, though; it is merely the gauging of the stride for the last minute.

You are conscious of someone by your side for the first time. Why is he rolling his head around in that rather idiotic manner, as though overcome by sleep. He is grinning. Ah! there is a hole through his neck. It is the grin of death. By jove! It's Jimmy. You are not shocked or grieved—just surprised. The shock and grief will come later.

You find yourself moving again (the wait having occupied a minute or so) and that everyone else is moving along the line. Also Fritz is moving, and that as fast as fear and the first law of nature will carry him. Then begins the big hunt. But that is another story.

The official reports will grandiloquently state that "We advanced on a front of," etc. The special war correspondent will submit that "our boys magnificently stormed." But if you want it in the vernacular of the Army, you merely went "over the top."

THE SUBMARINE TOLL.

Three hundred and seventy-one British vessels have been sunk in the three months since the Admiralty began issuing statements without giving the tonnage of vessels. In that period over 65,000 vessels have entered or left British ports.

Wheat Prices Higher Yesterday — The Cattle Market

The trend of the market was higher. Winnipeg was especially strong on the October option, in which there is now considerable trading, in spite of the long distance running and the necessity for carrying the option through several months. Ontario cash wheat is quoted 10c higher, and Ontario flour follows suit to the Manitobas, and goes up 40c.

Manitoba wheat—Official, No. 1 northern, track, bay ports $2.78; No. 2, $2.75; unofficial $2.80; No. 1 northern, lake ports, No. 2, $2.77.

CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 159 cars, with 2,890 cattle, 146 calves, 1,447 hogs, and 71 sheep and lambs.

Trade yesterday was even slower than last Monday, and prices were down from 35c to 50c below last week. The general feeling in fact among the trade and frequently given expression to was that prices must come lower. Too high prices have been paid in this country, and drovers must be prepared to take their losses. Realising this, several drovers let go their cattle yesterday morning, believing they might lose still more by holding them.

Trade was so slow that up to the noon hour less than 800 cattle had gone over the scales, out of the 2,900 in the market.

Milkers and springers in good demand.

Calf trade good.

Sheep weak. Lambs steady.

Hogs 50c lower than last week.

The Voyage of the 235th Battalion

Sergeant Fred Jamieson, Well Known Local Boy, Writes Interesting Diary of the Trip Across the Atlantic — Many Local Soldiers With the Battalion

Mrs. George Jamieson has received the following interesting letter from her son, Sergt. Fred Jamieson, who went overseas recently with the 235th Battalion:

My Dear Mother and Dad.—Well, here I am on board Metagama steam ship, in mid-ocean, and expect to sight land to-morrow, and be in Liverpool the following day, from which place I will cable you.

I suppose you have received my last letter, just leaving Moncton, N. B. Well, the following day (I have lost track of dates), we were held in Truro, N. S., for twenty-four hours; so many troop trains ahead of us that they would not handle them. The country all through this part is very rough. Well, we arrived in Halifax Friday evening, after dark, and, of course, all were very glad, although we had enjoyed the trip, having had a little sing-song every night and playing cards most of the day. Slept well, also could eat any old time; had most of my meals in "Diner"; still had twenty-three patients, but orderlies did most of the work.

Up about 7 a.m., Saturday, fully expecting to get aboard that day, but was quite busy; had case of measles to take to hospital, and night came on and still no word of going aboard. However, the Doctor came in about midnight and told me we would not leave the train until Tuesday, and, believe me, I felt like leaving the whole blamed thing, because it was much worse when the train was standing still and especially when there was a troop train on either side of us. However, we got along O.K. Sunday, had another case of measles for hospital; then took three fellows and went down to Y.M.C.A. and had a good swim and felt much better; after dinner took two more fellows to hospital with measles, and then went for a walk. Was rather in luck as our train as under guard and most of the fellows could not get out. Had another sing-song, and went to bed about 12 p.m.; up about 7 a.m. Monday, rather a slow day; made the excuse of going to hospital, but went down town and had a hair cut and shave; stayed away until noon. Played cards all afternoon, much the same as Sunday evening; went to bed at midnight. Tuesday, late getting up and had to rush another chap to the hospital; had a little breakfast when bugle sounded the fall-in. Got back to our car and found all ready, but one man; had to rush around and get him into the baggage car, as the troops had all gone ahead; pulled down to ship about 10 a.m. and by 11 a.m. were all nicely settled. Have a very nice hospital, eleven beds, and all have been kept busy. My cabin is No. 80, Berth B; a lower in the second class—nice, clean, white sheets and the floor carpeted; just as nice as any of our hotels at home. The Sergeants also eat in the same saloon as the officers, only one hour earlier. I will send you some menu cards and you can judge for yourself how we are living.

Well, we came on board 10 a.m., and there was the same old rush of every one getting settled, and finding the fellows you know. We pulled out from dock about 5 p.m. and ran back up the river about seven or eight miles, and anchored. Then, of course, reports started as to when we were to sail. However, every one was in bed about 10.30, and we had our sick parade arranged for 9 a.m. for which I was very glad. You see there are sixteen hundred troops on board and only two doctors, so each took half and the other doctor had his parade at 7.30 a.m.; then we come on at 9 a.m. The parade, as far as our Battalion was concerned, was quite small, but, believe me, the others made up for it; finished about noon and was quite ready for a good dinner; slept most of the afternoon; every one in bed again about 10.30. Thursday much the same, only we were beginning to discover that some of the members of other Battalions were having mumps, and, of course, had to get a quarantine ward where we had six fellows the first day. Well, about 4 p.m. it was reported we would pull out at 5 p.m. Was in the saloon when she started to sail. Of course every one came on deck; the Sergeants and officers have the promenade deck, and we all had a good view; it was wonderful to see the large war vessels slipping by; it was a glorious night and quite calm. We came again to Halifax at 6.35 p.m. and noticed the Justicia tied up, and also loaded with troops; we passed the dock and she also pulled out and fell in as our rear; it was just beginning to get dusk by this time and lights were springing up all along the coast. It was great to see those huge floating monsters all lighted up, and silently passing down the river and around the point, one after another, as though they were alive and knew just exactly every turn in the long, long trail; gradually the lights on shore began to disappear, and then the land land began to slip away, when the Band struck up "O Canada" and "The Maple Leaf For Ever," then "God be With You Till We Meet Again."

I think everyone on board went to bed feeling rather blue. However, I went into the smoker with some of the fellows, and the Doctor came in; suddenly he jumped up, clapped his hand over his mouth, and beat it. He came in again in a short time, quite white, and said, Fred, I am quite sick, and if I am not better will not be down to sick parade; I stayed in the smoker until about 11 p.m. and every few minutes you would see first one and then another getting out, either with a handkerchief or their hand tightly placed over their mouth, and would not return.

I could feel the motion of the ship by this time; but it reminded me of my summer on the lakes with Norm. Hatton, and I did not seem to mind it.

While we were sitting there. (It is quite a large room all finished in the unstained or natural oak and green leather chairs and couches, or Davenports) up in one corner four fellows were playing cards; one had taken suddenly sick, but his hand was not quick enough. Needless to say they had to destroy the cards; also one of the fellows had to discard his tunic and take a bath. That changed everyone's mind and we all went to bed.

Our first night at sea; and it sure was some sensation, four of us packed away in the compartment, the continual sway of the boat soon put us all to sleep and I never heard a murmur until 6.30, when I had to slide into some clothes and get to hospital by 9 a.m.

Well, it is time for lunch and as I have not missed a meal, yet this would be no time to start as I cannot get enough to eat at three meals per day, but have to visit the kitchen at night.

Friday morning's parade was large and they were hanging over the side of the ship, and everything but the moon was coming up; most of them were seasick, and we could not do much for them, but make them stay up in the fresh air. An officer did not arrive on the parade, so I went down to see him, and you would think he had been sick about a month; he also informed me that if he thought he could get his wife across without her being sick he would live in England the remainder of his life. I could not help but laugh at him, and I don't think he liked it any too well to see me feeling tip-top and him feeling so sick. I saw him several times that day, and each time he seemed worse, and of course knew that we could not do a thing for it; I got him some sedlitz powders, but he could not get them down.

I was all over the ship and they were sick and lying in every possible condition, and you simply had to walk over them and leave them there. I sure was busy for about three days. The funny part of it was, Mason, the Corporal with us, took sick; also the other Doctor, and there I was. I had to get in some new orderlies and they would be around about half an hour when they would have to hang over the side along with the others. I had too much to do to get sick and stuck it through without missing or losing a meal.

It was much the same for several days, and as far as we could see, we were still in the same place, nothing but water on every side; the sun came up out of the water and in the evening disappeared into the water. There are four troop ships in our party, and one warship, for guard, all loaded with soldiers.

On Wednesday some of our escorts arrived, two submarine destroyers; and they are wonderful little vessels; not much larger than some of the launches you see on the river at home, but they sure travel some. The next morning there were two more, and finally, we had seven of them.

On Thursday a very sad thing happened; one of our patients passed away about 2.30 p.m. and I was alone with him when he died. I had sent for the Doctor but he did not get there in time. He was a man from the 177th of Barrie. He came to us with a very heavy cold and it turned to hardening of the lungs, and his heart gave out. He never said a word, only I asked him how he felt, and he said, faintly, a little better, and thought he could get a little sleep, and in about ten minutes he had gone.

We then had to arrange for burial; so they removed him from the ward; there were several other fellows in the same room with him. They took him down on to the dack below, and in about an hour had him sewn up in canvas, and all ready; but we could not stop that night, so had to leave the poor chap on the deck all night and he was buried at sea on Friday at 10 a.m. Had a short service from the top deck, and they lowered him over the side and simply tossed him over; the ship could not stop, and in five minutes you would not know there had been anything happened; but such is life in the Army.

Friday, all day, everyone began watching for land but it did not appear. We had quite a storm during the morning, but in the afternoon it cleared and they ran off some sports—boxing, wrestling etc; played cards at night.

Well, we all expected to see land Saturday a.m. but were again disappointed and when I first came on deck the destroyers were travelling around our ships at some speed. We knew then, that we were in a very dangerous part of the water. They keep it up all day and still no land.

This brings me up to Sunday, 13th, 9 p.m.; it is now about 3 p.m. with you. It sure has been a funny Sunday to me; in fact I did not realise it was Sunday until after supper time.

Got up about 6.45 a.m. and had sick parade; the Doctor came in just as I was finished; then we innoculated about thirty fellows, and by this time there was an island in sight; some said it was Ireland, but to tell the truth I don't think they knew, because we have passed several islands and they all seem to be Ireland. We picked up some trawlers along here; they were looking for German mines; nothing exciting happened; only we had roast duck for supper and I ate too much. The report is now that we will be in Liverpool in about two hours, and will land in the morning. However, we will see in the morning.

Well, I think that is most of our trip so far.

We were told to-day we would get our first leave in a few days after landing; so I am going up to Bill's home, with him, for my first leave.

I believe we are not allowed to cable for four days after arriving, and I suppose you are worried to death, but you needn't, as I am well and happy.

I will be glad to get my feet on solid ground again, as thirteen days seem rather long to be cooped up on ship.

Well mother, I guess this will be all for this time. Will try and write quite often when we get settled.

Hoping you are well, with love.

FRED.

FAMED VIMY RIDGE DONE IN MINIATURE

To say that the Vimy Ridge victory is directly associated with a pretty little model sounds almost like meaningless levity. Yet I have it on the authority, says a writer, of one who is beyond question qualified to speak that such is the case. The material of which the model is moulded is plasticine, and the coloring is done with vivid realism. You see the general verdure of the landscape, the alternate chalky and earthy tracery of the whole trench systems, the network of roads and tracks, the railways and streams, and, most important of all, the contour of the ridges, spurs, gullies, and plateaus, all reproduced with amazing fidelity in precise proportion.

Over this lilliputian landscape Staff Officers of high rank pored for hours on end, and officers and non-coms. from the Canadian units which were detailed for the assault were coached in their parts on this wonderful model. Much artillery plotting was done over this fascinating plan. It deserves to be placed in some monumental niche, for beyond all question it contributed to a degree which it would be difficult to exaggerate to the splendid victory so often schemed upon its surface.

WHEN THEY RETURN

Modesty of Hero on Leave Illustrated by the Following Story

Henri Hubert was back on twenty-one days' leave of absence from the front trenches of the French Army in the field. And his definition of a "nice job" is worth reading. "What is your particular work just now?" he was asked.

"Oh, I've got a nice job," he replied. "I do observation work." It was suggested that he must be an aviator, but he said no, he was still in the Infantry.

"What I do," he said, "is to stand in the front line trench with a pair of strong binoculars and the receiver of a telephone to my ear to report to headquarters everything I see in front of me."

A nice job indeed. But that is the way with all these returned men, whether they are on leave or have come back for good. The proximity of death and desolation has made them lose all proportion of things that happen at the front, things which to those left behind are awful, and to them are daily and rather tedious occurrences.

As will be remembered, Henri used to be the Managing Director of the National Sporting Club at Maisonneuve, Montreal. When the war broke out, being born in France, he went to the front at once, though his people resided in Montreal.

Hubert wore a medal. "How did you get that?" he was asked. "Carrying the body of a friend of mine back to our lines from close near the enemy's trenches," he told. That was all. In fact he admitted that he had nothing of interest to tell, and yet he was for three years steadily in the thick of it first in the Argonne, and then on the Somme, and yet again where the most fighting was. He was wounded once in the side. He looked well in his greyish-blue or blueish-grey uniform of the French Army. He had lost flesh, but he looked hard as nails, and had a complexion like a Moor from constant exposure.

WEARY TROOPS WITH DRILL.

German Officers Harass Their Men, Says Reichstag Speaker.

In the midst of furious fighting on the western front the rank and file of the Kaiser's army are subjected to severe discipline and worn out with unnecessary drilling, according to charges made in the Reichstag on May 4 by Herr Schopflin, a Socialist Deputy, who is quoted in the London press.

He said the soldiers no sooner reached a rest camp from the front-line trenches than goose-stepping of the most severe kind began and was kept up for days. Troops who had been twenty or thirty months in the field, and fought in the Carpathians, Roumania, Galicia, Courland, Belgium and France, were drilled "in the worst fashion" the moment they returned to camp.

Things had come to such a pass, Schopflin continued, that officers instigated their servants to buy up food in the men's canteens in order to send it home as service parcels to their own people. This had a most demoralizing effect on the men, who found canteens denuded or asking prohibitive prices for the food remnants left over.

The troops were also embittered in regard to leave regulations. It was a notorious scandal that men who had been in the trenches as long as eighteen months or two years had not yet had a day's furlough. Favouritism was rampant.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted.

WHIZZ-BANG AND HORSE

Riding Badly-Scared Horse Over Shell Holes

The following is an extract from a letter from a Canadian battery boy. He says: "One night on my return from the guns (everything had been very quiet), Fritz dropped a whizz-bang into an ammunition dump of small proportion, just a hundred yards in front of me (incidentally, I might say, I cannot ride a horse with long stirrups, and I had them on on this occasion)—well, away goes the plug, full gallop, and in about a minute we hit a gun limber, turning it around. The horse soon got over the grogginess resulting, and away again, following some of the boys, who were leading pretty fast. I had my steel hat in one hand, the lines in the other, doing all I could to convey reason to his dizzy bean, but to no avail. The men in front turned up a railway track not completed, and we after them, the horse getting into ditches, shell holes, etc., with a frequency which was far from pleasing to me, all the time at the double, too. I was just thinking that if I had moving pictures of this trip, and a fair spiel I could make my fortune in six months.

"The most really enjoyable time of all, though, was the day I made this trip on a mule. Speaking of joy, this was my fete-day to the fair goddess. I am quite sure my fluency increased 90 per cent. this day; there is only one thing that will move a mule in a bad spot at more than a mile an hour, and that is the superior force of a 6-9 under him; this supplies the energy, though, not the mule."

SOLDIER'S DAILY RATION

The daily rations for men serving at the front are as follows: 1 lb. fresh meat and three-quarters lb. (nominal) preserved meat, 1¼ lb. bread or 1 lb. biscuit, 4 ozs. bacon, 3 ozs. cheese, ½ lb. fresh vegetables or 2 ozs. dried vegetables, ⅝ oz. tea, 3 ozs. jam, ½ oz. salt, 1-50 oz. mustard, 1-36 oz. pepper, 1 oz. pickles, three times a week, 1-12 tin condensed milk, 1-320 gal. lime juice (on the recommendation of the medical officer), 2 ozs. tobacco or cigarettes a week, 2 boxes matches, 1-64 gal. rum (on the recommendation of the medical officer). In addition to above, men in the trenches get certain extras, as, for instance, pea soup, Oxo, butter, chocolate, cocoa, and milk.

BUILDING THE ROAD

Wonderful Engineering Feats in Road Construction

Among the most noteworthy of the feats of engineering performed by the Italian army are the building of roads, which are as perfect as those built by their ancestors, the ancient Romans, up the sides of mountains that had never before been scaled except by daring chamois hunters and venturesome Alpine climbers, and the installation of heavy guns upon the snow-capped summits. These guns have been dragged up by thousands of motor vehicles, the wheels of which have sharp spikes clamped to their tires to grip the icy roads, and in the final stages of the climb by the strength of thousands of powerful men. There are peaks 10,000 feet high in the Alps upon which batteries of 12- and 14-inch guns have been mounted.

Hardships of the Alpini

The Italian army maintained its captured outposts during the severe winter of 1916, often at elevations of from 7,000 to 12,000 feet, only by building huts for its men and sending them hot food in thirty-gallon thermos bottles hauled up by steel ropes.

Soldier's "Widow" Fined

For obtaining free food and lodging by posing as the widow of a soldier killed in action, Mary Carter, a domestic servant, was at Kingston-on-Thames sentenced to 12 months' hard labour.

More Work for Women

One development of women's work in aeroplane factories is the making of aeroocompasses. At one factory near London these are made entirely by women.

The British Government promised instructions to deal with men who went to Ireland to escape military service.

Black velvet jackets are worn with wash skirts.

Russian blouses are extremely good for school girls.

Railroads Suffer in Central Europe

Central Europe's food problems have during recent months been adversely influenced, according to an Associated Press correspondent who has just returned from Vienna, by the fact that slowly the railroads are losing their efficiency and are no longer able to do their share in the distribution of these necessities. The war has made heavy demands upon the lines, and it has been impossible to give trackage and rolling stock the care they require.

For almost two years now the railroads have been neglected. This and the heavy traffic over many of the principal lines due to the war have made the railroad system a mere shadow of what it was formerly. Ballasting has been very indifferently done by old men, boys, women, and prisoners of war, with the result that the wear on the ties has been unusually severe, a condition which in its turn has caused a rapid deterioration of the rails and rolling stock.

Lack of skilled labour has prevented the State and private railroads resulted from this. Locomogood repair. This compelled a lessening in the speed of trains. A reduction of carrying capacity of the roads from keping rolling stock in tives especially are in poor condition. In their case neglect was added to more and heavier service. It is very doubtful whether in all of Central Europe it would be possible to-day to find an engine capable of performing a service within 60 per cent. of its former efficiency. This is especially noticeable in cold weather when the steam issuing from a hundred leaking joints illustrates what percentage of power is derived from the coal burned.

Hardly a week passes without some wreck. Most of these occur to freight trains, since the sweeping reductions in the speed of passenger trains were made last Fall. The fact that the lines are then tied up for hours at a time increases the difficulty of the traffic situation. Thousands of tons of potatoes and other vegetables were ruined in this manner last winter, trains having to be sidetracked for days in order to clear lines of wrecks and then permit delayed military transports to pass.

The outlook in railroad matters in Central Europe is extremely gloomy. Many of the lines must be entirely relaid with ties and rails before a normal traffic can be conducted over them. While the war lasts this work cannot be done, and with each day the depreciation increases in almost geometrical proportions. The yards of most railroad centres are clogged with rolling stock which is no longer serviceable. Should the war last another two years Central Europe will be obliged to completely re-equip most of its lines.

RECRUITS COMING FROM U. S.

British Subjects From Across Border to Join C.E.F.

TORONTO, June 8.—Recruits for the Canadian Expeditionary Force from New York, Boston, Rochester, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, and many other cities in the United States are expected in Canada within the next few days. Offices have been opened in the several large cities of the United States, where British subjects can undergo a preliminary medical examination. If found physically fit they will be sent on to the headquarters of the nearest military district in Canada. Recruits from New York, Buffalo and probably Boston will be sent to Toronto.

Upon their arrival at the border the recruits will be looked after by the Canadian Transfer Company. Under the auspices of the Toronto Mobolization Centre an office has been opened at the Union Station, where the men will be assembled upon their arrival in Toronto. If found fit the men will be at once attached to a C.E.F. unit and if not arrangements will be made to send them back to their homes across the border. From the time the men offer their services until the time they are either attested or returned to their homes the men will be maintained by the Canadian government, receiving the usual allowances paid to Canadian soldiers. It is estimated that there are about half a million eligible British subjects in the United States to-day and the authorities are not without hope that the ranks of the C.E.F. will be largely augmented by the number of young men who will cross the border now that registration has come into effect in the United States.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Down on the Suwannee River

By WILLIAM RAVEN ROSS

"Merlinda," drawled Cap'n Eph Biggs as he gave his back tilted chair another bitch toward the wall, "jes' ye stir yerself an' fetch yer dotin' daddy thet air pi : uv terbacker he left on the counter."

There was no reply.

"Well!" ejaculated the cap'n. "Thet lazy gal's snoozin' like sixty an' lettin' trade git over inter the next county. M-e-r-linda!"

Still Melinda did not respond in person or by voice. The cap'n looked around in a helpless way. Over to the east he could see a murky stretch of the Suwannee river bending through the trees. There was a dusty, lifeless road in front of the shore. The cap'n reclined and reflected. It was hot, and he hated to move, but he wanted his tobacco, and, being a widower with but one child, his comfort certainly was dependent largely upon her. If she were too lazy to wait on her poor old dad, he thought, it only served to prove that he had wasted money when he bought her a melodeon.

While pondering on her ingratitude and shiftlessness he nearly lapsed again into slumber, but an awful thought intervened. It made him sit upright, bringing his chair down upon its four legs with a bang.

"Sam Womper!" exclaimed the cap'n. "I'll bet thet dodgasted razerback critter hez hed the effrout'ry ter cum gallivantin' round hyar ag'in!"

He went through the store and into the house that formed the rear of it. Asleep in the little porch which framed the kitchen door was a small negro boy. Cap'n Eph kicked him.

"Rouse up, Mose," said the cap'n, "an' tell me whar's Merlinda."

"I dunno, boss," said Mose, edging to get out of range. "I hain't seen her fer more'n er hour."

"Look hyar, leetle nigger brat, am ye goin' ter tell whar my darter is?"

"Don't yo' stomp, cap'n! Fer de Lawd's sake, don't stomp!" shrieked Mose, drawing his knees up to his abdomen in the agony of expectation. "I'ze gwine ter tell all I knows."

"Jes' ye tell!" was the cap'n's grim admonition.

"I seed Mis' Merlinda cum outer de doah an' wave her han'. Den I looked over yander," and Mose pointed to the north, "an' I seed Sam Womper up dar at de edge uv de cl'arin'. Den she done went inter de house an' got her bunnit. I seed her go over ter whar Sam wuz loafin' round, an' bimeby I seed 'em git inter er dugout an' done go 'long."

"Maybe—maybe," soliloquized the cap'n, "I kin head 'em off at the bend. The river's mighty low, an' thar ain't much current. 'Sides, thet good fer nothin' clay eater am too lazy ter hit the water hard with er paddle."

The cap'n ran through the house and the store, seizing his shotgun on the way, and made over the country toward the woods which bordered the bend. When he poked his head through the underbrush upon the bank, he saw the dugout with Sam and Melinda aboard and less than fifty yards away. The stream was very narrow there, and Sam kept the boat near the shore to enjoy the coolness of the shade.

"I wisht I hed er gun. Did ye hear thet deer a-tearin' through the brush?" he heard Sam ask.

"I got the gun!" shouted the cap'n, drawing a head on the young man as he spoke. "Ye jes' p'int thet boat right in hyar or I'll fill yer hide with buckshot!"

Sam paused with uplifted paddle long enough to conclude quickly that it was wise to obey, and when it struck the water again it sent the dugout flying toward the bank.

"Whar be ye goin,' Mis' Biggs?" the cap'n inquired of Melinda in fine irony.

"I wuz goin' ter git merried, an' I'll do it yit," she replied so defiantly that the cap'n gasped.

"So ye will, so ye will," he responded—"I see ye gittin' too headstrong fer me—but not merried ter him, gal, I'll pick out the man fer ter be my son-in-lor, an' doan ye nevah fergit thet."

The cap'n climbed into the boat and pointed up stream. He sat down at that end of the craft, with his gun across his knees, and grimly suppressed his wrath. They had not gone far before the dugout glided by a big water oak whose branches extended far over the bank and were intwined by a huge grapevine. The fruit was ripe and hung in luscious clusters.

"Hol' on er minit," said the cap'n. "Lemme git er bunch."

Sam backed the boat under the tree, and the cap'n carefully placed his gun where he thought he could get it quickest and reached aloft among the tendrils. Sam let him get a good, firm hold and then drove the paddle into stream for one long, strong stroke. The dugout shot from under the cap'n's feet in an instant, leaving him dangling above stream thirty feet from shore.

"Bloody blazes! What on airth am ye about? Hey, cum back!" shouted the cap'n, but Sam began to beat the water with his paddle and to yelp like a dog. A big alligator shoved his snout out of the water immediately, almost, and, it seemed to the cap'n, blinked its ferocious eyes at him.

"Hey, Sam, quit yer foolin' an' back up hyar," said he. He was stout, and even the grip of desperation was not going to hold up 200 pounds until a hungry alligator went home.

"I ain't foolin'," said Sam solemnly. "I want ter merry Merlinda, an' hyar's whar I does it. Ye am jestice uv the peace an' kin tie us ez tite es eny parson in Jawgy. If ye won't do it, why, then, ye kin drap. After thet gater hez chawed ye up thar won't be nothin' ter spile the weddin'. I reckon I'll be keepin' yer store after thet."

"Merlinda," gasped the cap'n, "will ye squat thar an' see yer only parent et up by sich er varmint? Grab the gun, gal, an' give him both barrels in the eyes!"

But Melinda chewed the ribbon of her sunbonnet and gazed far away.

Cap'n Eph felt that his strength was failing.

"Back up, Sam, an' take me aboard. I'll merry ye," he said at last.

"Nary a back," answered Sam. "No man wot hez ever been in politics in this yere county would take yer word fer enything. Yer gwine ter merry us right whar ye be."

The cap'n took another look at the alligator, and it set him in a tremble.

"Merlinda," said the cap'n, striving for a fresh grip, "d'ye take thet ornery cuss ter be yer husban' fer bettah or fer wuss? Thar couldn't be no wuss."

"Yes, paw," said Melinda.

"An' ye, ye dod blasted, yaller faced chipmunk, d'ye take my darter ter be yer lawful wedded wife? An' I hope she'll be like her ma!"

"You bet," said Sam, playfully splashing a little water at the alligator.

"Then I pronounce ye man an' wife. Now will ye back up?"

Cap'n Eph sank exhausted into the boat, and Sam slowly paddled up the river to the landing. Just before he turned the dugout in toward the shore he remarked:

"Say, dad, yer eyesight mus' be failin'. Didn't ye observe thet thet sick ole gator didn't hev no teeth?"

Reckless Disregard.

"The law of supply and demand," said the economist, "is as inexorable as the law of gravitation."

"You can't always enforce either of them. The law of gravitation doesn't prevent people from getting up in the air three days."—Washington Star.

CANADA NEEDS HER FARMERS

The Empire is looking to Canada for food, and the farmer is the chief factor in its production. In these days of scarce help every farmer must work his hardest, and every farmer knows from painful experience that it is his back that first feels the strain. Almost every movement, whether with the plow, the fork, the hoe or in the harvest field, tests the muscles of the back and kidneys. A pain in the small of the back is the warning that inflammation, although slight at first, but persistent, has started in the kidneys or surrounding tissue.

Farmers, if you only knew how quickly Gin Pills soothe and heal the overworked and strained kidneys and restore perfect harmony between the kidneys and the bladder, making both work as nature intended them to do and in the process also relieve you of rheumatism, painful urination or other troubles incident to impaired kidneys, you would not delay a moment.

Gin Pills are also a gentle laxative and are wonderful, not only in their effect on the kidneys and bladder, but they keep the bowels in perfect condition.

We want every lame-backed farmer to try Gin Pills. Go to your dealer and buy a box. If you do not get relief, we will refund your money, or a free trial sample will be sent on request to National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 94

Drinking Tea Upset Nerves

Mr. Burroughes Compares Canadian Customs With Those in Old Land and Tells How Nerves Were Set Right.

Orillia, Ont., May 29.—"How to be well and strong?" is the question many are asking at this time of year and in this letter you will find the answer.

It tells something of the blood-forming, nerve-invigorating influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great restorative which is causing so much talk here just now.

Nature's way of curing disease is by building up the vitality of the body, and this is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does. The blood is made rich and red, and it nourishes the exhausted nerves back to health and vigor.

The experience of Mr. Burroughs as described in this letter is similar to that of hundreds of others in this community who have recently put this well-known food cure to the test.

Mr. George Burroughs, 23 Peter street, Orillia, Ont., writes: "A few years ago, after coming out to this country from England, the change of customs seemed to have some effect on me. In the old country the habit of drinking strong tea was prevalent, and after arriving here I suffered very much from nervousness. If I put my arm down on the table it would shake very noticeably, and while performing my work I would easily tire, and want to sit down and rest. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food so I secured some and took a treatment. It built me up and made me strong and healthy. I have not had a trace of the nervousness since. I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment also, and find that it heals the skin very quickly. In fact I find all of Dr. Chase's medicines good."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

A POSER FOR THE JUDGE.

The Way the Accused Put the Case Up to the Court.

Writing of Polish temperament and talent, Sidney Whitman in "Things I Remember" has an amusing story of a bright Polish Jew who traded in chemicals. He was brought before the law courts for selling poison without fulfilling the legal enactments bearing on such transactions.

The magistrate proceeded to read out the charge when the Jew suddenly interrupted him with the question: "Excuse me, Mr. President. Do you understand anything about chemicals?"

"Mr. S., the expert, is here in that capacity," replied the judge.

"And you, Mr. S.," queried the Jew, "do you understand anything about law?"

"You have just heard from his worship that I am an expert in chemicals. If you want to know anything about law please address yourself to the judge."

"I ask you, Mr. President, just to consider the case for one moment. You are the judge of the court and admit that you do not understand anything about chemicals, and the expert tells us that he does not know anything about law. And I, a poor Jew, am expected to be familiar both with the law and with chemicals. Now, Mr. President, I ask you how you can possibly convict me?"

AN OVERWORKED WORD.

This Writer Suggests That "Very" Be Given a Long Rest.

There is a word that once possessed a vigor and a power that is altogether lost. "Verily, verily"—"in truth, in truth." Now it is "very," and, though it still means "in truth," it has become so weakened by usage that it conveys no force whatever.

You meet men on the street and say, "It is a very fine day." What do you mean? Probaby you mean, "How do you do?" What you have said is simply a salutation. But if you should say to me, "It is a fine day," you probably mean it is a fine day. That little word "very" has been so weakened, so frayed at the edges, that it harms rather than helps its companions.

So, gentle reader, I would say to you if I had arbitrary power over your speech, "This week I will allow you only two 'veries,'" and, though for a time such restraint may make you self conscious, yet it will force you to grope about for musty treasures in the storehouse of your memory and furbish up old adjectives and adverbs, even drive you now and again to a careful appraisal of your best slang, and when this temporary self consciousness shall pass not only your vigor of speech, but your exactitude and clarity of thought will be the better for it. That is a gain that will be worth all the sacrifice.—Burges Johnson in Century.

Famous Talkers.

The art of conversation was not always possessed by literary men. Coleridge and Macaulay were said to absorb so much time on an interesting subject that they were generally regarded as bores, whereas Robert Browning, with all his cumbersome poetry, was fascinating in his talk.

FINDING THE ALTITUDE.

How Airmen Measure the Heights to Which They Ascend.

Altimeters or barographs are used by aviators to measure the heights to which they ascend. Both of these instruments are constructed on exactly the same principle as the aneroid barometer. They depend upon air pressure. At sea level, where the air is much compressed by its own weight, the pressure is about fifteen pounds to the square inch, but at greater heights it becomes less. The barometer is governed by the pressure and so indicates the height above sea level.

There are many forms of barometers. The simplest is a bent tube of glass, shaped like a very long letter J and partly filled with mercury. The upper part is closed, and the space above the column of mercury is a vacuum. The lower or hook end of the tube is open and subject to the pressure of the atmosphere. As the pressure becomes less on rising above the surface, the mercury in the long part of the tube falls. The extent of the fall indicates the height.

Airplanes use one of these instruments mentioned, which are practically self registering barometers, and when the airplane comes down the instrument shows how high it has been carried.—Philadelphia Press.

Looking It Up.

He was that type of genteel beggar that "puts up a front," as the fellows say. His face had more tears in it than a cemetery, and he was just getting ready to tell his down and outer's tale when the man at the desk reached into a drawer and brought forth a dictionary, placing it in front of the appalling one.

"What do you want—sympathy?" the man at the desk asked.

"Yes, sympathy," was the half sobbed reply.

"Look in S for it. I saw it there the other day."

The sympathy chaser grunted and headed for the door. He wasn't looking for work, just sympathy—in the form of a piece of loose change.—Indianapolis News.

Goose Fat.

Goose fat makes excellent pastry that is absolutely free from any flavor of the bird or of the onion stuffing. The pastry turns out light and "short" when this sort of fat is used. A Belgian recipe is as follows: Throw all the fat left after drawing the goose into cold water with a little salt as soon as the goose is drawn. When the bird is half done ladle off some of the dripping before it browns or becomes strong and as the roasting proceeds leave only enough dripping in the pan to baste with. Next day put the dripping, with the fresh fat, in a stewpan, with slices of apple, and onion if approved. Add salt and pepper. When done clear it and strain it into a jar. Cover it and keep it in a cool place.

Spoiled His Speech.

"When I rose to speak it was so still in the hall you could have heard a pin drop."

"Yes?"

"Well, I stood there for a moment looking out over the audience and framing my first sentence, and I am sure that I should have been able to get along all right, but just before I had got ready to utter my first word some fool in the back end of the hall yelled, 'Louder!'"

Nature and Art in Greek Statues.

Archæologists have observed that in Greek statues the male eye is strongly arched, while the female eye has rather a flattened surface, and, referring to accounts by the older anatomists who have affirmed such a difference to exist, they have seen in this a fresh proof of the exact observation of nature by the ancient Greeks. The rule is not without exceptions, for the cornea in the Zeus of Otricoli has quite a flat form. Herr Greef recently set himself to inquire whether such a sexual difference actually exists, and from individual measurement of the radius of the cornea in the horizontal meridian he gets an average of 7.83 millimeters for men and 7.82 millimeters for women (Donders gives 7.858 and 7.799), so the difference is so small as to be imperceptible to the naked eye. Measurement of other dimensions gave but minute differences also. The author concludes that the Greeks from artistic motives did not in this case follow nature.—London Nature.

Firth of Forth Bridge.

The bridge across the Firth of Forth in Scotland is a cantilever bridge erected 1883-90. The two main spans are each 1,710 feet long. The total length of the bridge is 8,295 feet; the towers are 343 feet high; the bridge contains 51,000 tons of steel and cost about $18,000,000.

The Fever of Unrest.

The expressman ran his pencil down the list of names on the last page of his book, then he looked at the calendar. "It will soon be time for that Miss Hughes to move again. She has been at No. 138 for six months."

"Is Miss Hughes in the habit of moving every six months?" asked the visitor.

"Well," said he, "I wouldn't put it at six months to the day, but her stay in any one place is never prolonged much beyond that period. She is a pretty good customer. I first moved her from a house in Thirty-fourth street seven years ago, and since then I have moved her regularly twice a year. And she is not the only person who gives me a steady job by any means. I have a number of people on my list who move at regular intervals. Some of them make a change every month or two, others only once a year, but no matter how long or how short their residence in a certain house, the fever of unrest is bound to seize them at stated times and along comes my order to move them again."—New York Times.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results From An Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydro-chloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heart-burn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flowing of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

Winks and Eye Baths.

Every few seconds we wink both our eyelids at once, although not purposely. If we stop winking our eyes become uncomfortable and gradually cease to work as they should. When the eye is open the front of it is exposed to dirt and dust and is apt to become so dry that a painful stinging sensation results or would do so if constant moisture were not provided to cleanse and soothe the tissues.

As a matter of fact, each time we wink we wash the eye, says the Popular Science Monthly. Up above each eye is a tiny bag called the tear gland, and all the time we are awake it makes tears. When the front of the eye feels itself becoming a little too dry or dusty a communication is sent for a supply of moisture. The eyelid then comes down with a tear inside it to wash clean the front of the eye. This is the most gentle and perfect washing in the world.

Britain's War Bread.

Extensive experiments have preceded the settlement of the regulation for the future dilution of flour in England.

The new loaf must either contain at least five per cent. of the wheat "offals," or else there must be added to it at least five per cent., and it may be ten per cent. of another substance, milled from rice, barley, maize, or oats.

When the order comes into force on March 12 the browner loaves will be all wheat, while the whiter ones will contain from five to ten per cent of other cereals.

After counsel with expert advisers, the Food Controller, to decide the practicability of the scheme, had exhaustive tests carried out by a well-known firm of millers; and he has personally examined and tasted all bread made from the different varieties of the new flour. It was put to the proof still further. One of the largest army commands in the country was provided for a series of days with the new bread, and a leading London catering house also supplied it to numerous customers. The general verdict was that the bread was excellent, and that its dietetic value was higher than that of pre-war days.

In the official view the order may be said to have accomplished the desired objectives, namely, a wider area of selection for breadstuffs, with a consequent diminution in the consumption of wheat; and a corresponding release of shipping tonnage. Also a more nutritious loaf is produced.

Antique Frauds.

An amusing sidelight on the manner in which fraudulent venders of the people's necessities were punished in the good old days is to be found in Maitland's "History of London." During the reign of King Edward I. drastic laws were framed against "Engrossers, Forestallers, and all sorts of Frauds and Impositions in the sale of provisions, especially against Bakers, who had got into a way of making bread under the standard weight, and against millers who dealed in bad measure."

For a first offence the baker had his light bread confiscated, a second offence was punished by imprisonment, while for a third he was pilloried. For the "thievish miller" a sterner punishment was meted out. He was put on a tumbril, i.e., carried in a dung cart through certain streets exposed to the derision of the people.

The Engrossers were the gentlemen, who attempted to make a corner in commodities, and against these profiteers the king advised his subjects of London "to devise proper laws for regulating the prices of poultry and fish, which sort of provisions had been engrossed by a few rapacious Hucksters." Accordingly it was ordained by the magistrate of the city "that no huckster of fowl or poulterer, go out of the city, to make any buying from them; but buy in the city, after the buyers of the Lord the King, of the Barons, and the citizens have bought and had that which shall be needful for them, namely, after three o'clock and not before." And then came a list of the standard prices at which they must buy.—London Chronicle.

Delicately Eliminated.

"No, we didn't like to do that, but we all resigned except Mrs. Bounce, and then we all got together and formed a new club."—New York Times.

SOOTHING AND HEALING!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

CROUPY BABIES.

TO AN INEXPERIENCED MOTHER nothing is more alarming than to be awakened in the middle of the night by the struggles for breath and the choking cough of a croupy child. In the first place there is the fear that the disease may be diphtheria. In the second, there is the fear that the child may choke to death.

If the attack is the first the child has had the mother has a right to suspect diphtheria. She may look in the child's throat and find no membrane, but then she is not certain of herself. The only way to know with certainty is to send for a physician and have the throat examined and a culture made.

But mothers soon lose the alarm occasioned by croup, because the child who has had croup once will have it again. Some children never have croup; others, commencing when they are six months old and continuing until they are ten years old, have croup with every bad cold.

An attack of croup starts in as does an ordinary cold. Toward evening the cough changes from the ordinary to a typical croupy cough. The croupiness continues through the evening until bedtime. The child goes to sleep, but wakes up an hour or two later fighting for breath. The mother gives a dose of sirup of ipecac, rubs the chest with goose grease, and gets through the night. During the day the cough is better, but as night approaches the croupiness of the cough increases, and again sleep is disturbed by the onset of an attack of choking.

There must be some essential difference between children, which difference makes the same infection in some cause ordinary colds and in others croup. It is children with spasmophilic diathesis who have croup. Some people call it nervousness, but that is a very comprehensive and at the same time a very loosely used term.

Is there any way to tell whether a child is likely to develop into a croupy child? In the first place, there is the family history. Croup runs in families. In the second place, there is a history of convulsions or other nervous disorders in babyhood.

What can be done to prevent croup? A course of a month or two of calcium chloride each autumn is advisable. Three to fifteen grains of calcium chloride in water three times a day, according to the age of the child, should be given.

Spasmophilic children should be out of doors as much as possible. They should live in well-ventilated rooms. They do best when they are fed plenty of starches, breads, cereals, potatoes, and sweets, and a limited amount of lean meat, eggs, milk, and proteids generally. Their bowels must be kept regular.

NIGHT TERRORS.

A child, after sleeping somewhat fitfully for some hours, awakens screaming from fright. The mother gathers him in her arms and draws from him a story of some ogre or wild animal which would have reached him in a moment had he not screamed and tried to escape.

The difference between night terror and sleep walking or somnambulism is that in the latter the dream is fully acted out by most of the muscles of the body; in night terror it is only acted out by the vocal organs, and by them only in part. When a somnambulist dreams that a lion is after him he gets up and tries to run. The subject of night terror dreams about yelling and running. He puts the yell part of the dream into execution, but the running muscles are not awakened out of their sleep.

If the fault does not lie with some violent bedtime impression it may be found in some vivid experience of the earlier hours of the day. Kerley tells of a boy who had night terrors because he wore himself out during the day trying to keep up with a strenuous older brother. A girl had night terrors because she wore herself out making glass eyes. The staring eyes got on her nerves and her dreams about them would bring her up out of sleep in a frenzy of fear.

Now, practically, what is to be done with a child subject to night terrors? Give him worm medicine and let it go at that? Not in this generation. Why the trouble? Intense fear from violent dreams. Can fear be controlled, and how? By mental training. The child must not be told stories about goblins and ghosts. He must be taught that darkness has no terrors.

Next the study must be made of the habits of the child. Kerley thinks that indigestion due to bad eating habits is a frequent cause. He describes three cases in children with heavily-coated tongues, foul breaths, and intestinal indigestion. Such children are cured by changing the diet, changing the eating habits, and keeping the bowels open.

Night terrors calls for change in habits, not for medicine.

SUBMARINE SUCCESS.

(The New Republic.)

No more damaging propaganda against our cause is being promulgated than the broadcast prediction of the speedy collapse of the German Empire. The plain and unpalatable truth is that the Germans are succeeding in their submarine expectations by more than fifty per cent. We ought never for a moment to forget it. To allow our enthusiasm over the tactical successes on the western front—which will continue spasmodically all summer—of our eagerness for an internal revolution against Prussian autocracy to slow up either our building of ships or production of foodstuffs would be the real failure of America in this war. There is a chance of our failing. But there is much less chance if we believe that a democratic revolution in Germany will take place only after it has in fact taken place and if, meanwhile, we let no one in this country lack information about the comparative effectiveness of the submarine campaign. Only our apathy about ships and food can beat the Allies.

Briton Tells of Thrills in Hold of Monster Tank

Bullets Rattle on Outside, Motor and Guns on the Inside

LONDON. — "As the tanks travel over the front trench the troops rub their eyes in wonder at their strange coats of many colors. The deck of the tank rolls and pitches like a torpedo boat in a storm, but we are all old hands and we come safely through without seasickness.

"Hun bullets are rebounding from our tough sides like hail from a glass roof. We just crawl over the embankment, guns and all. It is not necessary to fire a single shot. Two or three Huns are brave enough to creep on the back of the tank from behind. They are not doomed to get the iron cross for we open a small trap door and shoot them with a revolver. It is almost like playing hide and seek as we travel backward and forward along the trench."

Life in a tank or amoured tractor in action is thus described in a letter to his sister by William F. E. Divall of Southborough, who was wounded in one of these monsters. He says:

"Inside the tanks are the keen-eyed fighting men known as the crew, strangely garbed as become their strange craft while around them is a complicated mass of machinery.

"The deck of the tank rolls and pitches like a torpedo boat in a storm. The crew holds on to anything within reach to steady themselves while we rush down a large shell hole.

"We succeed in getting out two machine gun emplacements, the guns of which have been worrying our infantry for some time. And now the action begins in earnest. Hun bullets are rebounding from our tough sides like hail from a glass roof, while inside the tanks the whole crew is at various guns, which break forth in a devastating fire under which nothing can live.

"By this time the fumes from the hundreds of rounds which we had fired, with the heat from the engines and the waste petrol and oil, have made the air quite oppressive and uncomfortable to breathe in.

"However, those who go down in the land in tanks are accustomed to many strange sensations, which would make an ordinary mortal shudder. We make a fairly difficult target as our way lies between numerous tree trunks and battered stumps, also much barbed wire.

"Our strange craft is battling bravely with the waves of earth now encountered, and the conditions inside might better be imagined than described. But thanks to our protective headgear, we come through it all still smiling, to find ourselves on the edge of the Hun trench.

"The Huns show fight here and we have a warm ten minutes before they give signs of retreating. We leave them for a minute or two in order to ram a machine gun emplacement which is still threatening our rapidly advancing infantry. We just crawl over the embankment, guns and all. It is not necessary to fire a shot.

"The last trench proves to be the worst, for just as we are crossing a large hole our bus stops. I believe the sparking plugs have ceased to spark, and it is a very awkward place as the tree stumps now prevent free traverse of our guns.

"And now the old bus is going strong again. Only just in time, for a large lyddite bomb bursts against the armored jacket of my gun. The flare comes in through the porthole, blinding me for a minute or so, while small splinters strike my face. But my gun is still untouched thanks to the armour plate, and somehow appears to work much better.

"The Germans are now scattered in small parties. It is almost like playing at 'hide and seek' as we now travel backward and forward along that trench.

"After a few short runs we find no more Huns to hunt, so as our objective, the wood, has been gained, we leave the scene to the infantry, and find shelter from possible stray shots in a large hole which has been made by many shells.

"After a little exercise we start to overhaul the tank and guns, in readiness for the next joy ride. Then we snatch a few hours of sleep."

WILL OF ALSATIANS CONCEALED BY HUNS

Strange Words of the German Overlord of the Stolen Domain.

AMSTERDAM, June 8.—The Landtag of Alsace-Lorraine was opened at Strassburg on Wednesday by the Imperial Stadtholder, Dr. von Dallwitz. In his opening speech Dr. von Dallwitz said:

'The unbending will to end the war victoriously will further protect our German Alsace-Lorraine."

At the first session of the second Chamber, Dr. George Ricklin, a Centrist, was re-elected President by 29 out of the 46 votes. Dr. Ricklin said: "We Alsatians and Lorrainers will never forget that our Emperor, by his peace offer, showed his readiness to end the miseries of the war. We bless every action tending to shorten the war by a single day and reject everything which, allegedly undertaken to better our lot, in fact only serves to prolong the war and our sufferings.

'An overwhelming majority of Alsatians and Lorrainers did not want the war and only wanted to work out to completion their position as members of a State in union with the German Empire, and to further proceed with peaceful labour. In this connection the war has made no change as far as we are concerned. We make this confession of faith in the face of the whole world. May it be heard everywhere and may peace be restored soon."

Charm of Prahova.

No traveler who has visited Roumania returns without praising the wonders of Prahova. Here, after one has passed the heights of Predeal, is a charming valley in the midst of forests, of great rocks and spouting waters. The landscape evokes recollections of Switerland, with architecture that recalls the orient. Azuga, Bustena, are seated on the bank of a tumultuous river. Farther away is Sinaia. The court and the Roumanian aristocracy have built in this delightful valley their summer homes. There are no large hotels. All that made life at Bukharest is taken by summer sojourners to the shadows offered by Prahova and its sweet freshness. Near Sinaia the valley widens and Campina appears, the chief city of the coal lands and of the salt mines. Animals that are at liberty assemble about a block of salt to lick it, for salt, like petroleum, is everywhere.

Population by Sex.

About half the probable population of the world has been enumerated with relation to sex. About 50.3 per cent male, 49.7 per cent female, is the result of this count. Only in Europe, among continents, do the females outnumber the males, the proportion being: Female, 50.6 per cent; male, 49.4 per cent. In most parts of the world of which we have information the reverse is true. The percentage of males in British India is 50.9; in the tributary states, 51.7; in Japan, 50.5. In the United States by the last census there were 106 males to 100 females, the divisions of native, foreign, etc., being as follows: Native white of native parentage, 104 males, 100 females; native white of foreign parentage, 99.5 males, 100 females; foreign white, 129.2 males, 100 females; negro, 98.9 males, 100 females; all other, 185 males, 100 females.—New York Times.

Russians Light Drinkers.

The Russian realized perfectly well the evil effect of the use of vodka upon his fellow countrymen. We must not share the belief, disseminated by the books of dilettante travelers, that every one in Russia was a hard drinker. Far from it. Certain very considerable sections of the population did not drink at all. Such were the Mohammedans, to whom the prophet of Allah had forbidden the juice of the grape; such were the sectarians among the orthodox, who refrained on principle. Many others as well did not indulge, either from distaste or from conscientious scruples. In fact, statistical evidence shows that the people of the Russian empire consumed decidedly less alcohol per capita than the peoples of many other European countries.—Robert P. Blake in Atlantic.

Automobile Tops.

The practice of running an automobile with the top up when it is not needed is costly, according to tests which I made, says a contributor to Popular Mechanics. When the back of the top cannot be rolled up the resistance is especially great. Six miles more were obtained from a gallon of gasoline with the top rolled and covered as compared with having the top up with the back closed. When going against the wind this extra pull is especially heavy, and difficulty in making a hard climb may often be relieved by lowering the top. Careful regulation of the top, using it only when essential, will be found to be a worth while factor in reducing the gasoline bill.

Some of Burns' Phrases.

Here are a few specimens of Burns' happy phrases: "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley;" "The fear of hell's the hangman's whip, to haud the wretch in order;" "But pleasures are like poppies spread—you seize the flower, its bloom is shed;" "Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us to see ourselves as ithers see us;" "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn;" "Nursing her wrath to keep it warm;" "The mirth and fun grew fast and furious;" "What's done we partly may compute but know not what's resisted;" "Princes and lords are but the breath of kings;" "The rank is but the guinea stamp; a man's a man for a' that."

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Hate Preached by Hun Teachers

FOR the last twelve months or so professional utterances have been comparatively few in the Fatherland. Having in pre-war years been successful in creating the ideal of "Welt-Politik," which was so largely responsible for the war, and having seen the war fairly started on the lines of their most cherished principles, the "Herren Professoren" have retired into relative quiescence. Of late, however, they have given signs of recovery. In a late number of the Deutsche Juristenzeitung, or Law Journal, which has been translated in The New York Herald, Privy Councillor Laband, who is one of Germany's most eminent professors of international jurisprudence, has an article entitled "Germany and England After the War," from which one may see that the old spirit is still very active. Setting forth that international law, as taught by Kant, rests fundamentally upon the Christian precept of doing unto others as you would they should do unto you, Professor Laband declares that "England, resting upon her geographical position and her preponderating seapower, has not only not recognized but has shamelessly flouted this law. England's history for the last centuries," he says, "has been one of subjugation of defenceless peoples and of disregard of the rights of other States."

Passing over what he calls "the contempt for all the laws of humanity, as displayed in her conduct of the war—for in her conception of the purposes and the means of waging war England has always stood outside the recognised law of nations"—the author presents his indictment against England. It includes England's arbitrary abrogation of the Treaty of Paris of 1856 and of the Declaration of London, "legislation of piracy," despotic definition of "contraband," disrespect for the limitations of "effective blockade" and abuse of the "neutral flag," and, lastly, lawless interference with neutral mails. "Neutral ships," he says, "going from one neutral port to another with a neutral cargo are held up and plundered of their lading if this can be of service to the English; their mails are searched—partly to steal their contents, partly to prevent the spread of the truth abroad and partly to pry into their business matter to assist the compilation of the 'black lists.' To effect the starving out of Germany England does not hesitate to destroy the trade of the neutral States and to subject them more and more to British tyranny."

Singly these States, the professor laments, can offer no resistance, and an anti-British coalition is not to be hoped for. What, then, is to be Germany's course under these circumstances? "First she must banish all thought of a restoration of friendly relations with England after the war—which would be a sentiment unworthy of Germany. Never must Germans forget that England it was which banded the other powers together in a league sworn to the destruction of the German Empire and the German people. Germany's attitude toward England must henceforth be that of profound mistrust. Germany can pursue its appointed course in the world's history without England's friendship, and especially so if she can come to an understanding with England's political antipodes—Russia."

This is not the mere vaporing of a morbid professional mind. Dr. Laband's name carries weight throughout Germany and this article will be widely reproduced and read. In the charges he makes against England he formulates only that which millions of Germans have been brought to believe. Another apostle of the gospel of unforgiveness is Pastor Traub, a widely known clergyman and politician. This militant minister has recently been on a lecturing crusade. At Hamburg, where his theme was "The Aims of Education After the War," he powerfully exhorted German teachers to inculcate in the school children a "sense of righteous wrath against the ruthless enemies of the Fatherland." At Wilhelmshaven his text was "A Decisive and an Indecisive War"; only by prosecuting the war to a decisive and, of course, victorious conclusion, he urged, could Germany save herself from "intolerable economic burdens" in the future and from the early prospect of another war. It was England's interest, he said, to prolong the war, so that not only her present enemies but also her present allies might be exhausted; therefore, let not Germany dream of attempting to placate England by the surrender of Belgium, as had been suggested in some quarters.

At Munich the pastor addressed the newly-formed "People's Committee for the Racial Overthrow of England"—a body which, to judge by its title, would seem to out-Herod the best that Prussianism has yet produced in national antagonism. In this sympathetic environment Herr Traub delivered himself upon "England's Policy, Past and Present." England's colonial history, he declared, was an unbroken record of robbery and of inciting one race against another. The difference between British imperialism and Prussian imperialism was that "while the Germans naturally regarded themselves as the salt of the earth they did not strive to attain their ideals by ever adding to their land possessions, but by the spiritual penetration of their kultur and by respect for the characteristic individualism of other peoples." British imperialism was that of profit, he said; the German pattern was that of duty.

Ask at any drug store for a quarter ounce of freezone which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. Try a little and

The British Are Extending Gains

BRITISH ARE WELL TO EAST OF NEWLY GAINED POSITIONS

Germans Have Not Yet Re-organized After Staggering Blow Delivered Last Thursday --- Seven Field Guns Were Captured by British Patrols Yesterday, the Huns Fleeing Panic-Stricken, the British Meeting with Heavy Artillery Fire but Very Little Infantry Opposition.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to the Examiner:

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 12.—In the face of very heavy artillerying, but with comparatively little infantry opposition, the British to-day were crossing by patrols well to the east of their positions in a recently won battle of Messines Ridge. Since that battle the Germans have attempted only one heavy counter attack. Evidences at hand, such as the observation of aeroplanes and testimony of newly taken prisoners, would seem to indicate that the Germans have not yet reorganized after the staggering blow General Plumer's Second British army delivered against them last Thursday. The seven field guns reported by Field Marshal Haig as taken yesterday, were captured by patrols. The German gunners took fright at the first signs of the British approach and fled precipitately, evidently fearing another British massed attack. British positions were under vigorous German shell fire to-day from long range guns. Field Marshal Haig to-day issued a special order of the day, congratulating General Plumer and the army under him for its success, which he said was "an earnest and an eventual victory for the allied cause."

"The full effect of the victory cannot yet be estimated," the British Commander-in-Chief declared, "but that it will be great is certain. The British losses from a battle of such magnitude were gratifyingly light. Nothing can save the enemy from complete defeat. Brave and tenacious as the German troops are, it is only a question of how much longer they can endure a repetition of such blows." Announcement was made to-day that the total number of prisoners taken in the record raid of last week by the Canadians was 169, including four officers.

PARIS (French Official), June 12.—Active artillery fire from German guns at several points, and repulse of enemy raids was all the fighting activity detailed in to-day's official statement. The artillery fire was "rather violent" the War Office said, against Calfornie Plateau, southeast of Corbeny, around Mont Blanc, and Cornillet. "We repulsed reconnaissances at several points, imprisoning several," the statement said.

PARIS, June 12.—France has taken over the control of the food administration throughout Greece, according to a formal announcement to-day. General Jonnart ordered the landing of French troops at the Greek capital to keep order. The Allies are buying Thessalonian crops to distribute to all provinces of Greece. Troops were landed yesterday without incident.

TORONTO, June 12.—To prevent any possibility of serious anti-conscription riots in any part of Ontario, and especially in foreign-speaking districts, provincial police are warning dealers in fire arms that they will be held in "strict accountability" for weapons sold and to whom they are sold. The provincial laws regarding the records and reports to the Superintendent of the Provincial Police must be observed to the letter. It is stated here that Ottawa itself is one place where this is espcieally necessary.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Government's new requirements for all travellers from the United States, do not apply to Canada, Secretary of Commerce Redfield announced to-day.

The question was raised by the Canadian Steamship Company, which said many persons had believed they could not travel to Canada, under the broad language of Redfield's passport orders, without specific Government permission.

PETROGRAD, June 12.—Russian artillery set fire to the Teutonic Staff Headquarters in the Village of Meerishki, an official report declared to-day.

"The military staff quartered here fled from a big fire, pursued by our artillery," the War Office declared.

AMSTERDAM, June 12.—"We still cling to one thought with which we are all imbued—and that is to break the enemy's will to war," declared the Kaiser, in an address to German troops under his son, Prince Eitel Friedrich.

(John E. Hearle.)

ROME, June 12.—Italy's new Trentino offensive is not intended to supplant, but rather to harmonize with the Isonzo and Carso activities of her armies. Emphasis was laid on the War Office aims to permit no lessening of the drive toward Trieste by the officials to-day, in explaining the new movement.

Reports from Trentino to-day indicated that General Cadorna's strategy had again caught the Austrians napping, especially between Adica and Brinta. Almost unbelievable stories reached here of the feats of Italian troops in advancing over the dizzy heights, and slowly but surely creeping forward toward Levico and Caldonazzo en route to Trent.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The American steamer "Petrolite," has been sunk by a German submarine.

A boat in charge of the third mate with the chief engineer and eight men has reached shore. Two boats are missing.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, June 12.—On every western front to-day Allied pressure was squeezing the Teutonic grip with increasing strength. Field Marshal Haig, profiting by his newly won and dominating positions on the Wytschaete-Messines Ridge, forced the relinquishment by the enemy of an additional patch of Belgian territory and according to front despatches to-day, was gaining elsewhere on this same general front. To the south, the French pressure on the base of the now badly battered Hindenburg line was steadily increasing in a conflict marked by intense artillerying. At this particularly timely moment, Italy has apparently started on another offensive. This time the blow is in the Trentino—adding another theatre of active fighting to the great war's development. What makes the new Italian drive of particular interest here is the fact that the fighting is over Teutonic ground. It is one of the few places in the world war in Europe at least, where the Teutons are finding the battle brought home to them on their own home land. There is still hope here that Russia may be revived into active participation in the fighting. Just now military experts realize Germany has thinned her lines on the Russian fronts in order to man her reserves against the Allied attacks elsewhere. Despatches received here indicated a full realization in Germany of this situation. Particular emphasis was laid on the reports of anxiety felt in Germany over the effect of President Wilson's message to Russia, backed up by England and France.

OPPOSITION TO SECTIONS OF THE CONSCRIPTION BILL

Some Complain That the Bill Vests Too Much Power in the Cabinet and Makes No Distinction Between Slacker Families and Those Who Have Made Sacrifices

NO REGISTRATION

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 12.—The opposition to the conscription bill is centring around four main facts:

1.—That is provides no registration.

2.—That it does not distinguish between families which have sent members to the front and those who have not.

3.—That it vests too much power in the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, which means the Cabinet.

4.—That it makes no distinction between married men of given age without children, and married men of the same age with children.

In securing uniformity of administration, the Cabinet will have to go further than the bill does in defining what is meant by the words "expedient in national interest," which are evidently going to exempt so many from service. The Cabinet apparently reserves the right to say that this shall refer to agriculture, mining, fisheries, or whatever else it sees fit. If it does not, then there will be no uniformity for the bill specifically provides that, "insofar as provision is not otherwise made, the procedure of tribunal shall be such as is determined by the tribunal.

Although any man married after June 11, 1917, shall be deemed unmarried for purposes of section, it is doubtful if this would stand in the way of a separation allowance.

NAME OF BABB'S LANE CHANGED TO BABB'S STREET

Action Was Taken by the City Council at a Meeting Held Last Evening — Increase in Salaries Confirmed

At last night's meeting of the City Council a by-law was passed confirming the recent increase in salaries recommended for the members of the Fire Department by the Fire, Water and Light committee.

"Babbs' Street."

Mr. Merritt, who resides on a short street in the west end of the city known as Babb's Lane, said he represented the opinion of the people in that section of the community when he requested the Council to have the thoroughfare called a street instead of a lane. Mr. Merritt suggested that the name Leslie street be substituted. To this Ald McIntyre objected, and it was finally decided to call it Babb's street instead of Babb's lane. City Solicitor Gordon was asked to include this in the by-law which he is preparing respecting the changing of the names of several streets throughout the city.

Must Not Substitute.

The Council will write to the La France Fire Engine Company and request that no parts be substituted other than what the specifications call for. In the tender for a motor driven combination chemical and hose waggon the Company reserved the right to substitute such parts as may be necessary owing to present conditions. Ald. Worth said that such a clause was usually found in all contracts and they could not be very well avoided.

Optimistic Reports of The Ontario Crops

TORONTO, June 12. — An optimistic crop report was issued from the Bureau of Industries Department of the Legislature today. The spring sown crops of all kinds are looking well, while winter crops, including fall wheat and clover have picked up wonderfully as a consequence of the warm rains of the past week. Live stock is now almost entirely sustained on feed grass, but dairymen complain the decrease in the price of cheese with the increased cost of millfeed has robbed them of much profit. Orchards throughout the province are promising. Bloom totally escaped frost, a rare occurrence in recent years. Early tomatoes for canning factories are giving splendid promise. Labour conditions have eased but demand will be keen when haying begins.

CASUALTIES FOR YEAR AMONG THE CANADIANS A TOTAL OF 65,549

Of These 12,064 Were Killed in Action--- Casualties in February, March and April of Present Year Were 17,645 --- A Summary of Conscription Bill --- To-day's General Military News

OTTAWA, June 11.—Figures of casualties and enlistments during the past twelve months, given to the House of Commons this afternoon by the Minister of Militia, in reply to a series of questions by Mr. William Smith, throw some light on the Prime Minister's declaration that immediate conscription must replace the voluntary system in order to keep the divisions at the front up to full strength.

The total number of casualties in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces from June, 1916, to date is given as 65,549, including 2,957 officers and 62,593 other ranks. The killed totalled 12,064; died of wounds, 2,810; died of sickness, 911; presumed dead, 1,328; missing, 603; prisoners, 1,010, and wounded, 45,923. The total of the permanently incapacitated, not counting wounded, for the twelve months is 19,726. Presuming half the wounded will not be able to return to the front, the total number permanently incapacitated was about forty-three thousand. During the same twelve months the total number of recruits has been 74,510.

17,645 in Three Months.

Dealing specifically with February, March and April of this year the casualties are given as 17,645, of whom 4,891 came under the headings, killed, died of wounds, presumed dead, prisoners or missing, the wounded for the three months totalling 12,243. On the same presumption that half the wounded are available for service again, it will be seen that the total number permanently incapacitated is approximately eleven thousand.

For the three months, when recruiting was at its lowest ebb, enlistments totalled 19,584.

The Minister said that the total number of recruits enlisted for the Canadian Defence Force was five hundred. In reply to a question by Mr. Pardee as to whether General Lessard had made a report on the military situation affecting the Canadian troops in England, especially in regard to the Lewis machine gun subscribed for by the Canadian public, Sir Edward Kemp replied, "There is no such report on the files of the Department."

Following is a summary of the conscription bill:

Enrollment without registration of all men between twenty and forty-five in ten classes:

FIRST THREE CLASSES (which will be called first) comprise all single men and childless widowers from 20 to 34 years of age (1) 20 to 23, (2) 24 to 28, (3) 29 to 34.

CLASS 4—Married men, widowers with children, from 20 to 23.

CLASS 5— Married men widowers with children, from 24 to 28.

CLASS 6—Married men, widowers with children, from 29 to 34.

CLASS 7—Unmarried men and childless widowers, from 34 to 41.

CLASS 8— Married men, widowers with children, from 34 to 41.

CLASS 9— Unmarried men and childless widowers, from 42 to 45.

CLASS 10—Married men, widowers with children, from 42 to 45.

Men married after June 11th, to be called with single men

No more than 100,000 men to be called to colours.

Voluntary enlistment to be permitted until each class is called.

Local tribunals to be formed to hear appeals for exemption.

Men needed more in industries and on the farms than the army are not to be enlisted.

Act not to come into force until proclaimed by Order-in-Council.

Men who fail to respond when called to be tried by court-martial as deserters.

MILITIA DRILLS ALL SUMMER

The Militia regiments of Toronto and the Military District No. 2 have ben asked to continue their weekly drills throughout the summer following a conference held between Maj. Gen. Logie, Col. Bickford and the officers commanding the Toronto units. As yet nothing has been done in the matter in the Military District No. 3, but it is thought that they will follow the example of District No. 2.

Liberals in Caucus

Sir Wilfred Laurier is Greeted with Loud Cheers

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 12. —The conscription bill was discussed at length in the Liberal caucus to-day. Loud cheering greeted Sir Wilfrid as he entered the conference room, and frequent bursts of applause punctuated the deliberations throughout. At the conclusion of the caucus Sir Wilfrid informed the press that a committee had been appointed to frame a resolution which will be presented at another caucus before the bill comes up for the second reading.

It is felt that some common ground can be reached by this means.

Caucus members expressed satisfaction with the result of the deliberations.

It appears certain that the Liberals can get together on certain amendments of an important nature.

Meanwhile, what appears to be a large hole, has been discovered in the measure upon which the government has been working for the past fortnight. The bill declares that the Governer-General by proclamation, may "call out" men by classes.

It has been discovered that there is no one for the men called out to report to.

While there is elaborate machinery provided for excusing men from service on appeal, there is no machinery providing for gathering them up for service, nothing for applying and enforcing the law, no boards or other designated authorities for the men to report to.

Peterboro Veterans Met Last Night

The Peterborough Veterans' Association, comprising veterans of 1866, met last night in the recreation room of the armouries to the number of about twenty. The occasion was the annual banquet of the Association. Col. J. W. Miller presided. A well selected programme followed a sumptuous repast.

J. H. Burnham Will Not Support Bill

Member for West Peterborough Resigns as Candidate in Next Election Because He Wants Conscription of Wealth as Well as of Health

GIVES HIS REASONS

OTTAWA, June 11.—One of the first results of the introduction of the Conscription Bill has been more trouble for Sir Robert Borden in the defection of one of his hitherto ardent supporters from Ontario. After hearing the provisions of the bill in the Commons this afternoon, Capt. J. H. Burnham, Conservative member for West Peterborough, who recently returned from active service overseas, wrote out his resignation as Conservative candidate for his riding at the next election. Captain Burnham declares that he cannot support a Government or a bill that merely seeks to levy on the man-power of the Dominion for military service while wealth escapes. He says he endorses the resolution passed by the Montreal Presbyterian General Assembly at Montreal on Saturday last, advocating conscription of talent, wealth and energy of the Canadian people, as well as the enrollment of men for military service.

In his letter to the President of the West Peterborough Conservative Association, Mr. Burnham says in part:—"The last man and the last dollar mean more than the man alone. The Prime Minister is a tower of strength to the cause and to the Empire, but his bill is not, in my opinion, equitable as it stands, and as there is a promise of nothing further in that regard, I cannot support it. The safety of the State both at home and abroad is, I am persuaded, dependent upon a broader bill than the Prime Minister's bill brought down to-day. I cannot vote to saddle the whole burden of the war on the great mass of the people alone. There must be sacrifice all round, or Canada cannot throw herself unitedly and wholeheartedly into the mighty struggle."

In his letter to the President of the West Peterborough Conservative Association he writes:—"This will leave us both free to do as we see fit. I cannot support this bill as it now stands. As my constituents have no chance to give their views, I will not vote against the bill."

WARSAW GIRL GETS $1,000 FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

J. Russel Payne, Now of Saskatchewan, Hesitated on the Eve of the Wedding and Did Not Appear the Next Day.

GAVE NO REASON WHY

Elizabeth A. Lonsdale, the adopted daughter of Mr. Thos. Levi Payne, a Warsaw merchant, and one of the most prominent men in East Peterborough, was awarded $1,000 and costs in her breach of promise action against J. Russell Payne of Smith Township, and now of Saskatchewan, which was heard by Judge Huycke in the County Court this afternoon.

No defence was offered and in fixing the damages Judge Huycke remarked that he was restricted by the defendant's comparative lack of money. "If he were a wealthy man," said His Honour, "I would give much greater damages."

(Referring to the case he stated that the plaintiff had been cruelly treated. It was with a refined cruelty that was the more heartless. There was no reflection whatever upon Miss Lonsdale, and no disgrace attached to her. She was probably much better off and the Judge expressed the hope that she would be better off. There was nothing against her in the matter. There was no reason why she shouldn't live it down, if there was anything to live down, and be perfectly happy. His Honour emphasized this encouragement to the plaintiff, that she had nothing to reproach herself with.

Miss Lonsdale is only twenty-two years old, of fair complexion, and has nothing to fear from her mirror. Payne is twenty-six.

Engaged Two Years.

Miss Lonsdale stated that she had been engaged to Russel Payne for two years. Their marriage had been set for January 17th, 1917. She had purchased and prepared her trousseau. Everything had been set for the ceremony, except the arrangements with the minister. And Payne had called at the latter's residence a week before the day selected for the wedding, but the minister was not at home.

On January 16 Payne was taken ill. When the plaintiff called to see him he remarked that he "couldn't be on hand to-morrow." He didn't give any reason except that he said he had got hurt. Since that time he had made no further explanation of his withdrawal. For two years he had been regarded by the Warsaw community as the plaintiff's fiancee. He had called at her home once a week taken her to socials and other public assemblies and had driven her home from Lakefield the day she bought the cake that was to have graced their wedding dinner. Miss Lonsdale said she had not received the attentions of other men during these two years of her courtship nor had Russel Payne kept company with any other girl.

A package of Payne's letters to Miss Lonsdale were produced in court. Mr. G. N. Gordon, who appeared for the plaintiff, read an endearing passage from one of them, and the witness stated that the terms of all of them were those of a lover.

Mr. Levi Payne corroborated in part the testimony of the plaintiff. Russel Payne was now working for a farmer in Saskatchewan. He had given no explanation for refusing to marry. Miss Lonsdale, he had stated, had set the day of the wedding at his request. Other witnesses supported the evidence that the defendant had kept company with Miss Lonsdale and they were regarded as engaged.

A TERRIBLE HANDICAP.

The Montreal Gazette, in all respects the senior Conservative journal of Canada, the sane, steadying organ of the best elements of the Conservative party, thus puts its finger upon a nasty ulcer that is gnawing the vitals of Canada:

"Are the fierce hatreds bred of the war, and which are universal, to prevail over right and commonsense in a land like Canada, which is only beginning to build itself up on a scale commensurate with its territorial size and natural wealth? Union, not disunion, is needed in the Dominion to-day. The war cannot last forever, and Canada will be labouring under a terrible handicap if her people are torn with religious and racial jealousies and suspicions when peace is restored."

Canada has been, and is now, labouring under the "terrible handicap" of having her "people torn with religious and racial jealousies and suspicions." No matter how victoriously the war in Europe is concluded in the interests of the allies, and what they are fighting for, Canada will still be in thrall to the most severing influence in her national life if she does not fight and conquer the spirit of discord raised and kept rampant by racial and religious prejudice.

There are two main elements or agencies of discord in Canada, both organized; both opposite in character and ostensible object but one in result, the creating and strengthening of the spirit of discord. Each side has its recognized followers but beyond these the poison has been spread to the unthinking and easily excited. It is not necessary to specifically mention names. Anybody who loves Canada and thinks of things will name them specifically to himself.

What makes the matter worse is that both these elements have been virtually recognized and used for partisan advantage by the presently dominant party of the country. Both these elements thrive upon virtual official party recognition and virtual deference to their claims. Nationalism has been encouraged, fostered, recognized by official preferment as an agency for destroying a certain Canadian statesman. And the present indications seem to indicate that the scheme has succeeded, but something else has been killed far more important than any individual statesman—the national spirit of harmony has been killed, and recruiting was killed in Quebec, and injured elsewhere in Canada, by thrusting into the public eye the spectacle of a government, which, while apepaling for recruits to help the Empire, was coodling and encouraging a faction that held the doctrine that Canada had no duty to the Empire.

Now, when Premier Sir Robert Borden sees the fat in the fire that himself and his party helped to kindle and keep burning, he must recognize that the country is paying a mighty high price for the party gain that came from the support and encouragement of a disloyal and essentially seditious faction.

We have one form of conscription. The High Cost of Living has us by the throat and is compelling us to fight—not for democracy but—for the interest of the big interests.

LOGICAL DEMOCRACY.

The New York Herald, in its report of the enthusiastic reception of the United States General Pershing and his staff in England, states, among other things, that—

"The station was guarded by military and police, who ushered the American officers to the automobiles awaiting them, and the soldiers to omnibuses."

This is the most natural thing imaginable, but it illustrates how hard the spirit of militarism and class distinction dies. It may be a finical distinction to draw, but it is worth noting that the "officers" were put in automobiles and the "soldiers" in omnibuses. We are told time after time that this is a war in the interests of democracy—in the interests of the man as an individual, with individual rights and interests. We are fighting to give men equal rights in the eyes of the law of nations, but in fact we make distinctions, and follow the ways of military bulk of the hard fighting, the hard autocracy—put officers in automobiles and soldiers in omnibuses. The soldier does the hardest work, fares the hardest, draws the lowest pay, and virtually does all the fighting, though of course the officers fight too, and get killed and wounded. But the bulk of the hard fighting, the hard faring and hard sleeping falls on the private soldier, who generally is a working man. In the official returns it is stated that sixty-four per cent. of Canadian recruits are classed as manual labourers. This statement is no reflection upon the character of these men nor any reason why such distinction should prevail. It may be the way of the world, and may be a fulfilment of the Scripture which says that "to him that hath shall be given." It may be all this and still be as it is a surviving relic of the militaristic spirit, which has its fullest expression in the German army, where men are the slaves of officers, subject to degrading servitude, to autocratic military rule.

It may be that it is unavoidable, but it serves to show that inherited customs, inherited habits are hard to die—die much harder than the brave private soldiers, who are discriminated against not alone by militaristic Germany, but by the most advanced democracies of the world. Even the United States, the ne plus ultra of democracy, seems to see nothing incongruous in putting officers, who have the comparatively easy billet, in autos and the private soldiers in 'busses. These distinctions may be harmless and not perhaps offensive to the soldiers themselves, who submit as a matter of custom; but there is evidence that the way is long yet to the recognition and practice of the true spirit of democracy.

"You can't logically tell the poor men to fight and lose their lives—that is all they have—and leave the wealthy man at home to pile up millions."—Dr. Michael Clark, M. P.

AN EQUITABLE REVENUE RESOURCE.

The Canadian League for the Taxation of Land Values, as a source of national revenue, has for its object, the meeting of Canada's crisis by increasing production, with consequently increased revenues to meet our obligations and secure a better living for the real wealth producers, the "common people."

The way of work of the league is to reduce or abolish the tariff (the tax) on foodstuffs, because it is held that tariffs increase to all consumers the price of all commodities affected by the tariffs, so that the removal of the tariff on food stuffs will reduce the high cost of living.

To remove the tariff on agricultural implements and supplies will tend to make farming more profitable, and help to attract to the noblest of occupations, crop production, returning soldiers, incoming settlers and part of the congested population of our cities.

To remove the tariff from raw material and cause reduction in its cost, will reduce prices and increase the profits of municipalities, and will enable the country's business interests to hold our market and extend our foreign trade.

It is held that a one per cent. tax on land values will tend to discourage the holding idle of land, since it is asserted that 80 per cent. of Canada's land is held idle; and, besides, vast areas of valuable business, manufacturing and residence sites in our towns and cities, much of it owned foreigners. It is claimed that more easy access to our national resources will open the door to a tremendous commercial prosperity.

The desire of the League is to encourage industry, to discourage monopoly, and the provision of sufficient revenue to discharge our national obligations; its ambition, to make the industries so prosperous that mere monopolists will get tired of holding what others need and will themselves get busy; and its goal is a successful nation of producers gladly discharging its national duties.

It is estimated that the land and site values of Canada amount to 8,000 million dollars, nearly fifty per cent. of the value of all the resources. It wil thus be seen that a tax of one per cent. on land values will yield 80 million dollars, which with a modest tariff, hich even with food stuffs, farming implements, fertilisers and raw materials placed on the free list, would yield ample revenue for the enlarged after-the-war requirements of Canada.

The League thus summarizes the effects of the tax on land values:

The tax will produce the funds required.

It will be certain and definite.

It can be collected with a minimum of expense.

It will be drawn from the value produced by the people collectively.

In stimulating the use of land it will increase steamship and railway traffic earnings.

It will help increase production, thus tending to reduce the cost of living.

It will avoid the danger of driving away wealth which many other forms of taxation are likely to do.

It makes possible an increase in the British preference, the placing of many articles on the free list, and a general reduction of the present oppressive tariff.

The work of the Canadian League for the taxation of land values is conducted to the end of educating the people to the advantages of such a plan of taxation, which can only be embodied in legislation by a majority of the people. In this educative campaign the need of funds is felt, and all who desire to aid the propaganda in the public interest can do so by sending contributions to Mr. C. A. Bowman, Hon. Treasurer, Canadian League for Taxation of Land Values, Citizen Building, Ottawa.

Every citizen who enjoys the protection of the state, owes a duty to the state, to be paid in fighting for its integrity and interest, or by whatever work to this end he is fitted to do.

THE DANBURY HATTERS.

The decree has been signed for foreclosure on the homes of 140 hatters against whom Loewe & Co. secured a judgment by the verdict of a jury after fourteen years of litigation. Their case is a hard one and sympathy for them is justified. They are suffering for no personal or wilful fault. They did not intend to break the law, and relied upon the promise of their unions to save them harmless from the acts which the unions officially ordered.

They are not the victims of their employer, whose business they destroyed by their boycott. They had no personal grievance against him over conditions of labor. The firm was prosperous and a good employer when it was ordered to exclude all but unionists from the shop as part of a national campaign to unionise the industry. Two million federationists united against their single adversary in a war waged over the continent. The firm is as much the victim of the federation as the unionists, with an important difference. The foreclosed hatters were fighting for their union, and in reliance upon its written pledge to hold them harmless. The firm was fighting for itself first, but also in the interests of all employers.

It was and is necessary either that these foreclosures shall be pressed or that admission shall be made that there is no personal responsibility for a boycott waged ruthlessly, causelessly and unlawfully. The hatters and their former employers are both entitled to sympathy. All who believe in the reign of law in industry are jointly interested with Loewe & Co. in bringing to a perception of their error, not the 140 hatters, but their trade associates who abandoned them to the law after instigating their act and promising to save them harmless. Every offer of compromise for less than the law allowed has been rejected, not by the firm but by the unions. Now it is suggested that the unions will indemnify their members after their homes have been sold. It is an admission that the unions ought to save the homes from being sold.—New York Times.

CAVALRY PATROL

By H. B. C. P.

In the cavalry lines there was great excitement for they had had no big movements since those days of the 1916 push when the Cavalry Corps waited and waited in vain, for a break in the hostile line which would give the mounted men their chance.

For some weeks rumors had been going about concerning the Boche intentions, and the gunners had been almost offensively jubilant over their daily work. The line had been talking darkly of the great push, and mildly discouraging things had been said about cavalry being an obsolete arm.

The winter had been a trying time for the horses and the frosts had made exercise difficult, but taking it all in all the men and horses were in the height of training, and the long course of combined operations in open fighting with the various resting and reinforcing brigades had kept up general efficiency to a wonderful high level.

The men were keen—deadly keen for none of us had had a sniff at a Uhlan since 1914, and all the fighting they had had was a few odd spells in the trenches when actin gas infantry reinforcements.

The reports of mounted work in Egypt and Mesopotamia had stirred up considerable envy, malice and uncharitableness and every mounted man held that the modern war of position was a damnably unsporting affair.

Events moved quickly and the whole of the mounted troops were wild with expectation. At last came the order to move up nearer to the line, and for the first time since 1914 large bodies of cavalry were practically in touch with our own firing line. When the order came for two squadrons to furnish patrols to go forward with the infantry, excitement reached fever heat and jealousy crystallized to the point of a fiery interchange and compliment between the lucky troops and those whom fortune had delayed.

The troop rode out across the shell pitted fields and crossed our own trenches by means of special light transportable bridges. Halfway up they met a pontoon bridging train of the R. E. bound for Peronne.

That was the first really authentic confirmation of the fall of the town that the men had seen, though a myriad rumours had extended the Boche retreat to towns well off the military map.

No Man's Land is a bit of a bad going; shell craters, mud, strands of torn barbed wire, and all the beastly impediments of a localized battlefield. But beyond the Boche second line trenches the going was better, the holes fewer, and the roads clearly distinguishable.

Our shells were passing overhead and far in front of us Boche shrapnel was spraying certain marked points where our advance was pressing forward. Working and fatigue parties were going up, wounded coming down. No matter how badly hit they were, the sight of cavalry seemed to cheer them, and we learned that German cavalry were also out covering the rear of the retreat.

The effect of this news upon the men was electrical. They had hoped to kill Boches, but the prospect of contact with the Uhlans filled them with joy, for it meant opportunity for sword and lance work at their own particular foes the men they had outmatched in 1914.

At last the troop was well beyond the German third lines and in the open country to the rear, beyond the zone of shell destruction, and amid the abandoned bivouacs of the enemy. The sound of rifle and machine gun-fire ahead grew more noticeable. Another mile farther on we trotted through a company of infantry who had deployed in open order and knew that before us were only a few of our own patrols—and then the Huns.

Curving round the side of a hill and avoiding the crest, we got our first touch of fire, for half a mile away a farm house was being held by a few infantry and machine guns. Our orders were clear, held posts were to be left to the infantry. Our job as to push on, round up stragglers, cut off retreating parties and keep in touch with the enemy.

The country was curiously desolate and except for the smoke clouds from burning villages and the incessant shell fire, it was very like manoeuvres. Lines of Uhlan men were deployed across the fields, here a plotoon working its way down a stunted hedgerow, there a runner coming up with messages. The air was keen with frost and sound travelled well. One heard the voices of the officers as clearly as if they were close beside one.

In front was a clear space of fields. On the order the troop deployed, and increasing pace, pricked our way across the open. Away to our right flank shrapnel was bursting over a road, but we extended at wide intervals and moving across the open seemed to be unperceived.

Suddenly there was a cheer from the advanced section, and they broke into a gallop ahead, half a dozen Uhlans had broken cover from a small orchard, and were pelting way down a road as fast as they could go.

One of our flank patrols had seen them too, and rode like hell across country to cut them off. From behind us somewhere on the high ground, an infantry patrol opened fire with a Lewis gun and bringing down the leading Uhlan bunches the others in confusion. For a moment they wavered; then the gun caught them again and they scattered just as our flank patrol came over the crest and down upon them.

One of the dismounted Uhlans dragged his carbine from its bucket, under his dead horse, and fired twice before our men were on him. He rolled over like a rabbit before the sword thrust. Of the others only one got away, three were wounded and prisoners.

Our troop came up and halting at a ruined hamlet we scanned for snipers while the O. C., wrote a message. Placing this inside a captured Uhlan helmet he sent it to the rear where it eventually reached the Colonel who read: "At 7.15 a.m. March 16th the Hussars came into contact with the enemy's cavalry patrols at X. Herewith the "brush" the first since 1914."

BOYS HELPING FARMERS RECEIVED GOV'T BADGES ON SATURDAY NIGHT

A very enjoyable time was spent at the Nicholls Oval Saturday evening when the boys of the County of Peterborough who are helping to win the war by assisting the farmers of the county to produce more food, gathered to receive the badges presented by the Ontario Government for their loyalty to their country in helping to produce more food at this critical time.

The programme opened with a baseball match. Farmers' Sons vs. City Boys. The game was very evenly contested up to the 4th period, then the Farmers' Sons got their artillery working to perfection, and it kept the City Boys busy chasing the ball to all quarters of the field.

At the end of the game the official scorer announced the score, Farmers' Sons 10, City Boys 7.

The Farmers' Sons had imported two outsiders for the game, namely H. W. Kingerely of the National Council Y.M.C.A., Toronto, and the Boys' Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., which accounts for the terrible bombardment that took place in the fourth innings.

At 8 p.m. the boys and their parents and friends gathered around the big camp fire where songs were sung and a good social time was spent for a half hour.

Mr. J. E. Smith, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., called on Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., to present the Government badges to the boys. As Mr. Gillespie pinned the barges on the boys, he inquired how the boy was enjoying his work on the farm. The boys admitted that the work was hard, but was pleasant and it was doing them good.

Mr. H. Kingerely representing the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., presented the Canadian Standard Efficiency Tests, which is doing so much for the building up of the Canadian boys, and which is being used in connection with the food production campaign.

The very enjoyable and profitable evening came to a close at 9:30 with the singing of the National Anthem.

THE REASON WHY

(By T. H. HOLT-HUGHES)

(By T. H. Holt-Hughes.)

I was listening the other day to three soldiers as they argued about the reasons why men fight. It is not often that they want to know the why and wherefore. Whatever they may think they are content to leave argument and to do the job that has to be done. So I listened with the more interest. They argued with great zeal. One spoke of "patriotism." Another, a simple and direct mind, was certain that a man fought because he loved a fight. The third was as earnest in admitting no reason that did not include "the spirit of nationality." Men may argue long with these words. For me the fact is sufficient that men do fight, that men are fighting, and that so long as there is a bully in the house men will continue to fight. But these three soldiers set me thinking of the many reasons why men and women fight, or work for the war. Suppose I asked the first six chance passers-by for their reasons, what answers should I get?

With that intent I told my orderly to stand outside the main gate and to present my compliments to the first six persons who passed either in His Majesty's uniform or wearing any war-worker's badge, and to ask them, please, if they could spare a minute to come into my office. Four came in within two minutes; the fifth, apparently, was shy, and a great deal of persuasion had to be exercised in order to get him there. The sixth was a woman. That was, then, the haul—four men and one woman, and all within four minutes.

The first was a very young soldier. Despite a certain shyness, he answered my questions frankly. I told him plainly that I ought to know the reason why he was a soldier—particularly as I saw he was very young. He acknowledged he was only 18 years and 4 months and that he had worn the King's uniform for two years and eight months. In other words, he had enlisted immediately on the outbreak of war—and that at the age of 15 years and 8 months.

He regretted that the regulations had not allowed him to go to the front yet (no soldier is allowed to go until reaching the age of nineteen), and admitted that he had tried all the tricks that he knew in order to get into the fighting line. He was, as he put it, "fed up" at having to stop in England while men only a few months older were taking their share in the struggle. His only fear was that the war would finish before he got a chance to do his bit. When I asked him why he enlisted, he replied:

"My grandfather fought in the Crimean, my father fought in South Africa, and when this war broke out my mother told me it was an Englishman's duty to go and be a soldier. So I went and if I did tell a lie about my age so as to be quite sure they would not refuse me, well, sir, what would you have done?

That was one reason. His mother had told him to do it. And he had done it.

Number two was a man well into that period known as middle age; I should say he was about 55 years of age. He was rather stout, quite grey, and certainly not as active as he hoped (some time in the near future) to be. He was dressed in the now familiar grey uniform of the Volunteer Force. That is to say he was one of those thousands of men who, since their age prevented them joining the army, formed themselves into an army of their own, drilled, trained, paid all their own expenses, and at last had their desire, for at last the War Office acknowledged them, and took them over as a Home Defence auxiliary force which will be called out if necessary to assist the Home Army.

I suggested to him that he was surely entitled at his age to rest from service, and that after all we had now a regular army large enough for all purposes. For the moment he said nothing. But he had a look in his eye that boded no good for me. It passed away, however, and he replied:

"The young ones are often not too strong, there are a lot of wounded who will not be much good for another battle—and that is where we shall get our turn. We are old, perhaps, but we have the experience of years—and we may be wanted yet.

That was reason number two— we may be wanted—therefore we must be ready.

The third was a Canadian soldier who had been wounded on Easter Monday, 1917. He said that he did not think much of the German as a fighter, judging by the show he put up on that day. When asked his reason for taking a share in the war, he replied tersely enough:

"I went to Canada ten years ago from the Old Country. I had next to no money. The Old Country made Canada, and Canada gave me 160 acres of land for nothing. Consequently when the King called for volunteers to stand up for him—why, sir, I simply had to say to myself, 'Now's your time to show your gratitude—and that is why I am here."

It is a good reason, too.

The fourth and fifth were munition workers, one a stock broker by profession, the other (the shy one) a minister of religion. Both were well over military age, and both were very proud of the munition badges they were wearing. Number Four's reason was.

"Nothing doing on 'change; and, if there was, it would be no good doing it because we should be dealing with money that ought to be in the hands of the government. In these days no one has any right to be idle—so I took a course in lathe-work and (with pride) I can do a good day's work, too."

The clergyman was very shy until he spoke, and then he spoke with passion.

"I have preached Christian peace all my life, and now I make shells because I believe that to-day that is God's work, and the only way to peace."

The sixth was a lady, obviously of gentle birth and breeding. I had great difficulty in getting her to give me the reason why she was working in a factory. It was not that she was not proud of her work, but there was a private reason, something very near to her heart. At last she told me:

'My only boy was killed with the original Expeditionary Force. His father died, years ago, at Cadurman. To be robbed of husband is enough—but to lose one's only son—. You may call it revenge; it is revenge, but there is the thought, too, that I may save others what I have suffered.

Poor gentle soul.

So there you have your answers. And you will know that not one of the six whom I interviewed for your benefit will fear the coming of the Judgment Day.

STEEL AND IRON.

Reaumur discovered the direct process of making steel in 1722 or thereabouts by immersing malleable iron in a bath of cast iron. A steel manufactory is said to have been set up by Benjamin Huntsman near Sheffield in 1740. It was about 1800, however, before steel fairly became the fashion. The greatest boost to the trade came from Bessemer in 1850.

AUSTRIA SHOE LEATHER SUPPLY DIMINISHED

To the many cares of the Austro-Hungarian Government has been added an ever increasing difficulty—to clothe and shoe its men in the field. For many months the greatest economy has been practiced in the army supply departments, but this has not in any way lessened the task of providing several millions of men at the front and in training depots with the equipment needed.

Not the tiniest rag has been wasted in Austria-Hungary since the outbreak of the war. Old uniforms were converted into new cloth by adding to the old fibre obtained enough new cotton or wool to give the fabric reasonable wearing qualities. Each reducing of the material lessened its strength, however, so that ultimately it had to be discarded. With imports of wool out of the question, the country's scant reserves had to be used up.

For a while some wool was obtained in the Balkans and in Turkey. The Germans, however, bought in the same market and the surplus held in Bulgaria and Anatolia was soon used up. This led to the development of the fibre industry in the Central States. The experiments made with paper, nettle and other plant fibres were in many cases successful, but fell short of producing a cloth suited for Winter wear. A sort of duck, suitable for Summer uniforms, was won from the nettle yarn and paper yarn, treated to resist water, is now made into uniform overcoats. The coats are both warm and waterproof, but lack the wearing qualities of an all-wool fabric.

While Austria-Hungary was an exporter of shoes and leather articles before the war, it also imported much leather; especially the sort needed for soles. There is no shortage of uppers in the country, chiefly for the reason that the leather used for this is strong and permits of several resolings. The leather question in the monarchy is for this reason one of sole leather entirely.

Efforts made to produce good sole leather in Austria-Hungary have not been very successful. In addition to the hides, obtained locally, being somewhat unsuited, the tanning processes employed do not appear to give the quality called for in army shoes. Substitutes have been used, but finally it was found that soles made of wood were the next best thing to leather. The men do not like them, because the wooden soles do not bend and they tire the feet. This has led to the removing of shoes and other leather equipment of the dead on the battlefield, against which there existed a deep and universal prejudice up to last Winter.

During the first year of the war, the Austro-Hungarian Government did everything possible to make the men in the trenches comfortable by the generous issuing of clothing, shoes, and food. To the slight retrenchments made later, sweeping economy had to be added, which recently were extended also to the rations. The daily allowance of bread was reduced by about fifty grams, and a little more meat was given instead. At about the same time one of the meatless days was abolished by the Government, not because there was an abundance of cattle, but for the reason that the supply of breadstuffs had run low, and more hides were needed to provide shoes for the army.

Meanwhile the stores of leather had run so low that the Government was obliged, towards the middle of April to regulate the sale of shoes to the civilian population.

THE OUTLOOK FOR RUSSIA

By ERNEST J. HART

But for the French and British offensive, now followed by that of Italy, Petrograd might to-day be in the hands of the Germans, Riga would have fallen, and Odessa and Kieff would be in imminent peril. The countries which have sacrificed thousands of lives and poured out millions of money for Russia have now to bear, unaided by that country, the entire brunt of the war, while Russian peasants, soldiers, workmen, and doctrinaries, not to mention subsidized traitors, meet and talk as only Russians can talk. There is no fighting, no munition making, little or no work, while these muddle-headed persons are arranging for themselves new conditions of peace and dictating to the experienced democracies of Britain and France, and now of America, terms of settlement in lieu of those long since decided and formulated by the Allies themselves after long and serious consideration.

The terms agreed upon by the Allies in conference involve no confiscation of territory beyond that which had previously been wrested from its owners by Germany and her confederates, although German colonies, which were monumental examples of misrule, as any one like myself personally acquainted with the miseries of African natives under German governance can attest, will not be returned. On this point I will merely recall the recent speech of that great Boer, General Smuts. As for indemnities, about which Muscovite doctrinaries are now holding forth, M. Ribot has just stated the case quite clearly, namely that those indemnities will be in strict repayment for the wrongs and confiscation wrought in the territories which Germany has violated with so much deliberation. France before the war lent millions to Russia, Britain since the war has also advanced millions, and America is willing to lend financial aid. Is Russia going to throw over her democratic allies, and deny to France as well as Belgium the after-war restitution which is her due? It looks very much like it.

In a lecture which I delivered in this city three days after the outbreak of the Russian revolution, I expressed the belief that Russia, with its uneducated and mixed masses of people, was not ripe for a republican form of government. My opinion, which has been confirmed, was that it was a mistake for the Provisional Government entirely to overthrow and discard the ruling dynasty. They had the opportunity of setting up in place of the Czar a much stronger and better man—the Grand Duke Nicholas—who should have been appointed Regent and Commander in Chief until the end of the war, when the work of constitution making and settling the form of government in accord with modern democratic ideals could have been safely taken in hand. Milukoff and his associates were in too much of a hurry and made a fatal mistake, as well as set a bad example to the masses, by not only deposing the Czar, but by dispossessing all his relatives, regardless of their deserts — and they are not all of them bad, idle, and vicious—far from it. Their estates and property were unjustly taken from them, and this gave the people and peasants, and ultimately the soldiers, the idea of dividing up the land and having a general share-out.

The villages became hotbeds of land grabbers and looters, and the fever rapidly extended to the ranks of the army at the front, the soldiers wanting their share, and being naturally unwilling to wait until the war was over, when all the land might be gone, together with other possessions of the landowners, for Russian estates are now suffering the fate meted out by the Germans to the beautiful chateaux in Northern France. The Russian Army is in a deliquescent condition, men quit the ranks and desert almost without let or hindrance, they discuss an armistice or peace with German soldiers and officers in disguise, and Germany and Austria are able to release thousands of men to fight on the French and Italian fronts.

All this, I repeat, might have been avoided if Miliukoff and his associates had not been red-hot reformers in a hurry. They should have known their country better. There is no good in destroying institutions if you have not other and better ones to replace them without delay, and Miliukoff, Guchkoff and Lvoff would have been more loyal to Russia if they had promptly replaced one figurehead, the Czar, by another and a stronger and superior one—the Grand Duke Nicholas, a man respected and feared by the army, whose loyalty to the Russian cause and that of the Allies was never in doubt. He could and would have kept the army together and prevented the hopeless lack of discipline which has sapped all authority, caused the resignation of Brusiloff and others, and which now threatens Alexieff, whose outspoken remarks on army disorganization have led to his denunciation by the egregious Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates.

Personally, I cannot help feeling very pessimistic as to the immediate future of Russia, and I fear that things will be much worse before they are better, thanks partly to the insidious Socialist propaganda, behind which is hardly concealed the devilish figure of German militarism, and partly to the rotten condition of the army at the front, where, except here and here, scarcely a vestige of discipline remains. Russia is courting for herself a hideous disaster and stern retribution. Should she desert the Allies or allow her army to melt away she will surely be caught between the upper and the nether millstones, and will be ground to powder. The Teuton army on the one side and Japan, with very possibly China, on the other will between them inflict a terrible punishment for Russias betrayal of the cause of civilization. The former will take all he can, including poor Poland and the areas adjacent to the Black Sea; the Turks will invade and capture the Caucasus, while Japan assuredly will secure the eastern territory of Russia, with rich and fertile Siberia, and, with China's aid, may sweep down on the country as the Mongols and Tarters did in the Middle Ages.

These are points which the newly emancipated press of Russia will do well to impress on the soldiers and people before it is too late and complete anarchy overtakes the country. My own view is that the best thing to do is to set up a dictatorship, with Nicolai Nicolaievitch in that position, and to postpone all reforms, education, fiscal, and agrarian, until after the war. Russia more than anything else needs a strong man, and seemingly he is not to be found in the Provisional Government.

28 ENTOMBED MINERS WERE FOUND ALIVE.

Fifty Bodies have been taken from Copper Mine, in Butte, Montana.

BUTTE, Mont., June 12.—Twenty eight men entombed in the Speculator mine since the fire on Friday night, have been brought to the surface alive. Of the 28 rescued men one was so far gone that resuscitation was impossible. The finding of the men alive stimulated the efforts of the rescue teams and there is strong hopes that others may be found alive.

Fifty bodies have been recovered from the Speculator and Granite Mountain copper properties of the North Butte Mining Co.

The fire, which started on the 2,400 foot level, spread very quickly, cutting off the escape of men on the lower levels. Dense smoke retarded the rescue work. Miners from adjoining properties went to work as rescuing gangs, aiding National Guardsmen, who had been called to the scene. They were able to do little.

DETROIT LIST GROWS.

Auto Makers said to bar Non-Registered Eligibles.

DETROIT, June 12. — More than 2,000 persons added their names to registration lists in Detroit to-day, and it was officially estimated that twice that number would register before the books were closed late to-night. This will bring the total registration here to about 157,000.

Although a number of persons who registered to-day proved that they had not been able to get to the polls on Tuesday, it was said that several hundred factory employees registered after they had learned that it was not possible to work without registration credentials. Every automobile factory in Detroit, it is asserted, is enforcing this order.

EGGS FOR COLD STORAGE.

Five Carloads Put Into Well-Known Plant at Lindsay.

TORONTO, June 9.— At the Labour Temple the following message was received from a trainman in Lindsay: "I have just switched five cars of eggs into the siding of a large cold storage plant in Lindsay." Let labour leaders investigate this and they will find that it has something to do with the high cost of living.

THE JUNE SITTINGS OF THE COUNTY COURT OPENED THIS AFTERNOON

Several Criminal and Civil Cases To Be Dealt With — His Honour Judge Huycke Refers to the Apathy of the Canadian Public Towards the War—Three Homes To Be Remembered

The June sittings of the County Court opened this afternoon at one o'clock with His Honour, Judge Huycke presiding. There are five criminal cases and three civil actions on the list. Mr. John Young, Reeve of Ennismore is foreman of the Grand Jury.

ADDRESS TO GRAND JURY

In his address to the Grand Jury, His Honour Judge Huycke referred to the present condition of the Court House, which was partially destroyed by fire in December last. His Honour suggested that the Grand Jury look into the matter of restoring the building and if necessary bring in any such recommendations as the Grand Jurors may see fit. His Honour hoped that whatever is done to the building would be well done and something worthy of not only what Peterborough is to-day but what Peterborough will be in the future. The Matter of combining the county and city buildings in one large structure was referred to by Judge Huycke.

The Grand Jury was properly instructed as to their duties in connection with the criminal list. His Honour left it optional with the Grand Jury to visit all the public institutions upon the grounds that this is a time of stress and struggle. Judge Huycke referred to a request he had received from the authorities asking that jury cases be discouraged as much as possible, owing to the scarcity of men and labour conditions created by the war. Judge Huycke made it plain to the members of the Bar that he would strike out all juries so far as civil cases are concerned. Referring to the war, Judge Huycke said that he did not think the people of Canada were taking the war as seriously as they should. "It has been most lamentable," said Judge Huycke. Three names will stand out in Canada's history. They are Ypres, Courcelette and Vimy Ridge. Our boys fought nobly at these places and it is a shame that they are not backed up by the people of Canada who are living in comfort and ease."

TECHNICAL SCHOOL IS FAVOURED BY MANUFACTURERS

Matter Was Thoroughly Discussed at Meeting of Manufacturers' Section of Board of Trade Last Night — Resolution Was Passed

A meeting of the Manufacturers' Section of the Board of Trade was held last evening in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. There was a large and representative attendance. A regular meeting night was decided on and the second Monday of each month was selected. Mr. A. E. Coulthard was elected Vice-Chairman, who, together with Mr. G. G. Gladman and Mr. E. H. Howson, were elected members of the Executive Committee.

The chairman, Mr. W. R. Breyley, introduced the subject of a Technical School for Peterborough, and Mr. Budd of the Canadian Chisle Company, was asked to speak on the subject. Mr. Budd spoke encouragingly and enthusiastically of technical schools and pointed out the advantages to the city through the opportunity it gives for the young men and women of the city to receive practical training.

Mr. Eastwood, Chairman of the Board of Education, was invited to address the meeting on the same subject. The speaker cited the fact the Federal Government would contribute to the cost of technical school work at the close of the war. A technical education was secondary to the primary education, but was of utmost importance in the preparing of boys and girls for their work in life. He spoke enthusiastically of Mr. Sprague of Hamilton, as being one of the first specialties in his line. He pointed out the Provincial Government framed an Act setting forth what they are prepared to do to assist technical training, by paying 50 per cent. of salaries up to $5,000.00, and would also pay for the equipment on the following basis: First year 40 per cent. of cost of equipment, and 20 per cent. of cost of each of the succeeding years until the entire cost had been paid. The city would be asked to furnish the land and building. The chairman invited expressions from different members and all agreed from the information furnished, technical education was moving along the right line.

A resolution was passed to the effect that the Manufacturers Section of the Board of Trade endorse a technical School for Peterborough, and ask the Board of Education to arrange for a public meeting to discuss the matter and to be addressed by some one conversant with the subject.

A representative was appointed at a meeting of the Executive on Saturday night to accompany the Mayor's deputation to Ottawa regarding the opening of the Trent Canal.

Light Enables One To Read 30 Miles Away

It is ten feet high, its mirror has a diameter of five feet and it weighs three tons. Its beam is as brilliant on the sun at 3 o'clock in the morning or four in the afternoon, New York latitude, and you can read a newspaper by its light thirty miles away. The heat of its focused beam is so intense that it will set paper afire at a distance of two hundred and fifty feet. It has a candlepower of more than one and a quarter billion.

These are a few astonishing facts in the Popular Science Monthly for June, about the Sperry searchlight the invention of Elmer A. Sperry of Brooklyn, New York, who is already known as the inventor of the aeroplane stabilizer and ship gyroscope bearing his name and the first electric arc light.

One of the most powerful beacons along the coast is the Sandy Hook Lighthouse. But the Sperry searchlight is twenty-two times more brilliant than that light. Were the Sperry lamp substituted for the lighthouse beacon, a ship passing out at sea could be bathed in light until it disappeared below the horizon. By swinging the light back and forth across the sky it has been made visible one hundred and fifty miles away. For navy use the Sperry lamp illuminates a target ten times as brilliantly than any other projector devised.

Lazy men are always talking about some other men who are fools for luck.

The Isolde Menges Violin Recital

Last evening was offered at the hall of the Conservatory of Music one of, if not the greatest, the most delightful treats in violin music ever offered the public in Peterborough, Miss Isolde Menges, a youthful English violiniste, won instant applause. For Isolde Menges is a highly-gifted and accomplished violiniste. She has a tone of great power, of emotional warmth and searching expressiveness which is eloquent, of a glowing and ardent temperament. Her technique, energy and elasticity of bowing; her precision in fingering maintain the accuracy of her intonation even through her most tempestuous outbursts.

Undoubtedly Miss Menges is an exceptional artist. She plays with assurance, her tone is excellent throughout and she fingers and bows with a skill many male violinists might be well forgiven for envying.

There are many people in this city who would be the first to consider themselves offended were they not classed as musicians, or musical. But where were they last night? Yet the lack in quantity was well balanced by the quality, and a more enthusiastic house, considering the numbers, Miss Menges could not have wished for.

There were those present who could understand and fully appreciate good music, and appreciate it they did to the fullest. It was a tribute to Miss Menges' talent that as she unfolded her ideas, more and more confidently as the evening progressed, those listening rose, figuratively speaking, to meet her, and finally made her the object of much demonstration.

And now a few words as to the programme. The first opening notes showed that the violiniste possesses a magnificent instrument. It is a "Strad"—a real, genuine Straduarius An instrument of fine volume and pure quality. The opening number was a Sonata in E major, by Handel. Here was an opportunity for the youthful performer, who played with great power, emotional warmth and a full knowledge of the thoughts the great composers expressed in their music. The success of Miss Menges was immediate. Round after round of applause followed.

No. 2 was a subdivided number of four items, all of different characters: (a) was naturally of a dreamy nature, such as Nocturne would suggest; (b) was a very peculiar type of composition, vivacious in parts, dreamy in others; (c) was a sparkling, lively caprice, requiring a considerable amount of execution; (d) however, of these items, was that which showed off the performer's versatility. Her reading showed unusual grasp of the significance of the composer's work, and in her performance there was a disclosure of vigour and boldness even masculine in character.

No. 3 was a concerto by that ever acceptable composer, Mendelssohn. Need it be said that it was delightful, the music by such a composer, interpreted by such an artist! The last item was a Polish composition. This, as a "show piece," to demonstrate the ability of the youthful violiniste, was a happy selection. It was a piece of many styles, demanding, in parts, marvellously vivacious execution, and demonstrated the many styles the artiste was capable of. To this there was a vociferous recall and Miss Menges kindly acceded an encore.

Here Mr. Howard Edie, the manager of tour, interposed with a few words to the effect the artiste was deeply interested in music, both from the philosophic and scientific viewpoint of music itself. He had been responsible for bringing her to Canada, where she had given performances in Toronto, London, Belleville and Peterborough, as well as in New York. He regretted to see so comparatively few present, but hoped that if Miss Menges—one of the world's greatest artists—should decide on a return visit, the citizens of Peterborough would be stimulated. As to the real warmth and heartiness of the violiniste's reception there could be no doubt.

The National Anthem, "God Save the King," then brought to a close a most delightful hour and a half's entertainment.

The following is the full programme, Miss Beattie being an accomplished and sympathetic accompanist on the "Heintzman" piano, kindly provided by Mr. Britton, of the fine Heintzman Hall, in the Royal Bank building:

Programme.

Sonata in E Major ..... Handel
(a) Nocture in E Flat ..... Chopin-Sarasate
(b) The Prophet Bird ..... Schumann-Auer
(c) Caprice Viennois ..... Kreisler
(d) Tambourin Chinois .... Kreisler
Concerto ..... Mendelssohn
Souvenir de Moscow ... Wieniawski

Those who were not present were great losers, and should this talented artiste be again persuaded to include Peterborough in her touring list, let them see to it—if their love for music be real, and not merely lip-service,—that they lose not the chance of hearing one of the finest violinistes at present living.

Professor Ana, of Petrograd—an undoubted authority — says that Isaye Eysae and Miss Menges are the two greatest violin artists in the world, and Isaye is now long past his prime. Miss Menges has a persuasiveness of manner and the charm of youth, and therefore, part of her battle is won when she steps upon the stage. The larger part, however, she conquers with her violin and bow, and with them she brings about unconditional surrender on the part of her hearers.

Since the above paragraph was set up in type, news has arrived at the Examiner Office that the management of Miss Menges' tour has arranged to give the citizens of Peterborough a further opportunity of hearing this undoubted artiste. There will be another performance given on Wednesday, June 20th. It is to be hoped this return visit will meet with the support it will so well deserve.

—F. Russell.

Hypnotized Girl Will Be Awakened

Dr. Zell Hunt, Wonderful Hypnotist, Will Revive Miss Alma Bowen at the Grand To-night — Last Night's Entertainment Pleased Large Audiences

Miss Alma Bowen will be awakened from her long trance to-night at "The Grand" by Dr. Zell Hunt at 8.30. Miss Bowen, still relaxed and asleep, is on view in the Clegg Furniture Store window to-day, and is the centre of attraction. Dr. Hunt is the talk of the town. The show last night pleased the large audience. The doctor does real hypnotism and scientific telepathy.

One of the most amusing and mystifying entertainments that has been seen at the Grand Opera House for many moons is furnished by the visit of the "man of mental mystery," Dr. Zell Hunt, who appeared at the local theatre last night, and will be seen again this evening and to-morrow night. Dr. Hunt is a hypnotist and an exponent of telepathy, and to make his work more wonderful is totally deaf, reading speech by the lips in three languages, and articulating fluently. It is an amazing exhibition that he gives, and it is safe to say that there will be few vacant seats in the Grand to-night when the second entertainment of the series will be given.

Dr. Hunt opened his programme with a lecture on hypnotism that is amusing and at the same time instructive. His droll remarks during this introductory address kept the audience convulsed. His demonstrations which follow are divided into exhibitions of telepathy and hypnotism. Dr. Hunt gives some amazing results in telepathy with the aid of a deck of cards. In one experiment he asks a man in the audience to think of a card and immediately produces the card thought of from the deck. Three or four other feats of the same kind are performed in an equally mysterious manner and the audience found this part of the programme most entertaining.

The hypnotic exhibition which followed was even more amusing. The subjects, whom he secured from the audience, and who included a well known member of the Great War Veterans' Association, were soon under perfect control, and the experiments that resulted had the audience almost hysterical.

Dr. Hunt is a real hypnotist and his work is clean cut.

Renewing the Blood

Every drop of blood in the human body passes through the veins many times every day, carrying off the impurities of the body and getting cleansed of them in the kidneys. Unless the blood is abundant, and rich and red it cannot free itself of the impurities which gather on its way through the body, and then you get some sort of blood poisoning. The effect of this shows itself in many ways. Your face grows sallow and often the impurities in the blood force themselves through the skin, forming pimples and blotches. Other indications of poor blood are pale lips, frequent headaches, attacks of dizziness, poor appetite, a constantly tired feeling, shortness of breath at the least exertion, coupled with more or less violent palpitation of the heart. There is so much waste product to be got rid of by the blood every day that all persons have a certain amount of impurity in the blood, and need from time to time to enrich it and purify it by some special means.

For the purpose of purifying and enriching the blood nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood which drives out the impurities, strengthens every organ, every muscle and every nerve in the body, and makes weak, ailing people bright, active and strong. It is not possible to make a better investment on behalf of your health than to start a short treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to make your blood better and richer at once.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD

Pte. Wm. G. Billington's Death is Mourned in Free Methodist Church

A memorial service was held in the Free Methodist Church on Sunday last for Pte. Wm. G. Billington, whose parents reside at 488 McDonnel street.

He enlisted with the Mounted Rifles in 1915, and died of wounds in England on May the 8th.

The service was deeply spiritual, and many hearts wer touched when they thought of the many noble young men who had given their lives for their King and country.

HE KNEW.

A humane society had secured a show window and filled it with attractive pictures of wild animals in their native haunts. A placard in the middle of the exhibit read:

"We were skinned to provide women with fashionable furs."

A man paused before the window, and his harassed expression for a moment gave place to one of sympathy.

"I know just how you feel, old hoss," he muttered. "So was I."—Boston "Transcript."

COAL SUPPLY FOR THE CITY IN PROSPECT

The City Will Arrange To Purchase Four Thousand Tons of Black Diamonds To Retail at $10 a Ton Net.

THE PRICES QUOTED

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening to consider the matter of purchasing coal to be disposed of locally through the medium of the municipal coal yard. Mayor Duffus explained that he had received an offer through a Toronto firm agreeing to supply coal from an independent company at the following prices, f.o.b., Toronto:

Egg coal—$7.05.
Stove coal—$7.25.
Nut coal—$7.40.

It will cost seventy cents a ton to deliver the coal in Peterborough and by the time storage, carriage and other charges are met the coal will have to be sold at the rate of about ten dollars a net ton to the consumer. It was stated in the offer to the city that it might be possible to obtain the coal twenty-five cents a ton cheaper than prices quoted.

Ald. Smith thought that the price was too high. Ald. McIntyre was of the opinion that the city should secure a supply at the prices quoted. He did not believe coal would be any cheaper. Both Ald. Worth and Mayor Duffus opined that a supply of coal ever, at a retail price of ten dollars a ton would have a tendency to regulate prices. "If we do not get a supply, coal may be twelve dollars a ton next winter," observed Mayor Duffus.

Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Worth were named a committee to go to Toronto and arrange to secure two thousand tons of stove coal and two thousand tons of nut coal at the lowest possible price. The motion to secure a supply of coal was moved by Ald. McIntyre and seconded by Ald. Saunders.

CONGRATULATIONS SENT BY MAYOR TO NEW BARONET

Sir Joseph Flavelle Acknowledges Letter from His Worship Mayor Duffus

His Worship Mayor Duffus sent the following letter of congratulation to Sir Joseph Flavelle upon the birthday honours conferred on him by His Majesty the King:

June 4th, 1917.

Sir Joseph Flavelle,
Imperial Munitions Board,
Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Permit me, not only on my own behalf, but more especially on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough, to heartily congratulate you on the signal and deserved honour you have received from His Majesty the King. We feel gratified that you, a former highly esteemed citizen and one whom very many here still hold in warm regard as a friend, have been so honoured, for such honour is not bestowed without good reason, and we know that you have given valuable and untiring service to the Empire in this great struggle, and we are pleased to see your service so recognized

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) Jos. J. Duffus,
Mayor.

The following reply has been received:

Imperial Munitions Board,
Ottawa,
June 7, 1917.

Dear Mr. Mayor,—You have done me a great kindness and conferred a highly prized honour in writing me expressing on behalf of yourself and the citizens of Peterborough congratulations for the recognition His Majesty has been pleased to bestow upon me. How my memory goes back to the years spent in Peterborough and the kind friends who have been constant and true. The first telegram to reach me on Monday was from an old boy friend still in Peterborough, a Roman Catholic. I was most grateful for it. After all the old friends hold a peculiar place in one's affection. Again thanking you, I am, Mr. Mayor,

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) J. W. Flavelle.

Baby Lloyd Keet Drowned in Well; Kidnappers Held?

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 12.—The discovery of the body of baby Lloyd Keet Saturday, whose disappearance created nation-wide interest, has aroused the most intense feelings against the abductors.

The child had been drowned in a well on an abandoned farm near here at least four days.

On a telephone message from Fairplay, Mo., this morning, that the kidnappers had been surrounded and jailed, armed bands were immediately organized, ready to mete out summary justice if the reports are confirmed.

WILL FIX PRICES ON GRAIN OUTPUT

Canadian Commission is Appointed To Control Shipments from Elevators

OTTAWA. — The commission to control the grain production of Canada will be composed of Dr. Magill, chairman; H. W. Woods, Alberta; G. K. Rothwell, Moose Jaw; T. A. Crerar, J. C. Gage, W. A. Bawlf W. A. Matheson and C. A. Stewart, of Winnipeg; William A. Best, of Ottawa; Controller Ainey, of Montreal, and L. H. Clarke, of Toronto.

Dr. Magill is now secretary of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, but was for five years chairman of the Grain Commission.

H. W. Woods is a prominent grain-grower of Alberta, president of the United Farmers of Alberta and the Dominion Council of Agriculture.

G. K. Rathwell is one of the largest grain producers in Saskatchewan and has been a candidate both for the Federal Parliament and the Provincial Legislature.

T. A. Crerar is manager of the Grain Growers' Grain Company, the largest grain purchasing and export-in concern in Canada.

J. C. Gage is president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

W. A. Bawlf is a prominent grain dealer and a member of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

W. A. Best, as Parliamentary representative of the Order of Locomotive Firemen. He has been here for some time in connection with the revision of the Railway Act.

Controller Ainey is well known in Montreal civic affairs and has been a representative labour man in that city for many years.

Lionel H. Clarke is a member of the Toronto Harbour Commission, and a prominent business man of that city.

W. A. Matheson is Western manager of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company.

C. A. Stewart is a member of the firm of Stoddart and Stewart, Winnipeg, representatives in Canada of the British Wheat Purchasing Commission.

Little action is possible on the part of the commission until such time as a similar body is appointed by the United States, with similar powers to co-operate with the Canadian commission. Pending the appointment of such an American commission the Canadian commission will seek to keep prices on a parity with those in the United States.

The commission has been granted great power and will have authority to fix grain prices on shipment from storage elevators, but not the price paid the farmers. They have power to take offers of purchase from the British and allied Governments and to determine what quantity to sell, and the price required. They can take grain from the elevators without the consent of the owners and fix the price to him and to the purchaser. They can investigate the storage and accumulation of grain, and remedy any unfair restraint of marketing.

On their demand the Railway Commission can order cars to any point, and in any number, notwithstanding anything in the Grain Act to the contrary. No grain price can be finally fixed without the approval of the chairman of the commission, Dr. Magill.

BIG MUSICAL COMEDY COMING HERE MONDAY

One of the Best Shows this Season "O Cecil"

The past season in theatrical circles has found many English comedies on the road. "Charley's Aunt," "Peg O My Heart," "Bit of Fluff," have all had very successful business. Owing to the war and other things, not much in a musical way has come through Canada. It is therefore a pleasure to announce that arrangements have been made for the presentation here in the Grand Opera House on Monday, June 18th, of the most successful Musical Comedy of the present London season.

"Oh! Cecil" comes to Peterborough with a big record and is the latest "Gaiety" success following in line such well known favourites, "San Toy," "Geisha," "Country Girl," and "Belle of New York."

The company is headed by Mr. Vern Dushayne (late co-star with Miss Marion Dentler in "Peg o' My Heart"), and in "Oh! Cecil" Mr. Dushayne has a splendid role. As Cecil Algernon Vander Decker Marchbanks he has a role which was played in London by G. P. Huntley and plays the "Knut" in such a manner that the audience lose themselves tired listening and watching his antics.

All the latest songs and dances are offered in a tuneful and clever manner.

The marriage of a tailor and a dressmaker surely ought to be in accord with the eternal fitness of things.

Brinton Carpet Co. Assessment Passed by Court of Revision

Concession Also to Company's Share in Greater Production — Council Meeting Also Held Last Night — Lockie Culverts To Be Repaired

The adjourned meeting of the North Monaghan Court of Revision was held at the Court House, Peterborough on Monday evening, June 11. All the members of the court were present, with Mr. R. A. Dobbin in the chair. The appeal of the Brinton Carpet Company as heard. Mr. B. D. Why the Armenians Were Massacred

The verdict of the civilized world upon the subject of the massacre of the Armenian race is unanimous. All are agreed that the Turk has surpassed even his historic genius for deeds of blood, and that it is a proceeding for which the guilty nations will be solemnly brought to book.

To the average man there is still a good deal of obscurity about the matter in that the causes of the act are obscure. Why were the Armenians massacred? What had they done, what reason or excuse do the murderers put forward? These points are not yet clear to those vast circles of civilized folk who are not students of foreign politics.

In the first place it is essential to distinguish between the extermination of the Armenians and any ordinary local massacre inspired by race differences, religious dissensions, or cupidity coupled with fanaticism. The massacre of the Armenians is no ordinary massacre, it is simple political assassination upon a stupendous scale.

The murderer's blow has not fallen upon a monarch or a statesman, but upon a race. The Young Turkish party has enlarged on a well known political principles of poison, dagger and bomb, and achieved a mass murder the like of which has not been committed in the world for centuries. Beside this giant crime, historic slaughters pale to insignificance. Tyrants have slain families, regiments, massacred the inhabitants of cities, but it has been the crowning distinction of the "Committee of Union and Progress" and their German advisers to accomplish the political murder of a nation. Why? The answer is clear to anyone who has followed out the re-organisation of Turkey as carried out by its present leaders, the "New Turanian" party. Their idea has been to evolve out of the decadent Turkish race a new national Turkish movement. "Turkey for the Turks" has been their motive, and the "New Turanian" party, which is the official designation of this movement, has succeeded in eliminating one of the greatest obstacles that hindered them. The Armenians, although Turkish subjects, were not of Turkish blood, nor were they sympathetic toward Turkish ideals for they were the most peaceful, thrifty and industrious race within the Ottoman Empire.

The Turkish national ideal as formulated by the New Turanians, desires to divorce all religious ideals from influence upon State policy, replaces the ideals of Islam by a doctrine of militarism, and would substitute the old regime of robbery by force of arms, that is to say, warfare as a paying concern in place of legitimate commerce. In a word, the New Turanian party wish to base the ideals of the new Turkey upon those of Prussia. In imitation of the Prussian methods of propagating their especial Kultur, they have carried out the political extinction of the Armenian race by the simple process of murdering the whole nation. Less than half a million Armenians survive.

The magnitude of the crime is so stupendous that the mind fails to grasp it in its hideous entirety. It is perhaps easier realised if we substitute an imaginary Western parallel for it. Turkey has murdered the Armenian nation, leaving only half a million survivors. Visualise it as if Germany had killed off the whole inhabitants of Holland, men, women and children, leaving only half a million refugee survivors; that will give some idea of the extent of the murders. In order to remove this obstacle to the realisation of the Prussian ideas of the bloodthirsty group now running the Turkish Empire, millions of innocent men, women and children have been murdered, done to death by methods of unspeakable and inhuman torment.

The refinements of torture practised by the Turks are, after all, but the Eastern variation of the monstrous inhumanity that the Prussian has imposed upon Belgium to-day. The German is clever in that he tries to kill the soul rather than the body but the Turk has methods of killing the body that are appalling. We have heard of the prisoners' camps in Germany; Wittenburg is a name that will last longer in men's memories than the name of any university upon a German doctor's diploma. Hear then, of a Turkish prison camp for Armenians.

The wretched Armenians were herded into the desert and camped in a compound six miles from the nearest water. In the Syrian desert, be it remembered, water is more important than bread. The camps were guarded by Turkish soldiery under command of the German-trained officers who had been educated according to the best Germano-Turanian ideas by the von der Goltz mission. Water had to be brought along by rail, and frequently the train service failed to run. The scenes when the overdue train arrived and was besieged by the thirst-crazed horde of Armenians were terrible beyond belief. The Turk however, is an artist in the most appalling methods of torture. The crowds of fainting wretches, men women and children alike, were beat en back by the armed guard. Then before their eyes the taps were turned on, and the precious water from the tanks allowed to run out into the thirsty sand in full view of the thousands dying for want of it.

That is an example of the new Turanian policy, the policy of the Turkish Empire. The question is not one that concerns European nations or belligerents alone; it is one that concerns all civilization.

There must no longer be any question of the continuance of the Ottoman Empire. Turkey must be dismembered and the survivors of her subject races freed. Neither must it be suffered that the Germans, who have condoned, if not inspired, these wholesale murders, should be permitted to exercise their deadly influence upon these bloodthirsty imitators of their methods. Whether Prussia has adopted Turkish methods in Belgium or Turkey has adopted Prussian methods in Armenian, is all one. These things cannot be permitted, and the people who do them cannot hope to escape the customary fate of murderers.

Embarrassing Hairs Can Be Quickly Removed

(Beauty Culture.)

Hairs can be easily banished from the skin by this quick, painless method: Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growths, one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment, buy the delatone in an original package.

Special to The Examiner:

Hanna, Vice-President of the Canadian Northern, said the high cost of operating expenses made it absolutely necessary. E. Dalrymple, Vice-President of the Grand Trunk, endorsed this statement.

NAVAL CAMP INADEQUATE.

Congressman Britten says Chicago Station Lacks Equipment.

CHICAGO, June 12. — "A deplorable lack of equipment," at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station is pointed out by Congressman Fred A. Britten of Chicago, member of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, who to-day set about an investigation of sanitary conditions at the station. As results of his inspection of equipment completed yesterday, Congressman Britten announced the following findings:

Only 800 men out of 8,200 fully equipped. Some lacked blue uniforms; others had no white ones. Many were minus heavy sweaters, underwear and rubber boots.

Two hundred men were without any uniforms whatsoever. They were wearing the garments they arrived in, and had been in camp from two days to two weeks.

Only 2,000 rifles, whereas there should be from 8,000 to 10,000.

A rifle range which will accommodate four men at a time.

A detention camp supposed to accommodate only 300 men holding between 600 and 700 daily.

A kitchen supposed adequately to feed 718 men, with one regular stove and an insufficient cook stove.

A mess of cold frankfurters served on boards across up-ended barrels.

Mr. Britten said he was surprised to find that the Navy Department permitted such conditions while Captain Moffett, commandant of the station, had been frantically calling for money and supplies for many months.

Captain Moffett's statement was added to Mr. Britten's comment.

"We are going ahead and doing the best we can," was all that he had to say. He had been instructed to prepare to care for 20,000 men at the camp, but has not, according to Mr. Britten, received money to purchase extra land needed nor to make other necessary preparations.

A MYSTERIOUS EXCLUSION OF MADMEN.

A despatch from London gives what purport, plausible enough, to be bits of interesting information drawn from the annual report of the asylum at Stettin, Germany. According to the excerpts from this document, this provided, the experiment was made for the first time revealed, of using soldiers the milder cases in the Stettin and other asylums has not been successful. The selected lunatics were willing enough to serve, but "they proved to be an unbearable nuisance in the various armies where they were placed, refusing to obey orders, deserting from their companies, and often becoming vagrants. Hardly any are of real military value, and many have been sent back to their asylums."

So often has the whole German race been called mad, of late and so clear, to non-Germans, has been the evidence that a large majority of them really are the victims of definite illusions, delusions, hallucinations, and obsessions, arranged in the "complexes" and "constellations" so familiar to the psychiatrists, German and others, that one can at least pretend to be surprised at the failure of this effort to fill up the Kaiser's depleted regiments.

Abnormal mentality, however, is what constitutes insanity, and as what the rest of the world calls normality of mind is now exceptional in Germany, it is those elsewhere held sane that one would expect to find shut up, not the others. But opposed to this theory is the fact that each inmate of every asylum is well aware that all his fellow-inmates are mad, including those that share his own vagaries. The problem is a most confusing one.—New York Times.

INDEFINITE SUSPENSION FOR MANAGER M'GRAW

NEW YORK, June 9. — President John K. Tener of the National League announced to-day that he had suspended John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals, for an indefinite period as a result of the latter's attack upon Umpire Byron in Cincinnati yesterday.

The National League Executive telephoned his decision to Secretary Heydler from Philadelphia, where President Tener is engaged in preparing the league's defence in the suit of the Baltimore Federal League club for $900,000 against organized baseball.

FOURTH TIME BYRON HAS ASSAILED GIANT LEADER

CHICAGO, June 10.—Manager McGraw of the New York Nationals was awakened from a sleep to be advised to-day of his suspension, but he declined to make any statement. John B. Foster, Secretary of the New York club, forwarded to President Tener of the National League an affidavit stating that McGraw was justified in knocking Umpire Byron down. The affidavit was signed by McGraw, four members of the club, and some citizens of Cincinnati.

In the affidavit McGraw said he was sorry for the occurrence, but that it was the fourth time Byron had assailed him. He declared he was not the aggressor.

LAWN BOWLING

Last night at the Water Street Alleys the 5-pin league was opened, when the Grocers took two out of three from the West Ends. Cox was high man for the West End with over 450 and also a high single of over 200, and Fitzpatrick was high for the Grocers with over 470 and R. Ross high single with over 200.

The first game was a very close contest with the Grocers winning with a small margin of 2 pins.

A great game is scheduled for tonight, when the Printers clash with the C.G.E. Following are the scores:

WHO SAID THE LAWN BOWLING CLUB WAS DEAD?

Several have thought so, but with these spring days of June, it has sprouted out most encouragingly, and any person who attended the meeting last night would say it is still a very much alive institution.

It has been the privilege of the writer to attend many of the spring organization meetings; and for numbers and enthusiasm there has been nothing, in the past, to equal it.

Some have said that during these war times, the money could be better employed elsewhere. Well there have been people who have said the same thing since the days of "the box of alabaster ointment" down to the present, but the man who works all day, no matter what his avocation may be, can have more healthful enjoyment and for less money than even motoring. And who will say that man does not need such relaxation?

The "green" has come through the winter in splendid shape, and any person desiring to play this year should waste no time in calling up the President, Mr. Brightman, or the Vice-president, Dr. Hammond, or the Secretary, Mr. Walter Oke, so that the rink may be made up and ready to start with the good weather.

BASEBALL IS SURELY MELTING POT, AS SHOWN BY MACKMEN'S LINE-UP

Baseball is called the great national game of the United States, but it surely is a melting pot, as is proved by a glance over the regular line-up of Connie Mack's team. In a recent game Rube Schauer, born in Russia, did the pitching, and Meyer, of Polish descent, was behind the bat. McInnis, at first base, is of Irish descent and of Canadian birth; Grover, at second, is German; Witt, at shortstop, was christened Waldemar Witaki by his Polish parents, and Bates, at third base, is English. In the outfield was Pinelessa Pezzolo, an Italian, who is better known as Ping Bodie; Amos Strunk, of German descent, and Bill Johnson, just "plain United States."

YOUNG MEN ORDAINED AT BAY CONFERENCE

Ordination Sermon Preached by Rev. Dr. W. J. Young of Toronto

FICTON, June 11.—Despite the pouring rain, the First Church was filled yesterday to hear Rev. W. J. Young, D.D., of Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto, preach the conference ordination sermon. George D. Campbell, H. B. Herrington, Harold Stanton and John R. Trumpour were ordained to the work of the Christian Ministry by the President, W. Benjamin Tucker, B. B.D. Dr. Young took for his text: "I speak for Christ and the Church," Ephesians 5: 32. His message was one of power and inspiration. These consecrated men are charged with leadership in the great social and spiritual advances of the times. Many hard problems must be faced; gambling speculators, nestling between the producer and the consumer, winked at by unholy politicians, are humbugging the one and fleecing the other. The Church cannot leave such vital questions to vacillating public men. It is here to exert her gospel powers for their solution. Many things have come to be seen from a new angle of vision since the war began. The new democracy which at once is the hope and the danger of the world must not be left without the inspiration and guidance of the Church, envisioned and empowered by Jesus Christ. Young men such as those ordained to-day are to go forth as pastors of comfort and leaders of men in the stern battles against every form of evil. Ex-presidents and chairmen of districts assisted in the ordination service.

At the Conference evening session on Friday, eight young men, Geo. B. Campbell, J. F. Eyerson, John E. Glover, Albert Chie, James N. Lovelace, Fred J. T. Mains (overseas), Andrew, McLauchlin and Robert Stocker, were received into full connexion with the ministry of the Methodist Church. The resolution for their reception was moved by Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, seconded by Rev. A. L. Brown in well received addresses. The former emphasized two things: First, the prime duty of a minister is to his pulpit, the clean, forceful proclamation of the truth of the gospel; second, manhood in service.

The second speaker dealt forcefully with the anxieties clustering about life's choices, the demand for the office of the work to-day and the superlative joys of the serving of men. President W. B. Tucker then delivered the charge to those just received by vote of the ministerial session. A resolution was introduced through a delegation of laymen representing the Belleville and Brighton and Campbellford districts, proposing a camp meeting to be held for at least four weeks in July and August, at Oak Heights Lake, near Stirling. The proposition was well received by the Conference, and after thorough discussion, was heartily endorsed by that body. The movement will be under control of Conference without the Conference assuming any financial responsibility. This will rest with the executive and the promoters. Dr. Yeomans, of Belleville, leads this work along with other laymen of that vicinity. The following were elected as members of the Board of Examiners: Richard Bamforth, S. C. Moore, S. J. Terrill, H. W. Foley, A. M. Irwin, I. G. Lewis, I. N. Clarty, W. S. P. Boyce, M. E. Sexsmith, H. S. Spence, F. W. White.

Voice of The People

Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I don't want to make the music loving people of Peterborough feel too bad, but I should like a line or two to tell them what they missed by not being at the Conservatory Hall last night to hear the playing of the really great violin artist, Isolde Menges. There was a very thin house, but the air was thick with splendid music. It is doubtful if any violinist, male or female, has ever visited Peterborough that was a greater violinist than Miss Menges. I need not detail her numbers, which varied from the majestic opening piece, Handel's Sonata in E major to the concluding number, Weiniawski's pyrotechnic Souvenir de Moscow. In all these the artist showed intense feeling of interpretation, joined to a wonderful technical skill, so great as to seem easy and natural. Her tone is broad, full, round and rich, pure in every place, and especially appealing and rich in andante passages. Her double stopping in the Mendelssohn "stuck" was a wonderful treat of majestic melody and harmony. She took the allegro at a furious tempo but every note was clean cut and distinct. In her pianissimo passages, she showed marvellous delicacy, and refinement suggesting Moore's line, "the faint exquisite music of a dream." Her tours de force were heroic, the tones strong without being strident, always musical. The audience appreciated the music very highly. Miss Mengis was repeatedly recalled, responding twice only, however, with the beautiful Beethoven's Minuet and Schubert's "Moments Musical." Miss Menges' wonderful work is helped by her equipment, with a magnificent, genuine Strad. Her manager was not satisfied with the attendance and announced a return date for Menges Wednesday evening, June 20, with an entire change of programme. I hope I shall then meet a large gathering of citizens, for I wouldn't miss a treat similar to that of last night for anything, for the opportunity to hear one of the greatest living violin artists is too good to be missed.

Yours truly,
ALLEGRO.

Monaghan Council Agrees To Bear Share of Grading Boundary

Ald. Weir and City Engineer Parsons waited on the North Monaghan Council last night with regard to grading the Boundary Road from Charlotte Street south to enable the Street Railway Company to extend their "blue" line south to Patterson Street or Byersville.

The Council showed itself willing to assist the city in any way possible and as soon as it is desired to commence work. The sooner it is begun the better from the township's standpoint. The Street Railway desires to extend the Charlotte Street line to Patterson Street, and even to Byersville, on Monaghan Road, if their supply of steel will permit. The two municipalities agreed to grade and gravel the road as far south as the C.P.R., reducing the hills and filling in some of the hollows that now exist.

It was left to the city to do the work and the township will pay its share. The township agreed to deliver gravel to the road, especially if the work is undertaken immediately while teams are available.

Hence, it now remains for the Street Railway Co. to declare their readiness to proceed with the laying of ties and rails, and the city will grade and gravel the street as the work progresses. The company will pay the cost of grading the eight-foot strip on which their roadbed will be constructed.

Toronto Report Confirms Dr. Johnston's Diagnosis of Rabies

Dr. Ames, M.O.H., received word from Toronto this morning that the Pemberton dog had rabies, thus confirming the diagnosis made by Dr. Johnston. Following this official report, Miss Doris Pemberton, who was bitten by the animal last Thursday, will take the pasteur treatment in Toronto.

This case should warn the owners of valuable dogs that they should keep them locked up until all danger of contracting the disease has disappeared. In regard to the enforcement of the city's by-law the police can bring actions against persons whom they know have permitted their dogs to run the streets unmuzzled and unleashed, but no provision has been made for the catching of wandering and homeless dogs. It is hoped that the lax enforcement of the by-law which seems to content the Council will not be followed by any serious consequences that are evidently more than possible. In any case this responsibility is regarded as resting with the Council, although the members seem to be unaware of that fact.

WIRE WORM APPEARS.

Whole Field of Corn at Cainsville Has to be Destroyed.

Brantford, June 8.—The wire worm has made its appearance at Cainsville. The little pests were discovered among the early corn, approximately twenty-five to a hill, and the entire field will have to be destroyed. R. Schuyler, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, will be notified.

COUNCILLORS TOO BUSY FOR THE OTTAWA TRIP.

Monaghan's Men Will Not Be Able to Go With Deputation.

The Mayor requested that the North Monaghan Council send a member with the deputation to Ottawa on Friday for the purpose of urging the Government to open the canal. The members are all too busily engaged in the greater production campaign to absent themselves from their farm and garden work during the time required to make the trip to the capital.

KILTIES SECURE MANY RECRUITS IN BOSTON CAMPAIGN

BOSTON, Mass. — In the days of '76 a British officer would not have stepped on the Common and urged Americans to join the American army nor would an American officer have displayed a similar courtesy to England. But that was long, long ago, and yesterday this miracle took place for Col. Frank McCoy, U.S.A., and Col. P. A. Guthrie, of the New Brunswick Kiltie Battalion, which is recruiting in this city, started a double barrelled drive against the Kaiser.

The Kilties arrived at the City Hall shortly before noon with the regimental band.

Mayor Curley was on hand, as usual, and welcomed the Kilties to Boston. later conferring with the Canadian officers. Col. Guthrie, Capt. Goodenrath and Capt. Black, regarding the programme for the next four days.

From the city hall the band, accompanied by Admiral Bowles, of the Boston Committee on Public Safety, marched to the State House, and when Governor McCall took his place on the front steps the pipers gave him a serenade. The Governor later thanked the Kilties for their visit, and referred to the friendliness which existed between the United States and Canada, pointing out that despite a border of 3,800 miles, it was not necessary to patrol it with militia.

Then the band marched to the Common, and Col. Guthrie, mounting the rostrum usually occupied by Col. McCoy, addressed the crowd, after Rustum Rustomjee, the first speaker, had concluded his remarks.

Mayor Curley also addressed the crowd and he left no doubt in the minds of his audience as to what he regarded as the duties of citizenship — particularly British citizenship. He expounded the idea that Britons should enter the service of their country or else become naturalized Americans, and take their place on the battlefield under the Stars and Stripes.

Later, Captain Black called upon every Briton in the crowd to take off his hat and perhaps twenty persons complied. Then he shouted:

"I want every man who took off his hat to come up to the stand. We want every one of them. We take 'em up to 45 we take 'em single, and we take 'em married. Come on. Get into the best paid and the biggest army in the world. Your wives and children will be taken care off by the English government."

A little thrill ran through the crowd as the Britons began to fight their way through the dense mass to the rostrum. A dozen were there in a minute and as the pipers knocked off down to Scollay square the rookies fell in alongside. It was announced that the band will play on the Common every noon during its stay here.

The squad of recruits were marching along when suddenly there rang out a sharp order: "Halt!" At once the soldiers came to a stop. The officer in command glared around angrily. "Who have that order?" he snapped.

"Potts, sir!" came half a dozen voices in reply, and all eyes were turned towards the offender.

"You, Jotts, or whatever your name is, sir," roared the infuriated officer, 'what do you mean by giving orders?"

"Well, sir," replied Potts calmly, "I've been trying hard to get the rest of the company to keep step with me and they couldn't, so I thought I'd just stop them and start 'em over again!"

British Advance Along A Two Mile Front

Campaign Will Begin At Once To Round Up All Slackers

All Men Who Did Not Enroll To Be Arrested — Provost Marshal Orders Vigorous Measures Against the Slackers — Army Quotas Will Be Based on Census Estimates and Not on Registration Figures!

TEXT OF THE ORDER

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 13.—Slackers who have failed to register may find themselves in jail to-day under an order issued by Brigadier-General Crowder, provost marshal general. The order was issued several days ago, but was not made public until yesterday.

The order calls for the arrest of every man between the ages of twenty-one and thirty, inclusive, who after nine o'clock last night could not show a certificate of registration for war service.

General Crowder telegraphed the order to all registration boards in the United States. After saying that every person who has failed to register is increasing the burden of those who have registered, by reason of the failure of the registration to equal the census estimate, he called upon those who have complied with the law to assist in bringing in the slackers.

Registration officers were instructed to start a vigorous campaign to enforce the penal provisions of the law and to arrest every man who cannot show a registration card.

TEXT OF THE ORDER.

Here is the text of the order:—

"Quotas are to be assigned to the several States in proportion to the population as determined by the Bureau of the Census and not in proportion to the registration. The result is that every person who has failed to register is seriously increasing the burden of those who have registered.

"It is requested that every effort be now made to detect and arrest persons subject to registration who have not registered and to bring each promptly to the attention of the nearest representative of the Department of Justice. Care should be taken that the lists prescribed in paragraph 89 are promply posted and all registrants should be asked to assist in bringing non-registrants to the attention of the police. In case of doubt as to the age of persons who have not registered, the tabulated record of political organizations and other local records should be consulted and data may be obtained from the Bureau of the Census.

ENFORCEMENT OF PENAL CLAUSE.

"The purpose of this telegram is to inaugurate from to-day a vigorous, aggressive and effective enforcement of the penal clause of the selective service law against all who have by their failure or refusal to register, brought themselves under those provisions.

"The Department of Justice is sending similar advices to United States attorneys and marshals with instructions to release on their own recognizance all persons arrested by marshals and deputy marshals or by State, county or municipal police officers and turned over to them who promptly register under the terms of paragraph 40, registration regulations."

Five more States filed their reports Monday in the office of the provost marshal general, with an aggregate registration of 879,469, as compared with the census estimate of 889,220.

It was the first day on which the registration had exceeded the estimate, and was due to the fact that the figures in Ohio were:—Registered, 505,284; estimate, 488,906, and those from New Hampshire, registered, 37,642; estimate, 36,579.

RETURNS ON REGISTRATION.

The official returns on registration are:—

Number of States, including the District of Columbia, heard from to date, 35.

Total registration, 6,712,638.

Total estimate 7,396,314.

Percentage of registration, 90 plus.

With only fourteen more States to be heard from, officials expect there will be approximately nine million men enrolled from whom to select the new army, or one million fewer than the Census Bureau estimate.

CATTLE MARKET WAS VERY SLOW

Prices Were Barely Steady at Monday's Decline

Union Stock Yards, June 12.— Receipts, 43 cars, with 691 cattle, 208 calves, 616 hogs, and 31 sheep and lambs.

The cattle trade was very slow again to-day, with prices barely steady at yesterday's decline of from 35 to 50c. from last year's prices. One or two stale loads of choice quality sold at a little lower than bid for yesterday. The run was very light. Calf trade strong. Sheep and lambs weak. Hogs steady at the decline to $15.50.

GRAIN DEALERS' QUOTATIONS.

Tone of the wheat and coarse grain markets to-day weak and lower. Winnipeg October option was very erratic, going up to $2.19 1-2 from yesterday's close at $2.15, but later sliding down again, and closing 2c. below yesterday. Chicago July option also closed 5c. below yesterday's close. Receipts of wheat in Great Britain are increasing, and there are large shipments afloat. Crop estimates are also showing large increases above former estimates. All these factors tended to lower prices for the distant options. Corn was also weaker. Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

500 BELGIANS STARVE.

Refused to Work When Interned in German Camp.

Special to The Examiner:

HAVRE, France, June 13. — The death by starvation within three months of 500 interned Belgians in Germany is reported in a semi-official statement given out here.

"According to information received by the Belgian Ministry of War," the statement says, "Belgian civilians interned in a German camp near Luebeck refused to work. Out of 2,000 interned, 500 died of starvation in three months. The condition of the survivors is described as pitiful."

MAKING IT PLAIN.

A common mistake which some people continue to make is to accept from a druggist an "extract" of cod *liver*s thinking they will get the benefits of an emulsion of cod liver oil.

The difference is very great. An "emulsion" contains real cod liver oil, which has had the hearty endorsement of the medical profession for many years, while an "extract" is a product which contains no oil and is highly alcoholic.

Scott's Emulsion is the standard emulsion of the world. It guarantees the highest grade of real cod liver oil, skilfully blended with glycerine and hypophosphites, and is endorsed by good physicians everywhere.

Win-the-War Convention Resolutions Are Laid Before the Premier —Union Cabinet Is Demanded

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 13.—Conscription of wealth has been urged upon Premier Borden from a new source. It is understood that delegates from the Win-the-War Convention who waited on him yesterday put squarely before him the necessity of taking money as well as men and administering the country under a strong union Government.

"It was a private meeting and satisfactory," was all that the delegates would say.

Messrs. John Godfrey, Arnold Jarvis, and J. G. O'Donoghue are the Toronto representatives, and Mr. Allan Schofield is here from Amherst.

The latter will call a meeting of Win-the-War delegates from the Maritime Provinces at an early date to organize a series of meetings to educate the public on conscription.

The Ontario branch will hold a similar meeting at Toronto on Thursday to arrange for gatherings throughout this Province. Mr. Arthur Hawkes is in Montreal, where he is arranging for Quebec's co-operation.

SUBMARINE HUNTER OF GREAT SPEED

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, JUNE 12.—A new American submarine hunter, which has just arrived at a French port and created a sensation, because of its radical departure from preconceived ideas of shipbuilding, was described by Le Journal to-day.

The vessel, it was stated, is nearly 100 feet long, is propelled by gasoline, and is capable of the enormous speed of thirty knots. By a special arrangement the submarine hunter's fuel supply is replenishable at sea, long tubes connecting with a ship's reservoirs. The armament which this formidable vessel carries is declared to permit the most rapid offensive power by long range guns. She is equipped with the latest type of listening instruments and when not under navigation, is capable of long submergence in the water.

Le Journal declared that within a few months there would be several hundred of these vessels in active service.

Rheumatism Entirely Gone

AFTER TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS OF SUFFERING—SWELLING AND PUFFING HAS DISAPPEARED—NOT A PLAIN OR AN ACHE LEFT.

KINCARDINE, Ont., May 30.—A most astonishing cure of rheumatism and eczema has been reported here, and Mrs. Ray is enthusiastic in telling her many friends how the cure was effected.

Rheumatism and eczema frequently go together and in this case caused the most keen distress imaginable. All the swelling and puffiness resulting from many years of rheumatism have disappeared, and there is not a pain or an ache left.

Mr. G. H. Ray, R. R. No. 1, Kincardine, Ont., writes: "Mrs. Ray has been using your Kidney-Liver Pills. She was very bad with rheumatism and eczema, and had had that fearful itch for twenty-seven years. It was simply terrible what she suffered. I persuaded her to try $1 worth of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills; she is now on the last box, and let me tell you she scarcely knows herself, she is so free from both of these diseases. All the swelling and puffiness caused by the rheumatism has gone away, and she has gone down in weight 18 1-2 pounds. She never has an ache nor pain, biliousness nor sick headache all these months. She often says herself 'How glad I am that I know what to do instead of paying know what to do instead of paying doctors so much to make me worse.'"

There is only one way that the poisons in the blood can be cleaned away and the cause of pains and aches removed, and that is by the healthful action of the kidneys, liver and bowels. Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills act directly and specifically on these organs and ensure their activity they remove the cause of rheumatism and other dreadfully painful and fatal diseases. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, of Toronto.

Nobility Stops Eating Spuds; Left To Poor

BY LADY MARY.

LONDON.—(Special.)—To American ears, at any rate, it must sound almost a satire when I mention that a person named Mrs. Millie Rockefeller was summoned at the Thames police court for paying more than the specified price for potatoes. This, according to law, at the time was a penny-half penny a pound. Mrs. Rockefeller only wanted to buy two pounds of potatoes, but the green grocer to whom she made this modest appeal said she could not have any. After subsequent conversation he intimated that she could buy a sack for 15 shillings, or, roughly speaking, $3.75.

Mrs. Rockefeller, being a woman with a speculative nature such as might be expected from one of her name, closed with the bargain and thereby both she and the green-grocer fell into the jaws of the law. The making of the "deal" was overheard by a police officer, and the result was that Mrs. Millie Rockefeller was fined £1, or about $5, for her extravagant and illegal transaction, while the green-grocer had to pay half that sum for selling the precious potatoes at above their market value.

Personally, I am only just now beginning to realise the value of a potato as applied to the national menu of the moment. For myself, I never eat potatoes. I was once told that they had a fattening, therefore a deleterious, effect upon the figure. From the day that I heard this rumor, true or untrue, I struck them off my daily menu.

ROYALTY "OFF" POTATOES

Therefore the present excitement that has been occasioned throughout Great Britain concerning potatoes has come a as considerable surprise to me. Duchesses and other ladies of high degree are entirely abjuring the use of potatoes so that their less fortunate sisters may have a larger share to dole out to their clamouring families, and I also learn that these self-sacrificing ladies are regarded almost as martyrs for so doing. It seems that the total of war time endeavour is thus increasing and that national service can include under its heading those who refrain from eating potatoes, boiled, baked, fried or saute.

The reason of the need for potatoes among the poorer classes was brought home to me very vividly, however, the other day when I was talking to a woman who does "odd jobs" in the way of scrubbing and cleaning at various houses. She has a large family of small children and when I inquired why she looked so anxious and worried she told me it was because she could not get any potatoes. "But can't you manage without potatoes?" I asked. I was told that was impossible. Under normal conditions she cooked in some way every day nine or ten pounds of potatoes, which, mixed with gravy and a very small quantity of meat, made excellent food for hungry children.

RICE DOESN'T SATISFY.

"I am sure I don't know what I am going to do now, though," she told me. "For sometimes I can't get any potatoes at all, and other days not more than two or three pounds. Rice and other vegetables don't seem to satisfy children the way potatoes do and so I've go to buy more meat when I can afford it, which means three or four times the outlay that I usually expect for my week's housekeeping." Evidently the duchesses and dames of high degree and those of lesser station who eliminate the potato from their daily menu are doing quite a good turn to poor people, so, after all, they deserve thanks and encouragement.

Have you ever been in a densely crowded place with a multitude of men and women engaged in saying good-by to each other? The most accentuated noise above the movement of the crowd is the sound of kissing. The other evening I went to Victoria station, one of the great London termini, to see a couple of young officers off to a regiment stationed in the southeast of England.

It was one of those nights when a special number of troops are being sent through to various depots, and I should think there must have been several thousand people closely packed within the outer limits of the big station. Every man in khaki had one and sometimes three people, chiefly women, to see him off, and they were all saying good-by with that thoroughness to which we have become accustomed in London during war time.

NOTHING BUT KISSES.

As the time approached for the departure of each train the sound of kissing seemed to positively permeate the atmosphere. I have never heard kissing carried on at such a wholesale rate before in my life.

It had, of course, its comic side, for there were many perfunctory salutes, a large number of obligatory ones, and many that were just stolen for the fun of the thing. But then there was the tragedy of it, and really the little human dramas that were played out in that seething multitude in the atmosphere of khaki and in the uncertainty of the future were things that could have inspired a novelist or a poet into realms quite beyond the ordinary clap-trap of sentimentality.

It was not specially the tragedy of the young—the girls who clung to boys and kissed with that hearty abandon that knows no shame and very little restraint—but it was the kisses of the aged, the old mothers and fathers who only saw youth through the eyes of the sons in whose strength and valor they took pride. It was these old people fighting against the stream of humanity in all the flood tide of its power and its triumphant youth that seemed so sad. They were left behind, unable to do anything in the huge volume that is now being written by men who each supply their page of enthusiasm and individuality to every chapter of the world's great history under course of construction.

OLD AGE'S KISS.

Their kisses, oddly enough seemed more noisy—one heard them above the softer sounds of youthful lips that met and parted. It cannot be that the fashion of kissing is changed, but these men and women of an older generation gave a strange effect of substantiality to their caresses that added to the weird mental picture one was able to secure. Long after I had left the station the strange sound of those myriad kisses echoed and echoed in my mind until they became almost actualities. The kiss of Youth and Hope, the kiss of Old Age and Resignation.

London is a queer place, and I seem to have wandered from my usual consideration of London and its West End elegancies to a more or less fleeting vision of its humbler quarters. This was why, perhaps, I became interested in hearing at a police court of a man who was charged with begging and who confessed to being an alien and who, according to his own admission, declared he did not know there was a war taking place.

DIDN'T KNOW OF WAR.

This extraordinary individual answered to the name of Kenrick Naunheim. He had forgotten where he was born, but imagined it was some place in Germany, and he gained his daily bread, if such it can be called, by begging. He could neither read nor write and took no interest in anything except his food and a place where he could sleep at night.

It is possible to see such amazing types among the submerged tenth in London that probably this creature is not so rare a bird as one might think, but even as a type it seems strange to imagine a human being in England who has not heard of the war.

DUTCH SPLIT FOOD EXPORTS

Now Divide Between Allies and Teutons on the Before-the-War Ratio.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands,—"Every consignment of Dutch cattle exported to Germany costs the lives of sons of France," recently declared a French writer. "The British blockade of Germany is still being evaded by the weakness of the Foreign Office's policy," constantly reiterate some London papers.

A Dutch authority states that, while the vast transit trade over Holland into Germany has long since been cut off by the British fleet, with the exception of insignificant quantities of goods smuggled across the frontiers, Germany is still obtaining considerable supplies of needed goods from Holland, the produce of Dutch farms and market gardens, butter, cheese, eggs, milk, vegetables, meat, bacon, and the like, as well as fish, but a radical alteration has been brought about in the division of the country's surplus products.

Up to the middle of last year the high prices offered by Germany and Austria were drawing the bulk of Holland's surplus produce over her eastern frontier, and trade with Britain had fallen almost to the vanishing point.

Holland was running a great risk of losing its old British customers permanently, and it became evident that the country's oversea supplies of fodder grain might be cut off if these continued to be merely converted into food for Germany.

The result was a decision to divide the country's surplus food between the Entente Allies and the Central Powers in the same proportion as before the war and an Agricultural Export Bureau was established to control that task.

Under an agreement with the semi official British and General Trading Association, it has been despatching for months certain fixed proportions of foodstuffs to the British Relief Commission, while the rest goes to the German Trade Trust by the medium of the Central Purchasing Co., which monopolizes the import of virtually all foodstuffs into Germany. What part of these latter goods going eastward reach Austria is not known.

Of butter, one-fourth goes to Britain and three-quarters to Germany, of cheese, a third to Great Britain, and the rest to Germany; bacon, pork and other meat, half to each; vegetables, a quarter to Great Britain and three-quarters to Germany; milk, three-quarters to Britain and a quarter to Germany; potatoes and potato flour, half to each; eggs, up to a quarter to Britain and the rest to Germany. No arrangement has yet been come to regard to the sugar crop, but probably half will go each way.

Despite ruthless submarining, the exports to Britain are proceeding as usual. Incidentaly, the Dutch hit upon a way to discourage the taking of their boats to Zeebrugge by German naval forces. Any England-bound food cargoes, so captured, are reckoned as if they had been exported over Holland's eastern frontier, and the direct exports to Germany reduced proportionately.

What is the best method of keeping household accounts?

The simplest way is by the envelope system. Envelopes are marked and the apportioned sum placed inside. When money is taken, the date and amount should be recorded on a slip of paper and placed within. The account should be balanced weekly or monthly. If any money is borrowed from one envelope for another, careful record should be kept of it.

The card system is well liked by some persons. In using cards the headings may be the same as those used in a book. Each month the total expenditures should be transferred to a card reserved for monthly totals.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE BACHELORS' CLUB

There Was a Penalty For Marriage

By RICHARD MARKLEY

The Bachelors' club was an association of men who regarded themselves as being especially happy in not having wife, child or home and who looked upon women as designing persons who made it their business to enslave men, usually by some underhanded means altogether reprehensible.

The Bachelors' club came to order, the president in the chair.

"Fellow bachelors," he said, "one of our number has committed matrimony. Edward Hammerton has taken to himself a wife. I will read article 7 of our constitution, applying to his case:

"When any member shall become engaged or has been married he shall pay a fine and his membership in the club shall cease. He shall state the arts by which he was snared. If there are palliating circumstances in his case he shall not pay the whole fine, but such portion of it as the club may consider a just amount in his case.

"Mr. Hammerton will now make his statement."

"I assure you, gentlemen," said the retiring member, "that no intention whatever to desert you ever entered my head until a diabolical combination of young women in the town where I live forced matrimony upon me. These persons organized a club based on a custom prevailing in a foreign land. Between the mountains of India and Persia, I have since understood, is a powerful tribe, among whom the ladies can choose their own husbands. All a single woman has to do when she wishes to change her state is to send a servant to pin a handkerchief to the hat of the man on whom her fancy lights, and he is obliged to marry her unless he can show that he is too poor to purchase her at the price her father requires.

"Inspired by this suggestion from a land where secret venomous methods underlie all social conditions, every unmarried woman in the town where I live formed a club—rather, entered upon a conspiracy—to force the bachelors into matrimony. One morning, being about to leave my home, on taking my hat from the hall closet something soft and scented fluttered against my hand. I shuddered. I had touched the Indian poison flower and was reminded of its waxen petals and its seductive odor. Taking the hat to the light, I saw pinned to it a blue silk handkerchief in one corner of which was embroidered my monogram in white silk thread. Observe, gentlemen, the insinuating method of this designing creature. She not only knew how dear to every man is his alma mater, but she was aware that blue is the color of my college.

"Mind you, gentlemen, I did not at the time know of this society or of its malevolent purpose, for the members kept both secret so long as possible. I asked my butler how the handkerchief came to be pinned to my hat. He said that the servant of Miss Eugenia Tomlinson, living at the other end of the street, had called before I was out of bed, asked for my hat and attached the handkerchief. Why he had done so he did not state.

"Going to my club after I had breakfasted, I sat down to a cigar and a paper. In the paper I read a full account of the organization and practices of this pestilent Indian plant that had been imported to our soil. I also read a list of the bachelor heads that had already fallen and was aghast to see the names of two of my most intimate friends.

"'Great heavens,' I cried, the perspiration starting out on me, 'and I have already received a deadly Black Hand notification!'

"The lady who had thus marked me for matrimonial misery, both from her beauty and general attractiveness, was all powerful. Any man on whom she pinned the skull and crossbones must walk the plank. There was no hope for him. Nevertheless, though seeing the signal to heave to, I made up my mind to pay no attention to it. I simply sailed on, minding my own business."

"Why didn't you take to an aeroplane?" a member interrupted.

"Rats!" "Buncombe!" "Brave boy!" and the like greeted the speaker.

"One week after the receipt of the signal," he continued, "the period given blacklisted bachelors by this club, I met one of my most respected women friends on the street. She cut me dead. The same day I met several others and received the cut direct from all. Here was, indeed, a boycott. You must remember, gentlemen, that, although we do not wish to surrender our independence to these creatures, to be ostracized by them is a serious matter. In time I was cut by every unmarried woman in town. Besides, the most attractive married women were honorary members of the club and joined the boycott.

"And then, gentlemen, appeared the most alluring feature of this malignant scheme. Last of all my feminine acquaintances I met the girl into whose toils it was intended that I should fall. A seductive blush overspread her features, a bewildering smile parted her vermilion lips and showed two rows of pearls beneath, then a modest dropping of the eyes. These women who had united to assist in snaring me were all denying me the benefit of their society for the purpose of driving me, like an innocent bird, into the opening of the net intended for me."

At this point in the speech there were groans and cries of "Poor boy!" "Innocent bird!" "Where's his mother!" "He's going to cry!" and the like.

"Here, fel—I was going to say fellow bachelors; alas, I can call you such no longer!—I took that first step which leads to the final, inevitable fall. I turned and joined her. Like the inebriate who sips the first glass of wine that he knows will drag him down to his ruin, I submitted myself to a presence which I knew would steal away my brains. I might as well have swallowed laudanum."

"Run for a stomach pump!"

"Walk him!"

"Pour water down his throat!"

These and other such calls came from the unsympathetic members of the club. The benedict continued his confession:

"My intention, gentlemen, in joining her—so I persuaded myself; 'whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad'—was to say something to her to cause her to desist in her intention to enslave me. I began in this wise: 'If my circumstances were such as to enable me to marry I should esteem myself honored beyond measure in being invited by a lady in every way so calculated to inspire my esteem. But my income, only $10,000 a year, is barely enough for my own'—

Cries of "Dead give away!" "Selfish brute!" "I'll bet she's going to cry!"

"Who said cry? asked the confessor, surprised.

"I did,' replied the homeliest member. "That's exactly what she did."

"I knew it," said the homeliest member. "A member of the club told me in confidence that certain instructions are laid down for the girls, the principal of which is to cry."

The confessor groaned and went on:

"We were walking toward the girl's home and at this point reached her door. She burst into a passion of tears and ran into the house, shutting the door behind her.

"I stood looking vaguely about me, not knowing just what to do. I wished a policeman would come along and run me in. I had an undefined sense of having committed a crime. It seemed to me that I had plunged a dagger into the heart of the girl who had left me. I went to my club, lighted a cigar, smoked it two minutes and threw it away. I went into the billiard room, knocked the balls about for two minutes more, threw down my cue and, shoving my hands in my pockets, walked up and down in the hallway. Several of my friends came in, but somehow I wanted to get rid of them. They all wanted to know what was the matter with me. One of them pestered me, telling me about some liver pills he had used with great effect.

"I dined at the club with another. I surprised him by ordering my dessert immediately after the soup and undertook to carve a bird in cross sections. You see, the poison had entered my blood and was crawling through the veins to the heart. When the dinner was over I told my friend I was sick and was going home to bed. I lied. I had never before told a deliberate lie. You see, the effect of this Indian flower with its noxious but ecstatic perfume, Facilis descensus Averni, which, being interpreted, means, 'When a man makes a false step the descent into iniquity is easy.'

"When one has committed a crime he feels an irresistible desire to visit the spot where it was enacted. The spot where my crime had been perpetrated was a few steps from the home of the girl who had inoculated me. I went there. I was possessed with a desire to apologize for a sin I hadn't committed. I rang the bell, went into the house and sent up my card."

"Gone up!" cried a voice.

"He'll never go there any more," said another.

"Gentlemen," continued the confessor, "I sat with wildly beating heart in the drawing room till I heard a rustle of skirts and a tap of a tiny heel on the staircase. A moment later there in the doorway stood—what shall I call it?—a vision of loveliness, a dream.

"Gentlemen, I have finished."

"Go on!" "Don't I wish I'd had one like that!" "Peaches and cream are nothing to it!" and other such indelicate, or, at least, irreverent, cries filled the room. The president rapped for order.

"Fellow bachelors," he said, "we have all listened to the confession of our unfortunate ex-member, and I know there is not one of us who has not listened with exuberant sympathy. Expressions of opinion as to the amount of the fine he shall pay are now in order. You are aware that the amount lies between $100 and $500."

"I move," cried a voice, "that on account of the united pressure brought to bear and the boycott (unusual circumstances) the fine be remitted entirely."

"And I move," said another, "that the fine be doubled. It's my opinion that our ex-brother was a willing victim."

"And I move," said the homeliest man, "that the ladies of this city be invited to organize one of these Indian prison societies right here among us."

At this there were groans and cries of "Put him out!" "Renegade!" "He's been infected!" under which the homeliest man tried to hide.

The president arose.

"Gentlemen," he said, "since it is left with me to name the fine, I will say that I agree with our fellow member who says that the circumstances in this case are unusual, and I will remit the fine altogether."

The confessor arose for a last word.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I insist on paying a double fine. My descent into Avernus is worth a hundred times the amount."

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

HOW GIRL SAVED HER LIFE.

When Mary Field's shawl caught fire while she was cooking supper on the second floor of 652 North Eighth street, Philadelphia, she had the presence of mind to jump in a bathful of water which had been drawn for another member of the family, but she forgot to duck her head under the surface and her hair was burned off. She was taken to the Roosevelt hospital and treated for serious burns about the face and body.

Rabbits To Make English Dinner

It has been suggested by the Food Controller that more use should be made of the wild animals and birds which abound in the country, says a writer in the London Mail. Rabbits, wood pigeons and sparrows have been specially mentioned.

All three are a plague in the country to-day, and to make a systematic raid on them for food purposes would serve two useful ends. Rabbits are eaten chiefly between harvest time and the end of March, but they drift to the kitchen at all seasons. By systematic snaring or trapping great numbers could be available as a regular supply for the people of a district or for despatch to the towns.

Wood pigeons as well as rabbits were recommended by the Board of Agriculture soon after the outbreak of war as forming "an excellent meat diet." Wood pigeons, or ring doves, abound in all wooded districts in autumn, winter and early spring, but they are exceedingly difficult birds to bring down in any manner owing to their extreme cunning. It is only by well devised, concerted shoots extending over a wide area that a supply of pigeons can be obtained. Through lack of men able to take part in such shoots no appreciable difference has been made in the number of wood pigeons during the war. For the table they are cooked as a rule in a pie with a few pieces of beef or salt pork.

Sparrows are often eaten by country persons. They are captured easily in fine mesh nets stretched over the ground and baited with grain, or in nets hung at night around their roosting places in ricks, hedges and ivy clad walls. Also, the ground can be baited and a crowd of feeding sparrows laid low with a gun, using fine shot for the purpose.

One Franc Is Reward For Lost Rifles

(By A. E. Decker.)

PARIS, France. — Early in the year French troops were short of rifles. Many had been worn out in the service and many had been captured by the enemy in the battles of Charleroi, the retreat in Belgium, the battle of the Marne and along the Yser.

In the effort to make up for the lack of rifles by repairing French and German rifles left on the battlefield 1 franc (19 cents) was promised to the troops for every rifle deposited in the division headquarters. This reward brought a strange and unexpected result.

At Verdun, after the French advance the ground churned up by the projectiles contained quantities of rifles in all conditions. Immediately the soldiers heard of the reward they swarmed over the hills and ravines, and in spite of the enemy's shells, collected every stock and barrel. Soon muddy soldiers were coming from all directions, staggering under backloads of equally muddy rifles. Others had as many as fifteen. In a few days, however, the battle field was pretty well cleaned. Rifles became scarce. But the soldiers had acquired the habit; they kept finding rifles in the most unheard of places and after a walk of several kilometers they deposited their find at division headquarters, receiving in exchange the coveted franc for each.

Money easily earned quickly flies. So when a group of soldiers went along shouting boisterously and more or less under the influence of "pinard," their comrades said: "Here comes some rifle sellers."

Finally rifles became scarce and began to disappear from under the noses of their owners. Even the very first line trenches were not sacred to the "shopping parties." Of course, the soldier who had his rifle stolen had to go shopping likewise, for he didn't dare to be without a rifle. "Shopping" is the recognized way of keeping one's equipment complete. Everyone does it; it is the rule in this turbulent place, where everyone is dependent upon himself, yet also so dependent upon his neighbor.

One company at inspection reported ten rifles stolen. Things came to such a pass that a soldier could not stir a foot without his rifle; nor would he leave it and his best friend alone in a dugout. The "poilu" and his rifle became inseparable.

Machine guns were added to the prize list, with a reward of seven days' leave, and what would not a soldier do for permission to be home seven days! Then trouble really began. Some machine guns were found in the shell holes, but this source of supply soon gave out. Adventurous spirits turned their attention to the reserves and even to guns mounted in the rear defenses. After two or three days, in a water filled shell hole, the newest and best kept gun looked badly scarred and ready for the repair shop.

A rigid inspection has now made "gun shopping" less profitable to the oversealous.

HAD INDIGESTION
COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitated feeling in it.

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lasare Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that bad I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B., has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles.

Do You Like Horehound?

Your grandfather did in the bygone days, when he was a little boy and his father did not mind how much he had, for it was considered "good for his system."

In Egypt the plant was called "bull's blood" and "eye of a star" and was one of those many plants that in those days were eaten to protect the person from poison.

Horehound, horseradish, coriander, lettuce and nettle are the five bitter herbs ordered to be eaten by the Jews at the feast of the Passover, and this first has had long service, as you can guess, for it is the seed of Horus—horehound—which the Egyptian priests dedicated to the god of that name, though nobody knows how it came to get the ending "bound."—Exchange.

BLUECOAT KIDNAPS BABY IZZY FOOTMAN

This is the veracious narative of the baby "kidnapped" by the police of the Brownsville station and sent to the city nursery at the Kings County Hospital, according to the Brooklyn Eagle.

The stirring adventures of Izzy Footman, of 412 Rockaway avenue began when his mother, Mrs. Celia Footman, wheeled him down to a friend's home at 163 Shuter avenue, and put him and his private car in the hallway. Isidore slept and Shuter avenue was at peace.

While Mrs. Footman was with her friend retailing such small gossip as interest women along came a bad, bad small boy and wheeled Izzy out into the street, where he left him in front of 167. The motion awoke Izzy, who, when he saw himself in the hands of a stranger, made a mouth like the opening of the new Clark street tunnel and roared through it like a sea captain. The boy fled.

Izzy looked about on the inhospitable housefronts, the wide, deserted streets, and let out a few extra blasts. No mother appeared on the horizon and huter avenue and he had nothing in common.

"Buffering herring!" exclaimed Policeman Rugge, of the Brownsville station as he caught the wail afar. 'Me to the relief of Lucknow. Someone has abandoned a kid."

So Rugge wheeled Izzy to the Brownsville station, showing it his whistle on the way and sticking a finger at it in the old "Here comes mommey" style, but Isadore still continued to howl loud enough to awaken the Seven Sleepers.

In the back room Rugge wheeled and stuck Isadore over in the corner. There was a phonograph there and the policeman decided to give him a tune to quiet him. So they put "Cavaleria Rusticana" on and then a Caruso record, but Isadore's notes rose high above those of the flute-like tenor.

Upstairs the slumbering "cops" awoke and sat up in bed with wild looks. You could almost hear the grating of their teeth.

Downstairs Rugge did everything he could think of to make Isidore Footman smile. He made faces. He dangled his watch before Izzy's face. He made a bar of his fingers and peeped through them. Nothing doing. Try as he would Rugge could not look like mamma.

There was no peace until Izzy was taken to the city nursery. When he was gone there was a sound like the soughing of the wind through the winter pines. It was the sigh of the "cops" upstairs who had quiet at last.

Late in the evening appeared rMs. Footman, wild of eye.

"Where is Izzy?" she panted.

"Where is what?" asked the lieutenant.

"Izzy."

Well, is he. What's the answer?"

Then she explained and they told her. To the city nursery went Mrs. Footman to find the lost one. He ceased sucking at his bottle as he caught sight of the well known face and two air bubbles fled up into the neck of the flask. Then he sighed deeply and grinned. Two tears stopped rolling on his cheeks and Isidore Footman of Rockaway avenue was perfectly happy.

"Mike," said one "cop" to another at the Brownsville station long afterward.

"What?"

"No wonder the men are going to war."

"You said a mouthful, pal."

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. If Your Hair Is Coming Out Read This

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair-tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original colour, stopping hair from falling out and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist; Bay Rum, 6 ounces; Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies should be careful not to apply to face or where hair is not desired.

PROVINCE RUNS A BANK.

(Manitoba Free Press)

The first one hundred dollar bond, or certificate of deposit, of the new Manitoba Farm Loan Association, under which cheaper money will be provided for the grain growers of the province, has been sold.

The buyer of the certificate was Miss Ruth W. Winkler, daughter of the provincial minister of agriculture. Miss Winkler is just graduating from school and received a gift from her father in recognition of the event. She concluded that she could not do better with the money than lend it to some food producer and took this means of doing so.

It is a remarkable and noteworthy fact that this one hundred dollars, within 48 hours of its reception by the Farm Loans Association, will be in the hand of a Manitoba farmer, who is putting in as large a crop as possible to meet the unprecedented needs of the world.

Two applications for money from Manitoba farmers were approved by the board recently and the amount to which reference is made will be included in the remittances made in one of these cases.

The certificate of deposit is guaranteed unconditionally by the Province of Manitoba. It bears 4 per cent. interest and can be converted into currency at any moment as easily as a hundred dollar bill. The Province will provide the cash instantly on demand.

RUSSIA'S COSTLY ROYALTY.

(London Chronicle).

An investigation of finances of Russia showed that it cost $30,000,000 a year to run the Imperial household, $600,000 of this going to autos and the Imperial stables. No wonder with potatoes and onions at their present prices, the country found it necessary to cut down expenses at the top.

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their grave, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonised Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it tends to not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. G. Weber dispenses it for Peterborough.

IRON CROSSES BY THE TON.

Kaiser's Decoration now a Joke in the Army, Reichstag is Told.

The wholesale distribution of Iron Crosses to members of the Kaiser's forces has reached the proportions of a national scandal, according to remarks made in the Reichstag during the discussion of the army budget early in May, and found in copies of German papers reaching London.

With the approval of practically the entire House, including the Conservatives, Deputy Muller, a Radical, asserted that the Iron Crosses had become a joke in the army, which said that the rain of decorations in the rear was as heavy as the rain of bullets at the front. Iron Crosses of the Second Class having become valueless, there is now general misuse of Iron Crosses of the First Class. Herr Muller said that the infantry at the front received fewer decorations than the men who had never been under fire, who had never seen prisoners except in the camps, railway officials, commissariat officers, clerks in government offices in Germany, army cooks and officers' servants.

In the course of the debate, many speakers voiced the grievances of the troops in the field. It was declared that all the old class prejudices were maintained concerning the appointment of officers, that commissions were still alike withheld from Jews and from soldiers whose fathers were "in trade," and that Alsatians and Danes had had no leave since the beginning of the war.

The Prussian War Office declares that it is withdrawing men over 45 years of age from the front lines as soon as they have done six months' service, but it is asserted that in many cases they are put into reserve battalions at home, trained afresh with young recruits and sent back to the front.

GOD ALMIGHTY HATES A QUITTER.

(Chicago Tribune)

God Almighty hates a quitter and before long the quitter will hate himself. That goes for the whole American nation, which is not a nation of quitters.

We are in for punishment, I and must accept it. Life occasionally faces punishment. It is not pleasant. It has to be endured. Pain is part of the scheme and of the ecstasy of life. It is a constituent of peaceful life. War is not the only trial. It is not the only corrosion. It does not present the only pain and the only way to dissolution, to termination.

It is one of the ways, and the person able to face the ordinary prospects of life.

This nation is able to take punishment, and, taking it, to win its enterprise. It hates a quitter.

More of Rumanian Stock Allotted her to Tide over Emergency.

COPENHAGEN. — The rapid dwindling of German grain stocks under the drain imposed by the supplementary bread allowances to compensate for missing potatoes, was the cause of the recent hastily summoned conferences of representatives of the Central Powers in Berlin. Officials of the German Food Department supported by energetic representations from the military and diplomatic authorities, won the grant of an additional proportion for Germany of the grain stocks captured in Rumania.

This agreement is at the cost of the Austro-Hungarian, Bulgarian, and Turkish allotments, and according to a Berlin announcement will suffice to carry the German population through until the harvest. The transportation difficulties remain to be solved.

The German authorities are conducting a vigorous campaign to convince the people that all is well with the coming harvest and that the present food difficulties will disappear as soon as the new crop is available. Articles describing the grain crop prospects as without a shadow, appear in the newspapers. The same assertions were made before the harvest of 1915, when the grain crop was a failure, and before that of 1916, which despite optimistic estimates, turned out to be only 25 per cent. above that of the preceding year.

A hint of different possibilities is given in a paragraph which slipped into an account of crop prospects in the weekly Woche. This paragraph says:

"If all conditions continue favorable, Germany can hope for barely a medium harvest, owing to the lack of fertilizers, particularly nitrates."

The fruit harvest, according to the experts, will be only medium.

Whole Wheat and Milk—the two most perfect foods given to man. Dietetic experts may quarrel about everything else, but they are agreed on this. The proper combination is Shredded Wheat Biscuit with milk—the greatest amount of protein (the element that builds muscular tissue) for the least money. Two or three of these Biscuits with milk make a nourishing breakfast on which to start the day's work and they cost only a few cents. A boon to the housewife because they are ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Delicious with berries or other fruits. Made in Canada.

GREECE TO FIGHT ON THE ALLIES SIDE

ANOTHER GERMAN AIR RAID ON LONDON

FIFTEEN ENEMY AEROPLANES IN DAYLIGHT RAID AGAINST LONDON

Anti-Aircraft Defences of London Engaged the Enemy and Aeroplanes Are in Pursuit" States Lord French in His Report on New Attack --- Violent Artillery Duel Along Most of the Champagne Front Announces the French Special Communique To-day --- 197 Missing as a Result of Sinking of French Steamer

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, June 13.—Another daylight said by German aircraft over London occurred at noon to-day. Fifteen hostile aeroplanes formed the raiding squadron, Lord French, Commander-in-Chief of home defenses declared. They crossed the Essex coast, he said, in the vicinity of the Nore about 11 o'clock, and proceeded south, separating half way between there and east London, which was attacked and bombed. "There are no reports of casualties or damage," Lard French asserted. "Anti aircraft defenses of London engaged the raiders, and aeroplanes are pursuing them."

LONDON, June 13.—Germany's fourth aeroplane raid over England in recent weeks to-day claimed a death toll of 31 and injured 67, in the City of London alone. Fifteen aeroplanes formed the bombing squadron. Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced in the Commons this afternoon that one of these had been brought down.

The German raiders appeared over the Sussex coast shortly before noon —in broad daylight. In the east end of London, one bomb dropped by air pirates struck an elementary school, killing ten children and injuring fifty.

British anti-aircraft guns and defence planes vigorously fought off the invaders. Special constables were hurriedly called out and the damaged areas were roped off to keep back the curious crowds.

King George and Minister of War Derby went to that part of London which had been struck in an automobile almost immediately after the raid, inspecting the wrecked buildings and offering sympathy to the relatives and friends of the victims.

The aerial flying corps instantly took the air on the first report of the invaders. Special constables were hurriedly called out and the damaged mans in a thrilling fight. One British airman unsuccessfully chased three Boche airplanes endeavouring to draw them into a fight.

Lord French, Commander of the home defence for the air, estimated the casualties low at first, but later reports brought the total up to a point where it was apparent the raid was one of the most murderous yet suffered by England. This afternoon it was stated that a non-military train, carrying a number of passengers, had been struck by bombs dropped by one of the German fliers.

London was intensely excited by the raid. Roofs in the city were jammed with spectators of the pursuit in the clouds above by the British airmen. Miss Lloyd George, daughter of the Premier, with her fiancee, Captain Evans, watched the raid from the doorway of the city bank.

A further statement issued by Lord French this afternoon listed the total casualties at 41 killed and 121 injured, but the figures were yet incomplete. The German machine flew at an elevation of at least 18,000 feet, and were almost entirely hidden in the heat haze over the city. About all the spectators saw were bursts of smoke marking explosions of shells hurled into the air by "archies" (anti-aircraft guns) seeking out Germans.

Although the crowd was vastly excited over the raid it was not the excitation of alarm. Alarms were rung all over the city and in various buildings, supposedly to warn everyone to take to cellars, but in great many instances the crowds instead disgorged on the streets or hurried to the roofs.

The fact that the four most recent German air raids over England have been made by aeroplanes suggests a realizing by the Germans that the Zeppelin is a failure for such bombing expeditions and has been abandoned.

PARIS, June 13.—One hundred and ninety-nine persons are missing out of 550 passengers aboard the French steamer Saquana, 5,557 tons, torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic, it was announced to-day. Some of those missing are Senegalese.

PETROGRAD, June 13.—France formally notified Russia to-day that she stands ready to make new agreements with the democratic government concerning the two nations' future co-operation in the war.

PARIS, June 13. — Major-General John J. Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American expeditionary army-to-be, arrived at a French port to-day. He was accorded a tremendously enthusiastic reception by the townspeople.

ATHENS, June 13.—The early entry of Greece into the war on the side of the Allies is now expected. Prince Alexander, the new ruler, who presumably will take over the reins of government at once, is known as a pro-Ally. Until Greece can reorganize her own affairs France will aid in the administration of her internal problems, particularly that of furnishing the country with food. Greece has been under blockade by the Allied fleets since last fall. First of the problems to be faced out of the change in rulers is the restoration of unity among the Greek people, and of adequate measure to provide for complete revictualing and distribution. French forces are already landed in Greece to aid in this work.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, June 12. — Another well managed minor operation this morning on the Canadian front, resulted in the capture and occupation, with few casualties, of enemy strong points which have been a menace to the security of our left flank ever since the capture of the electric station. The Souchez River at this spot has been dammed by the Germans and in marshy area along its banks had been placed skilfully concealed machine guns, which have swept all possible means of approach from the south bank of the stream. Some of these positions were destroyed in the raid of Saturday morning, but others remained in the enemy's hands.

The artillery not having been able to smash them, it was decided that the only effective way of putting them out of business and ending the annoyance and loss was by a night surprise attack with bomb and bayonet. Only a few men were engaged in the enterprise, which succeeded beyond expectation. The enemy showed little fight, and in a few minutes his strong points, with three machine guns and six prisoners, all that were left of the gun crews, passed into our hands.

At once steps were taken to incorporate the captured ground within our lines.

The post captured this morning is only twenty-seven hundred yards from the centre of Lens. It marks the furthest advance toward the city. One of the prisoners captured stated that his battalion had just relieved another, which had suffered very heavy losses during a short period on the front line, especially from gas and shell fire.

The enemy artillery was less active to-day on our front, but to the south it has been shelling Arras and other points on the Scarpe with a 12-inch naval gun.

PARIS (French Official), June 13.—Violent artillery struggles continued over most of the Champagne front to-day, the War Office reported. The fire was most vigorous in the region of Moulin Laffaux, Mont Cornillet, Butte Demesnil, Hill 304 and Paroches. Elsewhere, the statement said, it was calm.

WHITLEY CAMP, Surrey, England, May 24.—(Special by Mail to The Examiner)—Sergt. Chas. Thorpe, of Peterborough, a member of the 52nd Battery and running for the 13th Canadian Artillery Brigade, won the one-mile championship of the 5th Canadian Division at Godalming, Surrey, this afternoon, his time on a grass track being 4 mins. 43 secs. OTTAWA, June 12.—It is estimated by the authorities that allowing for exemptions and ineligibles there are about 450,000 Canadians available for service in the ten classes formed by the conscription bill. It is believed that the first three classes should be able to furnish the 100,000 or more; in fact, it is estimated the three classes should furnish 125,000 men, over and above exemptions and ineligibles.

The first three classes consist of unmarried men and widowers with no children between the ages of 20 and 34 inclusive.

It is expected that Justice Duff, of the Supreme Court, will be the central appeal judge, the highest tribunal in connection with the enforcement of the Act.

Mrs. McCormick has received the following letter from her husband, Gunner Jas. McCormick recently reported wounded.

Derrington War Hospital.
Shrewsbury.

My Dear Wife:—

I write these few lines to you, hoping that this letter finds you and Marjorie in the very best of health, as it leaves me at present. I was wounded in two places, on right leg one in the thigh, and one in the leg just above the ankle, but they are coming on fine. The nurse let me get up to-day for a couple of hours. I was hobbling about like a wobbling duck. I have been treated very well, all the way down the line. I have been in several hospitals. They keep moving you about from one to another, so I do not know what hospital I will be in next. I guess that it will be a convalescent hospital.

King of Greece Abdicates Throne

King Constantine and Crown Prince George Will Leave Country — Entente Troops Have Been Landed in Thessaly

PREMIER'S ANNOUNCEMENT

ATHENS, June 12.—The fall of Constantine I., King of the Hellenes, has come. In response to the demand of the protecting powers, France, Great Britain and Russia, he abdicated to-day in favour of his second son, Prince Alexander.

This climax in the affairs of Greece was brought about through the agency of the French Senator, M. Jonnart, who has held posts in several French Cabinets, and who arrived at Athens only a day or two ago on a special mission as the representative of France, Great Britain and Russia. M. Jonnart had previously visited Salonica and other points, and he lost no time in getting into conference with the Greek Premier, Alexander Zaimis. The demands of the powers respecting the abdication of King Constantine also specifically eliminated Crown Prince George as his successor, the Crown Prince being included among those Greeks in official life who were considered strongly pro-German.

TO LEAVE GREECE AT ONCE

Both the former King and Prince George, it was announced to-day, by Premier Zaimis, intend to leave the country immediately. It is reported that they will embark on a British warship and proceed to Switzerland by way of Italy. It is presumed that Prince Alexander will take up his kingly duties with full acceptation of the ideas which the protecting powers desire to be put into effect in the government of Greece during the present age and has been free from anti-Entente proclivities.

Affairs in Greece, which several times since the outbreak of the war had seemed on the verge of a settlement, recently have taken on such an aspect of uncertainty that it became necessary for the powers to sot with decision. M. Jonnart was selected to proceed to Athens for the purpose of laying before the Premier the aims which France, Great Britain and Russia had with respect to establishing unity of feeling among the Greeks and greater security for the Entente forces engaged in operations in the east. While he informed the Premier that troops had been placed at his disposal he appealed to that official to use his influence towards a peaceful settlement. The troops, according to M. Jonnart's instructions, were not to land until the King had given his answer.

M. Jonnart called upon Premier Zaimis on Monday morning and demanded in the name of the protect-

CANADA MUST BE ORGANIZED WHOLEHEARTEDLY

"A Steel Cold Selfish Bill Ignoring Public Opinion Must Be Fatal," Says Capt. J. H. Burnham in Explaining His Resignation as Candidate

COMPLETE CONSCRIPTION

The Examiner has received the following wire from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., in regard to his resignation as Conservative candidate in the next election:

"The Examiner asks me for a brief statement re my reported resignation as standard-bearer Conservative party. My resignation was placed at the disposal of the Conservative Association in case they did not agree with my bold, but absolutely necessary attempt to get the support of the mass of the people for a policy which would enable Canada to organize whole-heartedly. I know, as everybody knows what public opinion is, regarding conscription. Scores of great meetings and conferences have declared for the placing of all the resources of Canada at the disposal of the government and so do I. A steel cold, selfish bill, ignoring public opinion will be fatal. There appears to be nobody in the press or public who does not strongly endorse my attitude. The Journay (Conservative) has bombarded the government persistently in favour of the absolute necessity of General conscription and not that of man-power alone. There is now talk of the government's coming round to their views. It would have been alright if all hope had not been deliberately shut out on the presentation of the bill. It is said that this fact is now admitted and will be repaired, in which event I shall, of course, be only too delighted to vote for the bill. I found that it was impossible for me to force myself to vote to saddle remorselessly, the whole burden of the war on the great and willing mass of our splendid Canadian people. Why throw ourselves into the hands of those hostile to the whole enterprise. That was what we were doing.

J. H. BURNHAM

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1917

MR. BURNHAM'S BOLT.

The action of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., in announcing his inability to support conscription, does not astonish anybody. Without the brilliancy of a comet, he has the eccentric and erratic character of its orbit, and no one has been able to anticipate at what spot he would next break out.

His reasons for not approving the conscription measure are reasons that are shared by a great many patriotic and thinking people—that conscription of manhood and of the wealth and resources of the country should go together. His reasons for not voting against the measure are not so convincing. He will not support it because it does not approve its scope and conditions. He says he will not vote against it because he does not know the views of his constituents. He knows the views of his constituents as well, to justify to himself non-support of the conscription bill, as he does the sentiments to justify his voting against it.

His resignation of the candidature of the Conservative party in the next election is one of the wise and good acts of his political career, and he will crown it by meeting the demand that it is said the executive of the Conservative Association will make upon him to place the resignation of his seat in the hands of the Speaker. West Peterborough has had no real representative for the past five years. He did not represent, except technically, the Liberals, and he did not represent the best elements of the Conservative party.

Mr. Burnham has many good personal qualities. His demand that wealth as well as manhood should be conscripted is logical. It is said that he has turned over all his pay for military services to patriotic purposes, an action quite consistent with his attitude towards conscription. If he were as consistent in his political capacity his usefulness and acceptibility would be enlarged.

"If the military department had been handled with the same success as the finances, Canada would have at least one million men under arms to-day."

REGISTRATION.

Sir Robert Borden, in introducing the Military Service, or Conscription Bill, referred to the need of more men to keep up the Canadian fighting strength at the front, a fact we all recognise. He intimated that this need should be more speedily met because the United States would be some time in getting into action — "the effort of the United States is only at its beginning," he said. This statement is subject to some modification. With the splendid beginning it has made there seems to be no reason for doubting that the United States will soon be in the fight. In fact there is, otherwise, reason to believe that the United States may have its soldiers at the front in considerable numbers before Canada's next hundred thousand it is proposed to provide by the Military Service Act, are secured. The United States has got a good start by having every one of its eligible soldiers ear-marked, enrolled, if not signed up. The wonderfully effective registration of our neighbours has put ten million potential soldiers where the authorities can lay hands on them when wanted.

It is difficult to understand why Sir Robert fails to provide registration, and justifies it on the ground that it will involve delay, when time is the essence of action. It seems, on the contrary, that registration would facilitate, if not hasten, matters. Registration of our manhood would single out, localise, every eligible man; in a word, would be an invoice of the man power of the country. With registration every man would be known, and no time would be lost in making the proposed selection, and dealing with the claims for exemption that may be presented. In the United States the work of registering ten million men was accomplished in one day. Of course there was a lot of clerical work to follow, but that would be easy compared with such work if registration were not made and fishing for information had to be done. One is sure Sir Sam Hughes would favour registration as a "quick fire" expedient. Though he has not spoken in parliament on the subject, he told a correspondent of the press he was afraid the machinery was too cumbersome, and that quick action would never be obtained by it. And Sir Sam Hughes, with all his faults, is a man that did things and a man that can't "abide" slow movement and cumbersome procedure.

Conscription is a disagreeable enough thing to contemplate to make it worth while to provide, that it should be made as readily effective as possible, and registration as a preliminary of applying selective conscription, seems to be a good and necessary thing.

It is stated that a conscription act can do nothing that could not be done under the Militia Act, except give power to the government to make regulations with the force of law.

AN UNTIMELY TIME.

No one disparages the high value of good roads in the country, but it appears that now, with so many more urgent demands to be met, is not the time to deal with a national enterprise involving the expenditure of ten million dollars for good roads. Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, has introduced his proposed highway act to authorize the Dominion government to expend ten million dollars, when the government thinks proper. This project has been twice "turned down," not on its merits, but because the government insisted upon controlling the distribution of the funds in a way to create the suspicion that the fund would be used more for purchasing popularity for the government than in the interests of road building, in other words to create a huge election fund.

The construction of highways is a duty of the provinces and, while they would welcome Dominion funds, the present is not the time to bandy about money by the tens of millions, as if there were not more important interests calling for every available cent of public money. Now is an untimely time to spend large sums of money, or distract any interest associated with winning his war for any purpose that can wait, and especially for one that the provinces should, can, and doubtless, will look after.

The war is weary work, but the way of the Allies is always forward, even if difficult and slow.

TRANSPORTATION AND COAL.

With all our resources, and with what we are assured is "the most progressive and capable government Canada ever had," it is a little humiliating to have had to depend upon freedom from freezing to death last winter upon United States locomotives. It is stated that last winter the closing of many factories, munition plants, hospitals, schools and suffering in homes, was only averted by the action of the Dominion Railway Board supplemented by the loan of many United States locomotives. It is foreseen by those who should know that there is a possibility of transportation conditions being even worse next winter than last.

Sir Henry Dayton, in his report presented to parliament, stated that "there was absolutely no room for doubt as to the lack of freight cars, resulting in inconvenience and, in many cases, distress." He adds that "the Grand Trunk needs at least 200 locomotives and 10,000 freight cars." Emphasis is also placed in the report upon the "necessity of immediate action lest Canada suffer railway congestion worse than that of last winter."

This is a serious consideration and it has engaged the attention of the Kitchener Board of Trade, which has adopted a memorial to the Dominion tion on the report of the Drayton-Acworth Royal Commission. The Board of Trade in its preamble says that, with "innumerable other matters," the transportation interests have not been attended to by the government. The question of transportation in relation to our fuel supply, is one that demands immediate attention, and it behooves the Department of Railways and Canals to take prompt and practical cognisance of the conditions. The matter is so pressing that the solution of the transportation problem takes precedence of the early opening of the Trent Canal, though as far as Peterborough is concerned, the two matters are closely related. Hon. Frank Cochrane, the Minister of Railways and Canals, does not seem to be suffering from overwork in helping canal opening in dealing with the bridge question at Campbellford. But if he won't move rapidly enough, he must be spurred. It is to the interest of Peterborough to take an interest in promoting the solution of the transportation difficulty, since it seems the chief obstacle to the city making a success of the municipal coal yard, which it has been authorized to establish, is lack of transportation facilities. It is possible that the provision of adequate transportation would obviate the necessity of opening the coal yard at all, by permitting private dealers to handle the situation, which was complicated last winter by lack of cars to move coal. The Kitchener Board of Trade will send copies of its resolution to Municipal Councils asking the appointment of delegates to a deputation to wait upon the government to urge action in dealing with the transportation question. It might be arranged that the latter deputation could synchronize with the canal opening deputation, a very reasonable idea, since the objects of the deputation are cognate and the questions have so much in common.

The appointment of Mr. C. A. McGrattan, chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission, to take charge of the fuel situation in the Dominion, need not check the deputation to urge the government to action in the matter of the coal supply. Even commissioners won't act any more slowly by being encouraged and—stimulated.

While so many pressing and urgent demands are awaiting the government's attention, nearly two weeks of precious time has been wasted at Ottawa over conditions that might not have arisen if things long neglected had been done.

OTONABEE COUNCIL

Grant of $10 to the Plowmen's Association

At a meeting of the Otonabee Council on motion $10 was granted to the Peterborough Plowmen's Association for prize money.

The whole Council was appointed a committee to defend the action of Wm. Read's claim for damages.

The following accounts were passed: Robert Carey $125.00 for injury in gravel pit when working for the township; D. McFarlane, salary for assessing $100; D Shaughnessy, drawculverts $6.50; D. H. Moore, painting steel on three bridges $2.50; W. E. Wood, Gravel $6.00.

Council adjourned to June 16th.

On the same day the Council sat as a Court of Revision. H. J. Miller appealed of over-assessment on the S.W. ¼ of Lot 19, Concession 4. On motion the assessment was reduced to $400.

The assessment roll as amended was confirmed.

BOARD OF WORKS ANNUAL INSPECTION TRIP

The Board of Works Committee of the City Council is out to-day in a body, inspecting the streets of the city. This is an annual custom and is said to be justified by an aldermanic desire to see at first hand some of the defects in the highways, streets and bridges. It will also serve to provide material for copious discussion throughout the summer months and on into the pre-election period. The trip is made in a band waggon, and usually includes a square meal at one of the best hotels in the city.

LIBERAL VIEWS ON THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE

There Should Be Equality of War Sacrifice — Discussion in Caucus — Frank Exchange of Opinions — Some Amendments Likely To Be Offered — Several Liberal Members Again Decline Coalition

OTTAWA, June 13.—A second Liberal caucus on the conscription issue was held yesterday. It lasted for three hours and, after another full and frank exchange of views on all the varying aspects of the question, adjourned to meet again a little later in the week. Meanwhile, a committee was appointed which will endeavour to crystalize views pressed into resolutions outlining concretely suggested amendments to the bill now before the House.

The more the bill is studied, and the more all the national considerations involved in the immediate adoption of a bill limited purely to military conscription are canvassed, the more apparent it becomes that members on both sides of the House are conscientiously differing from one another as to the wisest course to pursue.

Equality of War Sacrifice.

In the Liberal caucus yesterday, there was again a cleavage of opinion as to whether or not the conscription principle could be at once adopted, or whether it should be delayed until the voluntary system had been given a final testing under proper conditions, until a wise educational campaign had been conducted, and until the people had been consulted. There were advocates both for and against immediate endorsation of the principle at least of the Government bill. The divergent views were expressed without the least sign of acrimony and at the last it was agreed that, failing any common ground on which all could stand, every member should be free to vote on the bill, in its final stage, as his convictions dictated. There was general consensus of opinion that, in any event, Liberalism should stand for equality of war sacrifice and war effort so far as possible, and that if compulsion was to be adopted in the case of military service, it should also be made applicable to wealth and war service generally.

Owing to the fact that the bill was not distributed until yesterday morning, members had not time to take more than a cursory survey of its many provisions before the caucus met.

During the next two days there will be a careful scrutiny of each clause, and it is certain that some amendments will be proposed, either in the way of additional clauses or in the way of making the machinery provided less cumbersome and less open to the exercise of political manipulation should the Government attempt to exploit its provisions for political advantage.

Decline to Enter Coalition.

Meanwhile, Sir Robert Borden is understood to be attempting Cabinet reconstruction, without relying further on the hope of effecting any coalition with the Liberals in Parliament. For the reasons already given Sir Wilfrid Laurier definitely turned down the Premier's coalition proposals last week. Since then, Hon. George P. Graham and Messrs. Carvell, Pardee and Maclean, have definitely declined another offer to enter a coalition. Knowing all the facts of the case and realizing motives and methods behind the new scheme, they have not hesitated to decline the Prime Minister's offer. They are Liberals by conviction as well as win-the-war enthusiasts. They do not believe that they should be called upon to sacrifice their Liberal convictions by combining with a Conservative-Nationalist Government, and they do not believe that they could work in harmony with the personnel of the present Administration which would still be retained in the Cabinet under Premier Borden, in dealing with issues which must come up apart from conscription.

A Political Expedient.

Believing in the principle of conscription as they do, they will support it in the House and in the country, thus giving the Government the assistance on the definite issue to which Sir Robert appealed to them on. They refuse, however, to be a party to what most Liberals in Parliament now believe to be in the main, purely a political expedient. The action taken by Sir Robert Borden, in first drafting the conscription bill, committing the Government to it before seeking a coalition with Sir Wilfrid on so vital an issue and hampering him by precipitate action already taken, is not conducive to the belief that there were no ulterior motives behind the coalition proposals.

Furthermore, the course of Sir Robert Borden in negotiating ways and means for the continued retention of Hon. Robert Rogers in the Cabinet at the very time he was negotiating with Sir Wilfrid for a coalition Cabinet does not impress Liberals with the honesty and sincerity of his protestations that politics was entirely subservient to the good of the country.

U-Boat Missed Big Ship Before Firing on the Southland

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 12.—Passengers arriving here aboard one of the largest and most luxurious British steamships afloat told about a U-boat which, foiled in its efforts to sink their vessel, wreaked its revenge upon the steamship Southland, following two hours astern.

E. H. Van Ingen, woollen merchant of No. 360 Fifth avenue, New York, who went to England on business two months ago, was one of the passengers who told of the fate of the Southland. "After our steamship had been held up four days at an English port," he said, "we were compelled suddenly to put into a port in Ireland, where we remained another three days. When at last we were allowed to go and had passed a considerable distance into the submarine zone we learned that the Southland, following us out of the Irish port, had been sunk.

The Southland, according to cabled advices from London, was sunk on June 4 while bound from a British port for Philadelphia. The first torpedo missed, but the second tore a big rent in the side of the Southland and entered the magazine, exploding it. Eight men were killed. In addition to these killed two lifeboats, with forty men, were reported missing. The rest of the crew, 159 men, were safely landed. In the crew were six Americans, one of whom, Edward Rigney, was among those reported missing.

BRITISH AVIATORS NOW MASTERS

Lieut. J. F. Proctor, who has seen much service in aviation in France, was a passenger aboard the vessel which arrived here. He said that the British aviators have obtained the mastery of the air over the Germans and are sure to hold it.

"It has cost many sacrifices and the loss of many lives," he said, "but now at last the Allies have the absolute supremacy of the air and their losses from now on will be greatly reduced."

Arthur B. Lane and James Bruce, secretaries to Thomas Nelson Page, United States Ambassador at Rome, also were aboard the steamship. Mr. Lane has come home on leave of absence and will return soon to his post aboard. Mr. Bruce has come back to enter the artillery service.

"Paris," said Mr. Lane, "is decorated with more American flags than, as I am told, can be seen in the streets of New York."

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Elms, of Freeport, Long Island, who has been in England and Scotland seven months, have returned to enable Mr. Elms to enter the army.

COMES TO ENTER SERVICE

"I am a few years past the registration age," said Mr. Elms, "but, nevertheless, I should like to serve my country. You have no idea how many Americans are daily besieging the office of the American Consulate in London with requests to be enrolled in the United States army. Thousands of men who, before our declaration of war against Germany, had entered the English and Canadian armies are now anxious to serve under the Stars and Stripes.

Mr. Elms had not entered any branch of the British army, but when he applied at the Consulate in London Mr. Wilson, the Vice Consul told him, he said, that it would be better for Mr. Elms to come to the United States and apply in person.

Louis E. Weber, chief European representative of Gimbel Brothers, was greeted at the pier by a delegation of war against Germany, had der the leadership of the Messrs. Gimbel. Mr. Weber had been abroad for three years. Each of the men and young women in the delegation waved an American flag and cheered as Mr. Weber walked down the gangplank.

STOCKHOLM, June 13.—Germany's Socialist delegates to the Stockholm "peace conference" are willing to "discuss" the future disposition of Alsace Lorraine, according to an authoritative source to-day. It was learned the peace terms which they have already outlined to the Dutch-Scandinavian Committee of Socialists practically coincides with those expressed heretofore by the Hungarian delegation. The German Socialists are agreed on the restoration of Belgium, and on political and military independence of all peoples.

LONDON, June 13.—Mutual raiding along the greater part of the British front was reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day, with the repulse of a single German counter attack.

"Astride the Souchez River hostile counter attacks at night against our new positions were driven off," he sail, "by our artillerying and machine gun fire. East of LeVerguier, northeast of Lagnicourt, west of LaBassee, and northeast of Neuve Chappelle we carried out successful raids at night. Northeast of Richebourg and Lavone hostile raiders were repulsed."

PETROGRAD, June 13.—A delegation of Austrian officers and soldiers, who last week came to Kishineff with peace proposals, were to-day sent to Moscow and will shortly be started to Siberia where they will be interned as prisoners of war.

The Government believes that by such action they will effectively stop further attempts by Austrians to penetrate the Russian lines with separate peace schemes.

COLLINS AND GANDIL MAY QUIT WHITE SOX

Eager to Enlist, but Departure Would Cripple Team.

NEW YORK, June 12.—(Special).—Eddie Collins, star second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, and "Chic" Gandil, first baseman of the same club, have called upon Manager Rowland to learn what their status would be if they decided to quit the game to don the army uniform. Both men expressed the keenest eagerness to go to the front, but neither wishes to cripple the Comiskey aggregation now that their prospects for a pennant look so bright. Rowland in a talk with Collins pointed to the fact that every member of the team had waived exemption, and that Comiskey and himself were in perfect accord in the belief that every man on the White Sox payroll should be free to do his duty to his country. It was pointed out, however, that the military authorities believe that for the present the star ball player is more valuable as a ball player than he would be as a soldier, inasmuch as the desire of the Government is to keep baseball and all other sports alive. It was also stated that at the end of the present baseball season every eligible man on the White Sox team would be ready to report fit for army service.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM LIEUT. DEWART

Warsaw Boy Came Through Vimy Ridge Untouched

The following is an extract from the Toronto Globe of June 6. Lieut. Dewart is a son of Mrs. John Dewart of Warsaw, and is well known in the locality:

Mr. E. R. Dewart has received two interesting letters from his cousin, Lieut. John Dewart, who is with the 2nd Canadian Machine Gun Company in France.

Writing under date of the 22nd April, he says: "I had the good fortune to come through the recent battle untouched. I took my section over in the advance along with the infantry, and was the only officer of this company to do so. It was a wonderful show. Our fellows did well, but the artillery was past imagination.

"My men captured quite a number of prisoners. I went into the dugouts and found them full of Huns, but they would not fight, but begged for mercy. We made them carry out our wounded.

"I established my headquarters in a German officer's dugout, and we found eggs, bacon, bread, etc., also plenty of cigars and cigarettes, so we are in luck as we went over.

"Light."

In a later letter, under date of May 4, he says: "I have been through the whole performance since the beginning, and, believe me, at times there seemed remote chances of ever seeing Canada again. The last tour was the worst I have ever experienced, and I was in a terribly hot corner. However, we pulled through without a very large number of casualties. In one case while repelling a counter-attack, there were men wounded on both sides, and I would have had a wound, too, but for a flask which was in my hip-pocket and broke the force of the shrapnel bullet.

"The fighting is of the bitterest nature, and Fritz is dying gamely. His picked troops, Guards, etc., were opposed to us, and contested every inch of the ground, but nothing can stop our boys. Fritz is losing men in thousands, launching counter-attacks which never succeed on account of our artillery and machine guns. Our air service, too, is wonderful, and our aviators are doing marvellous work.

"The fighting now is in the open, but it is much worse, as there is no protection against shell fire, and the amount of stuff flying around would make one wonder how any one could live through it."

MILITARY NEWS

A Cambridge street lady has received an interesting letter from her sister in England, in which the latter stated that her son, who is a prisoner in German hands, had been made to work in the front line German trenches with 500 prisoners. In sending the letter to the Examiner the Peterborough lady writes as follows:

Mr. Editor,—As you have been so good as to publish two of my son's letters in your valuable paper, I thought that this one, which I received yesterday, might be of some help to the paper, so please take out the most interesting part. The boy mentioned is one of four brothers serving with the British army. I have also three brother-in-laws and four nephews, all doing their bit there, as well as my own son, whom you already know. The one mentioned in the letter was taken prisoner at the beginning of the war and he has suffered dreadfully during that time, and now to know that he is put in the front line trenches of the Germans is surely enough to help the young men volunteer for service to bring this dreadful thing to an end and fill up the gaps which have been made by the Germans. May God bless and help them to see their duty for God, for king and country.

THE CHURCH AND THE PROBLEM THAT WILL COME AFTER THE WAR

Subject of Address by Mr. T. F. Matthews at Baptist Association Meeting Last Night — Also Discussed by Mr. Urquhart and Miss Ellis, of Toronto

REPORT OF MISSION CIRCLES

A single theme broke insistently through the addresses of the Tuesday evening session of the Peterborough Baptist Association's convention at Park Street Church last night. Deeply interesting and hopeful they were, searching a solution of the problem the Church anticipates, and is anxiously preparing for in the return of the soldiers with their ideals clarified and intensified, with their new sense of realities and the keener vision that has come to them through their rendezvous with death. Returned men, especially chaplains, have carried back the tidings of this deeper religious experience, in many cases an inspiring regeneration that will challenge the Church at home to measure up to, assimilate and provide a new and richer scope for service. This is the summons the churches of all denominations re-echo in their synods, presbyteries and conferences, even to the district organizations such as that which is now in progress at Park Street Baptist Church. The answer will be given in the days of readjustment, and to the great end, desired by those who could only stand and wait, both ministry and laity are bending their efforts and sending up their prayers that they may not be found wanting.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, who, as moderator, presided last night, delivered an address of absorbing interest on the subject "The War and Our Work." The keynote he sounded was heard again in the appeal made by Miss H. S. Ellis, B.A., principal of Moulton College, who presented the case for "Young Women's Work," and Mr. Thos. Urquhart of Toronto presented some of the phases of the question in his address on "The Struggling Church in the Year of Struggle."

Previous to this major part of the programme Rev. Dougald Brown welcomed the Association to Park Street Church, and Rev. R. B. Grobb extended the greetings of the Ministerial Association of Peterborough.

Rev. C. G. Smith of Belleville replied, thanking Park Street Church and congratulating it upon the progress made under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Brown. Of the Ministerial Association, he said: "I have yet to find a brotherhood more cordial, sincere and genuine than the Ministerial Association of Peterborough."

"THE WAR AND OUR WORK."

Mr. Matthews stated that his subject was a tremendous one. Great religious, political, financial and other problems were being erected through the war, and in this situation it was the duty of the church to face the responsibilities presented. Under a subheading of "what we are doing for the soldiers at the front." The trenches were giving the men a more genuine religion than many of the churches had done. The daily humdrum of life at home did not bring forth the fine qualities of the men that trench life revealed. All the branches of the church were working for the soldiers. But this was the easier task, Mr. Matthews pointed out; the harder will be, when the soldiers return and find themselves faced with the temptations of the world, unsettled by their experience and by the knowledge that those of us who have remained at home are indebted to them by an obligation that could not be adequately repaid.

The home fires must be kept burning but in a broad sense. Our homes, business, schools and institutions must be worthy of those who have fought for us.

AFTER THE WAR PROBLEMS

Mr. Matthews enumerated some of the social and business problems that are fully expected to come with peace. No nation had survived the evils that flow from a badly governed prosperity. North America had been made rich beyond its wildest dreams, and adverse trade balance had been turned into a great balance in our favour. "We are indifferent warders of our wealth," said the moderator, "lavishing it with a generous hand on material things and all too sparely on those that tend to the spiritual uplift of the people. Of the problem of preserving the ideals and traditions of the church in order that our country may be better on account of the war, Mr. Matthews said he failed to find a satisfactory solution for the reason that we do not know what will happen.

Dr. R. J. Campbell had said that there might be a violent reaction following the declaration of peace, just as there was a great reaction against the Puritan regime after Cromwell's death.

Mr. Matthews referred to the possibility of an aftermath of skepticism regarding the spiritual life. "Our churches will be put on their defence when brought face to face with the query why an Omnipotent Deity should cause such widespread havoc and suffering to rage in the world. All the church's batteries will have to be brought into action to combat so deadly an argument. These evils will have to be met by a steady dependence on and a deepening influence of our religious belief and an absolute loyalty to our institutions."

Referring to the great sacrifice demanded by the war, Mr. Matthews said, "We are learning the lesson. We begin to know, as perhaps some of you will come to know, something of what sacrifice means. And while we remember the sacrifices and recall the actions of our enemies as regards Belgium, Serbia, the Lusitania, Miss Cavell and Captain Fryatt, may we also be reminded of the duties of the hour, in regard to our religion and the necessity of keeping it inviolate and above reproach; let us be courageous, taking hold of the duties of the hour, and may our religion be a vital force which will wield an influence that will be felt. In a forceful way we can support our university and schools; we can raise the $20,000 asked for McMaster University, for it is most important that men with trained minds should be produced as leaders of men for the very trying years that are bound to come at the conclusion of the war."

WILL PUBLISH ADDRESS

An appreciation of Mr. Matthew's address was expressed by Rev. A. A. Trembert who moved, seconded by Mr. Joseph Wearing, that a copy of it be sent to the Canadian Baptist for publication.

A telegram was read from Dr. Scott and Mrs. Scott who are at Clifton Springs in which they extended greetings and best wishes for a profitable convention.

Miss Ellis made a special appeal for Moulton Ladies' College.

In his address, Mr. Urquhart, incidentally paid a tribute to the work of Rev. J. R. Webb for his service and influence as a member of the Home Mission Board. He also supported the idea of a general conscription of men, money and resources. He discussed in detail the struggles of the church in these critical years and recommended the tithing plan as a method of overcoming the financial difficulties.

Report of Women's Circles.

The 31st annual report of the Women's Home and Foreign Mission Circles and Bands was read by Miss M. Nicholls. During the year four members have been called to their reward: Mrs. F. Scott of Gilmour Church; Mrs. Stenson of Lakefield; Mrs. Lee of Haldimand, and Mrs. J. B. Hunter of Murray Street Church. Of the twenty-one churches in the Association five are not contributing through the women's organized work. A circle was organized in Brighton, in June, 1916, the first report from which has been most encouraging. In the represented churches 860 women are reported on the Church rolls. Of this number 462 contribute through the Circles. Port Hope occupies the first position in the number of new members secured. The following show increased contributions: Colborne, Campbellford, Gilmour, Lakefield and Peterborough, Park Street and Murray Street Circles.

Financial Statement.

The contributions to home missions amounted to $425.52, an increase of $11.96; foreign $5,760, an increase of $90.65; Northwest Indian Missions, $43.75, an increase of $7.85; making a total of $1,045.62, with an increase of $59.46. Of this amount the young women's circles contributed $65.22.

Boxes of clothing were sent to the needy from Gilmour, 2; Lakefield, 1; Warsaw, 1; and Port Hope, 3.

Miss Nicholls made a special appeal for the support of the North West Indian Fund, in which she referred to the patriotism shown by the Indians in their enlistments.

Mission Bands.

Owing to changes four Bands are without presidents. Two died, one resigned to take up Circle work, and the fourth, Mrs. Routledge, went overseas with her husband, who resigned the Colborne and Haldimand pastorate for active service at the front. Of the ten bands Belleville and Colborne increased their contributions. The financial statement showed a total giving of $212.15, an increase of $4.60. The total amount raised by the Circles and Bands for all objects was $1,267.27, an increase of $47.71. The report closed with an appeal for renewed and increased support.

King of Greece Abdicates Throne

ing powers the abdication of King Constantine and the nomination of his successor to the exclusion of the diadoque (Crown Prince).

M. Zaimis recognized the disinterestedness of the powers, whose sole object was to reconstitute, but he pointed out to M. Jonnart that a decision could only be taken by the King after a meeting of the Crown Council composed of former Premiers.

THE KING'S ANSWER.

It was not until 9.30 o'clock this morning that the Premier communicated to the commissioner of the allied powers the King's answer, in the following letter:

"The Minister and High Commissioner of France, Great Britain and Russia: Having demanded by your note of yesterday the abdication of his Majesty King Constantine, and the nomination of his successor, the undersigned, Premier and Foreign Minister, has the honour to inform your Excellency that his Majesty, the King, ever solicitous for the interests of Greece, has decided to leave the country with the Prince Royal, and nominates Prince Alexander as his successor.

(Signed) "ZAMAIS"

Prior to the announcement of the King's decision, many Greeks, loyal to the Crown, gathered for the protection of the sovereign. On Monday night two thousand reservists formed a cordon around the palace in his defence, if that should be necessary, and a delegation headed by Naval Commander Mavromichaelis was received by Constantine and pledged the devotion of the army and the people to his cause. The King's only reply was an appeal that they should remain calm.

All efforts of agitators to start a manifestation failed and the army officers announced their intention to obey the order of the Government to take no part in any demonstration and to maintain peace.

Agitators were still attempting to operate in the streets of Athens tonight, but any friend who desires to hear the Brigadier will not be closed out, and everything leads to the belief that there will be none.

FRENCH TROOPS HAVE LANDED

The French official report, referring to operations in the eastern theatre, reads:

"On the right bank of the Vardar we repulsed several enemy surprise attacks. At the Cerna Bend there was artillery fighting, in the course of which we set fire to an enemy battery.

"Aviation activity was displayed on both sides. British aeroplanes bombarded Petrenik. In an aerial engagement an enemy aeroplane was compelled to make a landing.

"The troops charged with control of the harvests in Thessaly (Greece) have penetrated that province without difficulty as far as the region of Elassona."

MANY APPLICATIONS FOR POSITION OF AGENT FOR CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Printers, Grocers and University Graduates Are Included in the List — Committee Will Digest Them for a Week — Other Business

The Executive Committee of the Children's Aid Society met yesterday afternoon and among other things considered a list of applications for the position of local agent for the Society, at a salary of $800 a year. The Committee adjourned without making the appointment and it was agreed to meet on Wednesday next and decide upon a definite course of action. The majority of the members of the Committee were expecting to find about three applications and had practically made up their minds as to who the successful candidate would be. It was a matter of surprise when the names of nine applicants were revealed and after a brief discussion the Committee decided to adjourn for one week and in the meantime think it over. The applicants were as follows:

Alexander Mahood, 414 London street.

D. A. McDonald, B.A., Peterborough, a graduate of McMaster University, Toronto.

S. F. Touchburn, 20 Benson Ave.

J. Gates, 101 Auburn street.

W. L. Abbott, 569 Patterson street.

G. W. Powell, George street.

A. C. Herridge, Peterborough.

Hubert G. Leader, 671 George street.

The latter has spent the past two years studying for the ministry.

The ninth application was a well known Reid street grocer who was too modest to have his name revealed. In this letter to the Board, this applicant enjoined the Committee to treat his application as strictly "secret and confidential." Mr. E. A. Peck, President of the Board was at a loss to know what should be done with such a request, especially as the members of the Board were hungry to share in the secret. The difficulty was overcome by revealing the writer's indentity to the Board and the press was asked to suppress the name.

A HEN HOUSE.

The Board decided to erect a hen house for the benefit of the matron of the Children's Shelter. At present the matron is obliged to pay rental to the amount of one dollar a month for the use of a repository for hens.

ACCOUNTS.

The Purchasing Committee reported and recommended the payment of the following accounts when certified to.

It was announced that the late Robert Innis had bequeathed the sum of three hundred dollars to the Children's Aid Society. Mr. Peck also announced that the Fife estate in Smith township was being wound up. The Society hopes to benefit to the extent of a few hundred dollars from this estate. Mr. Peck suggested that such monies be kept as a separate fund which would ultimately serve as maintenance fund and obviate the necessity of appealing to the people.

Interesting Session of Mission Circles and Bands Yesterday

Peterborough Baptist Association Meeting Proved Most Profitable — Nominating Committee's Reports Were Presented — Several Instructive Addresses

The afternoon session of the Mission Circles and Bands of the Peterborough Baptist Association yesterday afternoon was most interesting and profitable.

The report of the Nominating committee was as follows:

President—Mrs. Scott.

1st Vice-Pres.— Mrs. Smith, Bellville.

2nd Vice-Pres. — Mrs. Dougald Brown.

Director—Miss Nicholls.

Advisor—Miss Jackson, Port Hope.

Miss Ellis' Address.

In her splendid and uplifting address of yesterday afternoon, Miss Ellis dwelt upon the power of prayer. She said that with prayer and firm determination 'what can't be done can always be done.' There is a great necessity for massing forces for mission work and prayer will find the right person to be sent to mission fields.

Should Missions Continue.

At the outset of the war the question arose, should mission work continue. The answer is unanimously yes, and pressed as never before. We are apt at times to make our country our world, but we must extend our activities outside and send out a hand to those beyond. The reports of late have been extremely encouraging, debts have been removed and a balance on hand. Why? Because since the great war we have been educated how to give. Finance to a great extent measures our spiritual enthusiasm. If we are right spiritually, the treasury will be right.

Mr. Urquhart, whose address on Women Helpers' was perhaps the finest ever given in Peterborough, dealing with the new rights of women, proved very uplifting to all who heard. He said that this is essentially the age of women. The struggle for right and freedom in Europe has brought them to the front as nothing else could have done. Since it is necessary to use such a vast amount of man power in Europe there are new demands upon women to enter into industrial work. They have branched out not only into Red Cross, but work up to now unsuitable for women in such a manner that from the king down man has been loud in praise, and one great result has been the granting of votes to women. In the Baptist church women have always had equal rights in voting for all church matters. In view of the franchise and work to be undertaken by women there are three relations to be considered, state, women and church. These he illustrated by great women of the Bible.

Relation to State.

Women should consider well and advisedly the new liberty granted them by the franchise. Everyone of 21 years has the right to govern the country and exercise the royal prerogative. Deborah was the greatest woman in the Bible, and she was no failure as a private woman. She was essentially a home lover. When her duties were dispensed she gave comfort to the weary. She arose to public as well as private matters, letting neither duty interfere with the other. Men awoke to see the possibility had arrived for women to enter into wider circles and like wise to-day women have a call to arise. The liquor traffic has been mortally wounded, but there are social conditions bad beyond description which need readjustment. Deborah's work did not antagonize men, but enthused them. Her public work increased her faith in God. Surely our women will rise like Deborah.

Relation to Church.

Priscilla was the illustration Mr. Urquhart used as the ideal relation of woman to church. Her conspicuous qualities were her loyalty to the truth, husband, church and Jesus. The loyalty to these withstood all temptation, her church principles remained unswerved. Women of to-day, modern Priscillas, may now lend new ideas in the spreading and construction of religion.

Relation to Home.

Eunice is perhaps the greatest example of a model "home woman." It is the duty of woman to create love of God's word, which lightens the way in the home. Children are largely what their mothers make them. Perhaps the greatest asset to the Scotch church was the influence of the parents to guide one boy at least into becoming a clergyman. The mother may be the God-used instrument to lead children into the way of Christ. Mr. Urquhart emphasised the fact that more lives are ruined by strong words than strong drink. Children's minds, in forming under the mother's guidance, must be dealt gently with.

The reports of the mission societies were extremely encouraging and gratifying, showing great progress on all sides.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

It is as difficult to start the average man talking about himself as it is to stop him after he gets started.

A great man is seldom taken at his true value but lots of others pass current for more than they are worth.

If there is one thing sensible people dislike more than another it is to hear a man boast of what he is going to do.

A thing that some one does not find fault with is seldom worth having.

Fools learn nothing from wise men but wise men learn much from fools.

Fortunately the average youth fails in his wish to come into a ready made fortune.

Though the groom leads the bride to the altar his leadership usually ends there.

BEEKEEPERS' FIELD DAY

Apiary Demonstration Will Be Held In Warsaw on June 20th

Next to doing a thing yourself, the best way to learn is to see it done. It is one thing to sit in some convention room and hear a man tell how he manages his bees; it is far better to go with him into the apiary and have him show you. That is what you will have a chance to do at the apiary of Elmo Hendren, Warsaw, Tp., Dummer C., Lot 11, Wednesday June 20 at 1.30 p.m. sharp.

A qualified apiary instructor sent by the Ontario Department of Agriculture will show how to examine hives for disease, and will actually put a colony through the treatment for cure. Other manipulations will then be shown, such as finding the queen, removing bees from supers, operating to prevent swarming, etc., etc.

Prominent local beekeepers will be asked to take part and assist in the discussion of practical questions. These apiary demonstrations are being held all over Ontario, and it will be well worth your while to attend one.

Ladies are especially invited, and all are advised to bring bee veils as they can come right out into the apiary with comfort.

"Oh, Cecil!" Come to Peterborough!

The Call Has Been Heard and "Oh, Cecil!" Will Be Here on Monday

Hundreds of thousands of people in Canada read, and read with pleasure, the story of "Ruggles of Red Gap," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post a few years ago.

At the Grand Opera House on Monday, June 18th, will be presented the successful musical comedy farce, "Oh! Cecil," and in the leading role will be found Mr. Vern Dushayne, the popular and clever London comedian who appeared here this season in "Peg O' My Heart."

As "Cecil," Mr. Dushayne has a typical "Ruggles" role, and nothing has been seen here this season half as funny as this.

A big company of comedians, including David Stanwood, Lulu de Treves and Ada Phoenix, support Mr. Dushayne in excellent manner.

The Dallas Pony Ballet is too well known for further notice than to say that they have a number of pretty dances, costumed in startling manner.

All the latest musical hits are offered and a car load of scenery and effects make the production one of the best and most elaborate on the road to-day. The comedy is clean and wholesome and nothing of vulgarity is allowed to creep in, as is so usual with musical comedy in America.

The seat sale opens at the theatre on Friday this week.

WANT THE DOG BY-LAW ENFORCED

Dogs Are Running at Large Despite Recent Enactment of City Council

At a meeting of the local Board of Health held last evening it was moved by Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health and seconded by Mr. James Murty, a member of the Board, that the attention of the City Council be called to the fact that dogs are running at large and that the Council be asked to take action to have the by-law regarding dogs, enforced. The Board is of the opinion that little, if any, attempt has been made to enforce the by-law restraining dogs from running at large.

To-day's Session of Baptist Association

At this morning's meeting of the Peterborough Baptist Association the following reports were read at the Men's Conference: Report of Home Mission Board, by Rev. J. R. Webb. This showed that the deficit of recent years had been cleared recently.

Report of Foreign Missions by Rev. S. Brown. This showed that nearly $125,000 had been raised for Foreign Missions in one year in this convention.

Report on Western Mission Work, by Rev. W. Spidell of Port Hope.

An exceedingly bright and instructive address by Dr. Charles G. Smith, Belleville, on Publication Work, proved interesting and effective.

The Women's Conference.

At the Women's Conference, a talk on the "Link and Visitor," led by Mrs. C. G. Smith, showed the benefit and necessity of reading this paper for information in the Mission fields.

The talk on "Interesting Women in Circle Work," led by Mrs. Hamilton, gave valuable hints on gathering new members into the mission work, and the necessity for using discretion in the means of doing so.

The new standard of giving, led by Miss A. Walton, was short and extremely interesting, and proved a splendid completion to the other two subjects.

The discussion on Mission Band work, led by Miss Jackson, gave valuable hints on conducting Bands both in city and country circles.

DR. HUNT A SENSATION

Man of Mystery Entertains Big Crowd at The Grand

Although Dr. Zell Hunt, the man of mystery, who is attracting so much attention in Peterborough was billed to open an engagement in Toronto to-morrow, an effort is being made to have him remain in Peterborough for the balance of the week. It will be definitely announced at this evening's entertainment, at the Grand, whether or not Dr. Hunt will be able to accede to the request of his local admirers or not. The experiment of placing a young lady in a hypnotic sleep in the window of the Clegg Furniture store was successfully performed yesterday and attracted a huge crowd. The young lady, Miss Alma Bowen was carried to the Grand last evening and awakened on the stage—none the worse for her deep sleep. Last night's performance was a most amusing and entertaining one and it is safe to say that there will be few vacant seats at the Grand this evening.

A CASE HEARD TO-DAY.

J. M. Payton Charged With Misappropriation of Funds.

J. M. Payton, formerly local traveller for the Canadian Swift Company, was the defendant in the first of the criminal cases on the sessions' docket reached to-day. He is charged with the theft of $530, appropriated from his collections from local dealers. The defendant on the stand this afternoon related the difficulties of keeping his collections and expenses separate. When he first realized that he was short in his returns he went to the head office in Toronto and reported it. He was willing to pay off the debt, and after securing work in Peterborough last winter, commenced sending five dollars every two weeks to the company. After six weeks fifteen dollars was returned to him. Payton stated that he did not gamble, drink or play the market, and did not know how the deficit had accumulated. This case is being heard by a jury, with Mr. Joseph Wearing appearing for the accused, and Mr. G. W. Hatton representing the company.

CLAIMED $145 WAGES.

Sam. White's Action Heard in County Court.

In the case of Samuel White vs. Dr. F. L. Robinson, claiming wages of $145, judgment was reserved after the argument was completed before Judge Huycke in the June sessions this morning. White was engaged as a horseman in charge of Dr. Robinson's stud "Fernhall" in the spring of 1916, in the district between Peterborough, Millbrook, Garden Hill and Port Hope. He was to receive $75 a month and expenses. He claimed that he had earned $170, and had paid out $61.25 in connection with his route. He received only $86, and sued for the balance.

The defendant alleged careless handling of "Fernhall" by White, and entered a counter-claim of $150. Mr. O. A. Langley represented White, and Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Dr. Robinson.

Few French Canadian Members Will Support the Conscription Bill

Lives of Members Have Been Threatened by the Anti-Conscription Element in Quebec — The Threats Have Had the Effect for It Is Now Certain That Nearly Every French-Canadian Member in the Province Will Oppose Measure

MEMBERS ARE AFRAID

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, June 14.—The Gazette (Conservative) in an Ottawa despatch to-day says: "The Quebec anti-conscriptionists have resorted to methods of terrorizing in order to force all French Canadian members to vote against conscription. They have threatened the lives of members and also have warned them that their homes and property will be destroyed if they do not oppose the Government's measure.

"The threats have had effect, for it is now certain that every French-Canadian member in the Province outside of two Cabinet ministers, will vote against the Government's bill. There are three or four members on both sides who are favourably disposed to conscription, but are candidly afraid to do anything else but oppose the measure.

"The present outlook is that but three private French Canadian members, all from outside Quebec, will vote for conscription."

Still Chance of Success For Eleventh Hour Gardeners

Peterborough has few shirkers in the matters of doing work to help increase the food supply for home and Empire. This year several hundred gardens, most of them vacant lot gardens, have been started in this city. Food crops will be grown in all of them. Peterborough's contribution this year in this matter will be as great and possibly greater than that of any other city of its size in the Dominion.

All of these gardens should produce to the limit and there is no better way of getting the best out of one's efforts than by paying attention to crops which may be grown with success even when planted at the eleventh hour. Many "Vacant Lot Gardeners" are beginners and do not know that a garden started as late as this may give good success if the vegetables listed below are grown.

Hard Work, But Well Worth It!

Level the soil and cultivate it well before planting the seeds. It's hard work, but worth while!

Use a line, a hoe, rake, spade or fork, enthusiasm and brawn.

You have joined the "Empire Gardeners," show by your work that you are in one of the "crack regiments."

Your "drill" will be the regular cultivation of your plot. Do it for yourself and Empire!

Don't get discouraged! Win the rewards!

BEANS—May be planted up till the first of July. Ready for use in from 60 to 75 days. (For varieties to sow of this and other vegetables named below, see Home Vegetable Garden Pamphlet, free from Central Experimental Farm.)

BEETS — May be planted up till August for beet greens; the main crop for storage as soon as possible this month. Ready for use in from 60 to 70 days.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS—Up till June 15th. Ready for use in about 100 days.

LATE CABBAGE — Seed may be sown at once and the plants set out early in July, or buy the plants and set out then. Ready for use in about 110 days.

CARROTS—Sow seed at once. Ready for use in about 70 days.

SWEET CORN—Successive sowings may be made from now till July 1st. Ready for use is about 75 days.

PEAS — Successive plantings till latter part of June. Ready for use in about 65 days.

PUMPKIN OR LATE SQUASH—Sow seed now. Ready for use in about 110 days.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Nass, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

All Man Enhance The June Advance By Useful Plants

The Night Owl's Off the City Streets and in the Lot a-Hoeing Beets

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The war has brought strange things to pass along the city streets. The old time sign, "Keep off the grass!" is now "Keep of the beets!"

The lawn that once was bright and green is brown with dust and mul. The flower gardener now is keen to praise the lowly spud.

That plot that once with tulips gay did greet the early morn have all been plowed and put away in cabbages and corn.

The tennis courts, where rang the cries of "forty-love" and "deuce," are growing stuff for pumpkin pies or rhubarb, as you choose.

GROW MACAROON CROPS.

The golfer poses for a drive amid unusual scenes. His hazard is a bed of chive, his tee a hill of beans.

The clubman leaves his club to find new joy in raising hay. He takes up squash, but now the kind you plant, instead of play.

The vacant lot, where afternoons the boys played one-o'-cat, is growing crops of macaroons, "a little o' this and that."

Suburbanites rise early still, but not to mow the grass. They work to beat the grocer's bill by planting garden sass.

They tackle lawn with hoe and rake; they spade the fertile ground, and then they hustle off to make the 8:15 to town.

A BAS LA GASOLINE.

The chauffeur doffs his uniform for overalls and boots. He leaves the auto in the barn and goes to spray the fruits.

He shakes the smell of gasoline, his hands of onion reeks. The dust collects on his machine while he is planting leeks.

The gambler leaves his games of chance—he would not be a chump. He's growing corn to send to France; his game's where spades are trump.

We're planting gardens by the score, and if the legislature will give us aid we'll plant some more, and leave the rest to nature.

Diseases are the interests paid for pleasures.

LIKE ELECTRIC BUTTON ON TOES

Tells why a corn is so painful and says cutting makes them grow

Press an electric button and you form a contact with a live wire which rings the bell. When your shoes press against your corn it pushes its sharp roots down upon a sensitive nerve and you get a shock of pain.

Instead of trimming your corns, which merely makes them grow, just step into any drug store and ask for a quarter of an ounce of freezone. This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. A few drops applied directly upon a tender, aching corn stops the soreness instantly, and soon the corn shrivels up so it lifts right out, root and all, without pain. This drug never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

CUPID'S QUICK WORK

By ETHEL HOLMES

Arthur Armstrong was driving up grade in his motorcar and nearing a sharp turn.

Toot! Toot! Toot, toot, toot!

On the other side of the summit the ground fell off. A motor was coming up at the accelerated speed used by all chauffeurs in hill climbing. At the wheel was a girl, the only occupant. Not being quick enough in turning or not having the strength, she shot out on to the wrong side of the road—on her left.

Armstrong's car received the blow on the bumper and was not injured. The girl's car was put out of commission, and the girl—well, the girl was caught in Amstrong's arms. But it should be noticed that Armstrong was a famous baseball catcher.

"Are you hurt?" he asked anxiously.

"I think not," she said, but she lay limp in the stalwart arms. Armstrong looked down into her face anxiously. Her eyes were closed. His lips were within an inch of hers. He reduced the interval to zero.

"Oh, my! Good gracious!" she exclaimed, starting up and looking at her car.

"How fortunate!" said Armstrong.

"Fortunate! Do you call that wreck fortunate?"

"I mean that you are not seriously hurt."

"But my brand new car is ruined."

"Better that than you should have been killed or mangled. Had you been thrown against the car or hadn't missed the wind shield by a hair's breadth you would have been killed. As it was, being thrown into"—

He stopped short.

"Oh, dear, what am I going to do?" moaned the girl.

"I'll take you home. My car is all right."

"But mine—what shall we do with it?"

Armstrong looked puzzled. They were in the country, far from any town. "It's off the road," he said, "and won't endanger any one. We'll go to the nearest garage and have them send out for it. But I'm afraid it isn't worth hauling in."

This being the only thing that could be done, she consented reluctantly. Armstrong got out of his car, gathered up her belongings, then, returning to his car, pushed a button, pressed a foot brake, made other startling moves and began to descend the slope before him. The girl cast a lingering look at the wreck and turned away a tear.

There is every reason to believe that Cupid had sat beside the girl and caused the disaster. Else why should it have occurred, and why should she have been shot into Armstrong's arms, being just enough upset to lie there long enough for him to kiss her ruby lips? And there is every reason to believe that Cupid, having caused the collision, hopped into the rear seat of Armstrong's car. At any rate, everything from that moment was beautifully arranged to hasten a union between these two young persons.

In the first place, it was late in the afternoon and growing dark. As soon as he had started Armstrong pressed a button to turn on his lights. No light came.

"That's bad," he said. "The shock must have broken the electric connection."

If Cupid was managing the affair this was his most important work. No one but a fool dare run an auto at night without lights. Another clever stroke was that Armstrong had no skid chains, and there was a lot of ice on the road, which, being of asphalt, was thereby made very slippery. In addition to this, the country was hilly and the road full of turns. The time was late in November, and within twenty minutes after the collision darkness fell over the face of the land. Coming to what looked through the gloom as if the road suddenly ended—it was a sharp turn—Armstrong pulled as far out of the road as he dared and stopped.

"It'll never do to go any farther in this machine," he said.

"Oh, dear, what shall we do?"

"We must find a house. And I don't see any way but for us to stay there and go on in the morning."

"That would be impossible in my case."

"Why so?"

After some pressure the girl said that her father and mother were French. The French have very stringent notions as to a girl being away from home, unaccounted for, overnight. Her life would be blighted.

"We'll have to find a house, all the same," said Armstrong. "The rest of it we can settle later."

Leaving the auto, they went back over the road, having seen a light some distance to the rear. Maybe it had been put out. At any rate, they didn't find it. They wandered for miles before a house, darkened, loomed up before them. They were in a small village. Armstrong banged at the door till a man opened it.

"Got a parson in this place?" Armstrong asked.

"Right over there in the house across the street."

The couple went to the parson, called him up and were married.

It is questionable whether Cupid ever did quicker work than this. From the moment the girl was pitched into Armstrong's arms till they were pronounced man and wife were just six hours and twenty-five minutes.

RAILROAD MEN MUST KEEP FIT

There is a splendid fraternal spirit among the men who earn their living on the railroad. Good news is passed along from man to man, and it was in this way Mr. Frank Ide, a well-known Buffalo Fullman car conductor, learned how he could free himself of terrible pains in the groin and back and painful urination from gravel, the result of his kidneys being out of order.

He treated for two months, when one of his railway friends whose life had been despaired of, but who had made a very quick recovery through using Gin Pills, strongly recommended Mr. Ide to try them, and as he says, "The pain left me entirely. I feel as well as I ever did in my life. I recommend Gin Pills to everybody in any way troubled with kidneys or bladder".

Not only do Gin Pills assist nature to cleanse the system through the kidneys, but they stimulate the bowels, quickly relieving constipation.

All good dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. Free sample upon request to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 88

NAMES IN JAPAN.

The Only Lasting Title a Man Gets Comes When He Dies.

The Japanese have many quaint customs handed down from generation to generation. One of the strangest is that of their naming ceremony. When one month old a Japanese child gets its first name with ceremonial. Trumpets are blown, and the child is borne in great state to the family temple, and behind the procession march the household servants carrying the infant's wardrobe. The servant in the rear of the procession bears a huge box, in which is the priest's fee, together with three slips of paper, on which three names are written. On reaching the temple the names are thrown into the air, and the first that touches the ground is the one which the child receives.

When three years old the child is again named, accompanied by elaborate religious rites. At the age of fifteen his education is supposed to be finished, and as he then enters manhood (according to Japanese law) he is again named.

When he takes to business he receives his "business" name, by which he is known in the commercial world, and upon every upward step in life he receives a new name. If his master happens to have the same name he must at once change it, as it detracts from his superior's dignity. At his marriage his name is altered again, and his last and only permanent one is that given him after death, which is written on his tomb.—London Answers.

The Furtive Look.

Here is something worth while for bachelors to consider.

A Boston woman says she can detect a bachelor as far as she can see him. She always knows a bachelor by his furtive look. The furtive look, she explains, is something akin to that of a hunted animal, always on the watch for snares and pitfalls. Of course this may apply only to Boston bachelors, but it would be well for all other single unfortunates to take a good look at themselves in the mirror and find that telltale look. If they do there is an easy way to efface it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why a Horse Rolls.

Horses are fond of rolling on the ground, and no animal more thoroughly shakes itself than they do. After a roll they give themselves a shake or two to remove anything adhering to the coat. The habit is of much service to horses living in open plains. On being turned loose at the end of a journey an Arab horse rolls in the sand, which acts as blotting paper, absorbing exudations from the body. A shake removes the sand, and the coat soon dries. Cavalrymen in hot climates sometimes put sand on their horses as the simplest and quickest way of drying them.

No Longer a Child.

"Is mamma's sweet little boy ready to have his bath now?"

"Oh, maw, put the soft pedal on that stuff, will you? When a fellow's six years old it's time to take him out of the kindergarten class. I'll take my splash when I've had my smoke."—Pittsburgh Times.

Necessary Things.

One of our rear admirals is quoted as saying, "The battleship can go to any part of the world if coal is provided."

"This does away with the old supposition that water was also necessary," interposed a bystander.

Silence is Safety.

After forty years o' married life I've made up me mind it don't matter how often a man an' his wife disagrees as long as he don't let her know it.—Harper's Bazar.

Little Boy Had Eczema

On Face and Hands—Local Doctors Treated Him in Vain—How Cure Was Finally Effected.

Trenton, Ont., May 31.—This letter will interest all mothers of young children, because it tells of the best means obtainable of overcoming the annoying and torturing skin troubles which come to so many children.

Mrs. Waldron had several doctors treating her boy for eczema, but all in vain. Finally she heard about Dr. Chase's Ointment and her letter tells of the wonderful results obtained by the use of this soothing, healing ointment.

Mrs. Samuel Waldron, George street, Trenton, Ont., writes: "About four years ago, my little boy had a rash on his face and hands which the doctor called Eczema. He gave us a wash for it, and some ointment, which we used, but without benefit. I think we tried all the doctors here. Finally we tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and gave it a good trial. We could see that it was gradually healing. At first it appeared to burn the skin, then this skin would peel up, finally he got rid of it entirely. During the winters of the next two years we noticed a symptom of the disease under the skin. Each time we used more Dr. Chase's Ointment curing it both times. For the last two years he has not had any return symptoms at all, so we think that he is now entirely cured."

Rotation of Garden Crops

IN planting for a rotation of crops the later plants should differ from those that they succeed, both in type and character. Care in this particular will minimize attacks by insects and disease and insure the proper nourishment of the second crop. Do not have root plants, such as beets and carrots, nor plants of the same family, like cabbage and Brussels sprouts, or tomatoes and peppers, follow each other.

It is a good idea to divide plants into root crops, fruiting crops and foliage crops, and have members of the several groups alternate. The following chart, furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture, will help persons who desire to use their soil to the best advantage and by means of successive plantings and rotations:—

1.—Crops occupying the ground all season:—Asparagus, rhubarb, beans, pole lima; beans, pole Lima; beets, late; carrots, late; parsnips, salsify, corn, late; cucumbers, melons, squash, pumpkins, tomatoes, eggplant, peppers, onions (from seeds), leeks, okra, potatoes, main crop; rutabagas.

2.—Successive crops:—Radish, spinach, lettuce, peas, beans, dwarf; parsley, turnips, kohlrabi.

3.—Early crops which may be followed by others:—Onion sets, beets, early; turnips, early; carrots, early; corn, early; cabbage, early.

4.—Late crops which may follow others:—Beets, late; spinach, peas, late; celery, cabbage, late; Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, kale, endive, flat turnips.

After the garden seeds have sprouted or after the plants have been set in their permanent positions cultivation becomes of the utmost importance. A crust should never be permitted to form on the surface of the soil. Hand tools or a wheel cultivator should be kept constantly moving among the plants. This will enable the air to penetrate the soil and facilitate chemical action and bacterial activity. It will destroy the weeds, which take the nourishment needed for the vegetables, and it will conserve moisture. The rake is a particularly valuable tool. By passing it back and forth over the ground the soil will become open and mellow. If the ground is too hard, however, a hoe must be used to break it up. A wheel cultivator will save labor. For close work around the vegetables there will have to be a certain amount of hand weeding. It is best to do the weeding on a bright sunny day, so that the weeds will not take root again, which so many of them do with appalling rapidity, but will shrivel up and die.

While it is desirable to cultivate after a rain as soon as the excess moisture has soaked in or partially evaporated, it must not be done too soon, or the muddy soil will harden into cakes.

Most garden plants may be guarded against disease and insects by spraying at intervals of two weeks with a combination of Bordeaux mixture and arsenate of lead.

Larger eating insects may be knocked into a pan of water on which is a thin scum of kerosene. Young plants may be protected by putting over them frames covered with mosquito netting, cheesecloth or wire netting. Little collars of paper or tin placed around the plants will protect plants from cut worms.

As sucking insects live on the internal juices of plants they cannot be killed by poisoning the surface. To destroy them nicotine solutions, fish oil and other soap solutions and kerosene emulsion are employed.

The following table lists the insects most likely to appear in the vegetable garden and furnishes information in regard to the plants attacked and the treatment recommended:—

During prolonged drought water must be supplied artificially. Sprinkling with the hose is good, but a mere dampening of the surface is not enough. The ground should be thoroughly soaked, and it should be done in the late afternoon, so that too much of the moisture will not be evaporated by the hot sun. A better system of supplying moisture is to make furrows between the rows of vegetables and to let the water freely into these, afterward covering them by the dry earth.

It is almost impossible to have a successful garden in these times unless one provides beforehand the materials and apparatus necessary to protect plants against diseases and insects. Parasitic maladies, such as the various blights, are caused by fungi or germs, and usually may be prevented or controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture. If there is some malady that does not yield to the Bordeaux mixture it may be necessary to pull up and burn the plants affected by it.

Eating insects may be killed by spraying with poisonous solutions or dusting with powders, arsenate of lead being the poison most generally employed. As this is poisonous to human beings, it should not be applied to vegetables that are soon to be used.

City Gardeners

"CITY gardeners who have failed to make a success have usually failed because they depend upon one garden and neglect to make the ground yield two or three crops," says the Emergency Garden Commission. "At considerable trouble and expense they prepare a garden bed, and when one crop has been taken off allow the ground to lie idle for the rest of the season, instead of being made to produce more vegetables.

"In order to get gardening under way immediately, the commission has prepared a list of vegetables to be planted first. All are quick maturing plants, such as radishes, early beets, lettuce and carrots. Parsnips are to be planted early and have the benefit of the entire growing season. It is planned that the radish and lettuce later give way to bunch beans. When the beet season is over the ground can be utilized for late cabbage plants. Onion sets, it is shown, should be planted in order to mature in time to make space for planting tomatoes.

"Prospective gardeners are warned that the essentials for successful gardening are soil, water and cultivation, and also that much depends upon the grower, the season and the crops selected. First aid to the gardener has been carefully worked out by the Emergency Food Commission, and may be readily obtained by application.

"The best way to avoid weeds is to plant so many vegetables that the weeds will have no space to grow in. One can pick up many useful ideas by making little Sunday excursions to the market gardens on the outskirts of the city and seeing some of the methods used by the gardeners there, who must make every inch of ground work all the time to pay a decent interest on the heavy cost of the land.

"For instance, one may see dwarf peas planted early in the spring. As soon as these have received sufficient cultivation sweet corn will be planted between the rows. The peas are harvested and the vines ready to be turned under to enrich the soil with their humus by the time the corn is ready for cultivation. When the corn is tilled enough, turnips will be planted broadcast between the rows, and they will be ready just when frost comes in the fall.

"In a small garden a degree of attention can be given to intensive cultivation that cannot be equalled in the market garden because of lack of labor. For that reason the home gardener should use his ingenuity and do better than the commercial gardener in the volume of food produced on a square foot of soil. With sufficient fertilization, plants may be grown so thickly together that the gardener has only room enough to get into the beds for cultivation."

Guard Potatoes Against Foes

PRACTISE fairly level cultivation for potatoes; that is, do not mound the soil up about the plants excessively. After the plants have appeared above the surface of the ground the field may be harrowed. After the plants have attained a height of from two to four inches they should be given frequent cultivations with a five toothed cultivator. The number of times to cultivate will depend to a great extent on the season and the type of soil. The object is to keep down all weeds and to maintain a fine dust mulch over the ground, to conserve moisture. The cultivation should be continued until the end of the season, or until the growth of the plants renders it impossible without injury to plants.

Spraying must be done as a protection against the potato bug and against the disease known as potato blight. For the potato bug, spray with arsenate of lead, dissolving three or four pounds of arsenate of lead in fifty gallons of water and spraying just as soon as the bugs make their appearance. For the blight, spray with Bordeaux mixture about once a month. Spraying for the potato bug and the potato blight may be done at the same time. Mix the arsenate of lead with the Bordeaux mixture, using three or four pounds of arsenate of lead in fifty gallons of Bordeaux mixture.

Dissolve six pounds of copper sulphate in fifty gallons of water. (Use a wooden tub, as copper sulphate will corrode iron.) Slake six pounds of fresh, thoroughly burnt lime until it forms a milky paste, add it to the fifty gallons of water containing the copper sulphate and stir thoroughly. When arsenate of lead is added to this you have a combination spray that will protect against diseases and insects. The Bordeaux mixture alone will not protect against insects, or the arsenate of lead alone against diseases.

June Not Too Late for Garden

Garden, 20x20 feet.

2 feet. Beans, 2 rows, followed by Carrots, Spinach, Rutabagas in August.

2 feet. Witloof, 7½ feet. Parsley, 7½ feet. Parsnips, 1 row.

2 feet. Lettuce, Radish, Onion Sets followed by Cabbage in July, 2 rows. Onions, 1 row.

6 feet. Potato Bed, followed by Winter Garden.

6 feet. Pepper plants, 1 row. Beets. Okra, 1 row.

2 feet. Lima Beans. Squash between 2 rows.

2 feet. Peas, followed by Beans in August, 2 rows.

4 feet. Tomatoes, 2 rows. Cabbage between plants. Tomatoes, 2 rows. Beets between for early greens. White Turnips broadcast between, 1 row.

4 feet. Corn and Field Beans. Pumpkins all through. Cucumbers on outside row.

THIS plan for a lot 20x20, can easily be 20x20, provides for a substantial quantity of each vegetable of real food value, for summer as well as for winter, and also for an abundance of salad vegetables.

There are two points in June gardening to cheer the belated gardener. One is that seed planted when the ground is well warmed will germinate and grow without check, which is essential to good results. Another is that the many weeds seeds have sprouted and may be killed by a good raking. Practically everything can be planted in June this year, and a June garden will overtake and outgrow a May garden.

One important thing is to plant immediately after the preparation of the soil. This insures the moisture necessary to germination. Garden enthusiasts often plant when the notion seizes them, instead of when conditions are right.

Put the vegetables that require a light soil on that part of the ground that comes nearest to meeting these requirements. On a small plot it is possible to add sand and ashes to lighten it where needed. Put shade loving plants in sheltered positions. Make the ground as rich as possible and keep it stirred.

A good point for women to remember is to do the hard work in the garden in the early morning hours. No one who is unaccustomed to it can stand working in the heat of the midday summer sun, and there is no necessity for it in the ordinary garden. A few hours in the morning, getting up earlier for it, and a little time in the evening, if necessary, will keep the garden in good condition.

Potato Patriotism Is Winning Recruits Among Boys and Girls

NEW YORK, Saturday.

POTATO patriots are increasing in number daily. The Woodcraft League of America is devoting its energies to organizing clubs all over the United States whose chief work is the raising of potatoes. This substantial and essential vegetable is as costly as a luxury now, but it is going to cost more unless the population turns to and raises more potatoes.

The general gardener has been discouraged from undertaking this crop, but the specialists may well take it up, and the members of the Woodcraft League are potato specialists this year. A silk flag and a league pennant will be given to the boy or girl who raises the best crop from twenty-four hills, and similar prizes for the one who raises the largest potato.

The Y. M. H. A. of South Amboy, N. J., has a group of Woodcraft League boys running a farm camp, and most of the land has been put in potatoes. Boys from the Madison Square Church House are going to pay for their summer camp by raising potatoes.

In some places large tracts of land have been donated to Ernest Thompson Seton, chief of the Woodcraft League, to be worked on a cooperative system. In Westchester county the Committee for Defense gave the land, seed potatoes and other seed, supervision and teams, the League being asked to establish farm camps of boys to do the work.

Forty-eight children of Valley Cottage, N. Y., under the leadership of Mrs. Burton Emmett and the Misses Sullivan and Castles, teachers in the public school, have planted a large plot in potatoes. The children are divided into four teams and to each child is given two rows of twenty-five hills each, and four hills of corn, to provide material for a corn roast later. There will be prize and week to week competitions for the honor of having the club flag fly from the winning team's plot, and many features to keep the young agriculturists interested when the hot days come.

The Henry Street Settlement has adopted a novel plan to co-ordinate farming and camp life for its boys and girls this summer, in co-operation with the National Emergency Food Garden Commission, of Washington.

The summer camp, at Mahopac Falls, will be converted into an elementary agricultural school, where the boys and girls will be assigned tracts of land, which they will plant and cultivate. A large variety of seeds has been provided by the Food Garden Commission for the cultivation of the land.

The boys and girls will be given all the food they produce upon these tracts for the use of their families. The vegetables will be those which are comparatively easy to raise, but the range will be sufficient to give the young farmers an intensive training in garden work.

To guarantee the success of the experiment the work will be conducted under a trained gardener. Each boy and girl will have to give four or five hours' work every day upon the assigned plot of ground. On rainy days and at other times when these amateur farmers cannot work their tracts there will be talks on soil analysis, fertilizers and their effects, insects that attack vegetables and methods of combatting them, and other topics of kindred interest. An extensive library bearing on garden work is being established.

Durable Woods

WHILE many persons consider wood as lacking in durability and substantial qualities for building purposes, the fact that a number of houses built of the native woods in the early days of the settlement of this country are still standing, some of them in a fair state of preservation, disproves this contention. The lumber of which these houses was built was not well seasoned in the modern idea of that process, but lent itself well to the workmanship of the builders and carpenters who had a feeling for their work. Some persons to-day believe that woods are too much seasoned by artificial methods.

White pine was extensively used in New England and New York, and in the South the yellow pine was largely used. Although these woods are soft, they are not subject to decay and the softness makes them easy to work. When nails are driven through it does not split easily and the nail heads can be well set in.

These soft woods absorb and hold paint when well used for the exterior of houses, and the variety of grains and their toughness and softness make them admirable for interior trim whether they are to be painted, stained or varnished.

For outside porches wooden flooring should have the tongues and grooves painted with white lead as the floor is laid. This will make a waterproof floor that will stand all weathers for many years.

WAR PROSPERITY

Lessons From The American Civil War

DURING the year 1916 Canadians added more than two hundred millions of dollars to their bank deposits. The per capita average in savings banks was increased during this period from $55 to $92.25. Our export trade, during the year ending September 1, 1916, reached the grand total of one billion and fifty-two millions of dollars. Canada's total trade for the same period showed a gain of about 90%—mark that—within 10% of doubling the total trade of the previous twelve month.s.

The estimated value of the agricultural production of Canada's Western Provinces, during 1916, reached a total of more than two hundred and thirty-one millions of dollars. This great wealth was created by a rural population of only slightly more than three-quarters of a million people.

These figures indicate wonderful prosperity in Canada. They tell a story of prosperity in a nation at war that is almost unbelievable to the outside world. Residents of the United States who come into Canada express amazement at the signs of prosperity to be found on every hand. The crowds to be seen at the theatres and places of amusement and indulgence in practically every large city indicate that our people have plenty of money to spend. The manner in which the war loans have been over-subscribed may be taken as another indication of the flood of war prosperity in Canada to-day.

But what of the period after the war? Will this prosperity live? Will Canada at the close of the war be able to maintain the big balance of trade in her favor which is now being piled up at the rate of half a billion dollars per year? When the demand for munitions cease, will we be able to transfer all these factories to normal trade conditions and still hold this war-time prosperity?

Accepting the possibility that the war will continue for another year or more, it is time we were evolving some plan to care for these after the war conditions. But to plan is not enough. We must act. That Canada faces a serious situation in this approaching ante-war period is predicted in the history of the Civil War in the United States, where conditions in the Northern States were quite similar in many respects to these which now prevail in Canada.

From 1862 on to the close of the war, the Northern States showed prosperity on every hand. The raiding parties from the Confederate Army breaking through into Pennsylvania carried back to the half-starved South stories that Northern industries were going ahead as if the nation was running upon a well-organized peace schedule, instead of being engaged in a momentous civil war. The Chicago Tribune near the close of the war said, "Commerce, business, manufactures and labor are going ahead as in a profound peace, move with more impetus and whirling activity than peace ever knew. The New York Economist, however, pointed out that much of the apparent prosperity was fictitious. It declared that the laboring people were suffering because of war conditions, because wages had increased only about 12%, while the cost of living had more than doubled. Professor Roland P. Falkner, a recognized statistical authority of that day, presented two important conclusions after a careful study of civil war condition: "During the war period the advance in wages was not commensurate with the advance in prices." The late Nelson W. Aldrich, the great economist of the United States Senate, reviewed the apparent prosperity during and after the Civil War in the following: "Money waxes responded with unmistakable slowness to the inflating influence of the civil war. In 1865, when prices stood at 217 as compared with 100 in 1860, wages had only touched 143."

We find also that the demand for labor was the greatest in the history of the States up to that period. The extensive recruiting from the farms and farming districts, and the extraordinary demands of the munition plants, brought a shortage of labor everywhere. During the last two years of the Civil War many of the farms in the Central Western States remained idle because it was impossible to secure help. From 1863 to 1865 immigration from Europe to the United States increased at a rapid rate, yet the demand for laborers was so great that Congress saw fit to enact laws to still further increase this immigration.

According to Rhodes' "History of the United States," it was tradition in skilled labor circles that times were hard just before the war and began to be good during the Civil War. According to this authority the wage-earning mechanics bought lots and saved money during the war period, while the clerks, teachers and others on a salary basis suffered.

At the close of the war there was a rapid spread of enthusiasm for a continuation of the so-called prosperity. New enterprises were launched on every hand; speculation was rife. The returning soldier farmers migrated in large parties to fertile valleys tributary to the Mississippi. This broadening of the agricultural situation brought a demand for more rail mileage and something more than 15,000 miles were constructed in the West from 1865 to 1873. This work brought employment to thousands. The first annual report of the Commissioner of Labor, published in 1886, reviews this construction period, as follows:

"The stimulation to all industries resulting from the war, the speculative enterprises undertaken, the extension of credits, and the slackening of production necessarily caused a reaction; but the period was hardly spoken of by business men as one of any particular hardship. People for a while began to be conservative, but the impetus engendered by the war could not be overcome and it was not until the crash of 1873 that the effects of undue excitement in all branches of business and trade were thoroughly realized."

Comparing these Civil War conditions with those prevailing in Canada, we see many danger signals. The most important of these is the necessity for re-organizing production upon a sound and economic basis after our great munition plants have fulfilled their functions, and for increasing our agricultural production.

We take pride in the large agricultural production in Canada, yet it is startling the great quantities of farm products we purchase every year from the United States. The imports for 1913 shows that we bought 6,000,000 dozen more eggs than we sold the Americans, and that we consumed a quarter of a million pounds of butter made across the line and sold them practically nothing. We purchased 360,000 pounds more cheese from our neighbors to the south than we sold them, and we paid $160,000 in duty upon $1,000,000 worth of tomatoes grown in the States. We even bought 500,000 bushels of potatoes more than we sold.

Canada ought to produce all this farm produce within her own borders and have a balance for sale in the world markets.

It is estimated that some 200,000 workers are now employed upon munitions, and that 75% of this number will require different employment after the war. We will have some 200,000 soldiers returning to our shores after the war, of which number, it is estimated, we will be called upon to find employment for fully 150,000. In addition, there will be, quite probably, a flood of immigration to add to the labor market.

A practical scheme for re-organizing our manufacturing production should embrace a plan to induce American manufacturers to build branch plants in Canada. We must make a study of the market possibilities which our manufacturers will have at home and among the cognate nations after the war.

These After-the-War problems are worthy of the best efforts of our greatest statesmen and thinkers. Canada has won nationhood through her part in the great war on behalf of the Empire. She holds an opportunity to develop into a world power if she builds her future upon the proper economic foundation. But we must act quickly and intelligently if we are to make the most of these big opportunities.

REDMOND SOUGHT DANGER.

Could Have Remained at Headquarters, But Preferred to Lead Men.

LONDON, June 12—According to official details supplied to his relatives, the late Major William Redmond, M.P., who was killed in battle, had a post with a staff division which justified his remaining at headquarters. He earnestly insisted that it was his wish to accompany his regiment in the advance, and the general reluctantly consented. He was leading his men in an attack in the Wytschaete wood when he was fatally wounded and died in the Ulster Field Hospital. His body was taken to the little village of Locre, where it was buried Saturday at the urgent request of the nuns in the private garden of their convent. The funeral services were conducted by chaplains of the Ulster and Irish divisions, the grave was decorated with flowers by children of the village, and a volley was fired over it by a mixed company from the Ulster and Irish divisions.

In the Commons yesterday Premier Lloyd George paid tribute to deceased, saying it was for Ireland he had given his life. Sir Edward Carson said that if Ulster men and Nationalists could fight side by side in the common cause of human liberty, certainly he would do his utmost to assist in an Irish solution which would meet the ideals of liberty of all parties in Ireland.

R.A.M.C. ORDERLY SACRIFICES MUCH

Is Exposed to Great Dangers from Infectious and Mental Cases—Does His Big Bit

"How many people know anything about the everyday work of a hospital orderly — that least-of-all-considered wearer of the Red Cross?" asks a member of the R.A.M.C. "Let me give you an outline of what some of his duties are. Consider the ward orderly, one who is engaged entirely to assist the sisters and nurses. He must be on duty at six o'clock a.m., make the fires, clean the floors, carry coke or coal, clean the windows, fetch water, wash the plates, dishes, and cutlery, assist in dressing wounds or preparing the dressings, do much worse things, and be generally at the beck and call of sister, nurses, and anyone else who happens to be in, round, or about the ward. In the case of officer patients he must also be batman, valet, errand boy, and general odd man. And incidentally he must take the blame for anything that goes wrong in the ward.

Watching Mental Cases

"If it be a dangerous or a mental case he must sit up through the night watches, keeping a keen eye upon the patient for changes or, in the case of shell-shock and the like, for paroxysms of delirium. He must not so much as droop an eyelid. To sleep on night duty is as great a crime as sleeping on sentry-go and punishable to the same degree.

Itch and Scabies Ward

"Let me show you the inside of a phobie itch and scabies ward. See a long range of beds containing men who are bound up in bandages of boracic lint—every man thankful for some slight respite from eternal itching. All the dressings in these wards are done by R.A.M.C. orderlies; young men mostly, of low medical category, who risk contamination every day of their lives. True, they are provided with the strongest of antiseptics and are taught how to avoid infection, but with every care exercised accidents will happen. See a youth of tender years rubbing in the comforting ointment and consoling the sufferer after the fashion of a foster-mother.

"I was talking to a hospital ship orderly the other day. He had been in one of the torpedoed vessels and the horror of the sights he had seen had not yet left his eyes. He told me of the herculean work in the companion way, bringing the cot cases on deck while the ship was settling down; of the wonderful coolness of the R.A.M.C. doctors, the sisters, and the nurses. That man will never go to sea again as long as he lives."

HONORS FOR HEROINE

There were touching tributes from Serbians at the funeral of Mrs. Halley, Lord French's sister, who was killed by an enemy shell while on duty at Monastir. A little Serbian girl recited a poem at the graveside, says The London Mirror, while a woman refugee brought a wreath and lit a candle. Prince George of Serbia, General Milne, Lord Granville and all the members of the Serbian General Staff as well as a great number of officers from the French, Russian, Italian and Serbian armies walked behind the bier which was carried by soldiers to the military cemetery at Zeitinlik.

LONGBOAT'S OWN JOB

Famous Indian Enjoyed Dispatch Running at the Front

Some mysteries concerning the eccentric Indian runner, Tom Longboat, were cleared up by his old manager, Captain Tom Flanagan, when the latter returned from the front. After the 180th Sportmen's Battalion went overseas Private Longboat was reported from Sandiego, Calif. as giving public exhibitions there; but this Longboat proved to be a fake.

As one instance, though a rather extraordinary one, of the benefit of sport in the war, Capt. Flanagan referred to Tom Longboat. "Did I see Longboat? Sure I did. He is a dispatch rider on foot and the quickest and most reliable they ever had on the entire allied front. Motorcycles, automobiles and horses break down on the wretched ground they have to cover, but Tom Longboat's legs never do and he just revels in the work and is proud of it."

INNOCENT VICTIMS

Horrible Incident of Germany's Barbarity

Among other instances of German atrocities was the case of a Madame Pfeister and her young daughter, who were put to death for carrying letters from Alsatian families to relatives in Switzerland. The women were killed at Mulhausen, the mother being a horrified witness of the murder of her daughter before her turn came. The Huns allege they were spies, but the women contended they were innocent bearers of family letters which had no political or malicious purpose.

Plan Weddings Amid Shells

Writes a naval man: "The coolness of the men is somewhat wonderful. In the Jutland battle, while the shells were flying round, two stokers poked their heads above the hatchway to get a breath of fresh air and they were overheard planning their weddings. One of the fellows on our ship has a dog saved from the German dreadnaught Bleucher which went down in the Dogger Bank skirmish."

NAVAL OFFICERS AND THEIR RANKS

Every one will doubtless have noticed that officers of the Royal Navy have gold bands round the cuffs of their coats, and it is interesting to note what ranks the various bands signify. If the band is not continued round in a straight line, but has a curl or loop, the wearer is either a fighting officer or an engineer. Paymasters, surgeons, and others have the gold band without the loop. A sub-lieutenant has one gold band with a loop; a lieutenant-commander has three, two thick and one thin with a loop; a captain four thick rows and a loop; a commodore one treble thick gold band with a loop; a rear-admiral a band treble thick and another thick band.

An admiral has one band treble thick and three thick rows with loop. Officers of other branches of the service wear the gold bands of their rank, but without the loop. Royal Naval Reserve officers and Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve officers have the gold bands waved. A bit of purple between two rows of gold lace indicates an engineer; scarlet, a doctor; white, an accountant; and light blue, a naval instructor.

FLAGS OF THE NATIONS

History of National Standards and Their Origin

The introduction of flags into England, says a Canadian paper, is ascribed to St. Augustine, the missionary, and his followers, who after the conversion of King Ethelbert entered Canterbury in procession chanting and bearing small banners. The cross of St. George has been the British emblem since the fourteenth century. Before that time the crusaders wore it on their armor and among them it came to be known as the jack. The red standard of Great Britain did not attain its present form until after the union with Ireland in 1800. By Parliamentary enactment in 1801 the present Union Jack was brought into being by the addition of the cross of St. Patrick.

The color of the French flag was changed in 1124, when Louis the Fat carried the red oriflamme of St. Denis in his contests with Henry V., the German Emperor. This continued to be the French flag until the battle of Agincourt in 1415. In the meantime the blue flag made its appearance again, decorated now with the fleur de lis. In this form it was carried at Acre, Crecy and Poitiers, until in the fifteenth century it became the banner of France.

Waving flags are said to have been first brought to Spain by the Saracens. The Spanish colors, red and yellow, came from the old shields of Castile and Aragon. The crescent was originally the special mark of Constantinople, where for centuries it was used as a Christian symbol. There it was that the Turks first found it when they captured the city in 1453.

BERLIN IN WAR TIME

Life and Color Totally Disappeared in City's Streets

As in Budapest, so also in Berlin, writes a traveller, the middle-classes, who form so important a part of the population, have sunk several degrees in the social scale. A certain shabbiness and general air of poverty characterise them. Even in time of peace the men of Berlin were not much concerned about their external appearance, but now they are conspicuously unkempt and seedy. And the women, who gave color and life to Berlin in happier times, the well-dressed women have disappeared entirely. Actresses, artists, all the thousands of women who formerly lived a life of ease and happiness, are all hard at work in the munitions factories. The people go about in moody silence. Everyone has described all he feels a hundred times already, and the subject has become stale and uninteresting. There is nothing left for the German people to do but to wait, wait, and continue to wait.

The gallant Earl of Dunmore, V.C., when awarded the D.S.O., was the only member of the House of Lords who held the "Cross for Valour."

GERMAN PRINCE SHOWERS GIFTS ON CAFE DANCER

SWAYED BY CAPRICE OF WOMAN WHO "KNEW TOO MUCH."

PARIS.—Refugees arriving in Paris from the department of the Nord state that when Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria was quartered at X—he was a constant frequenter of certain cabaret to which he was attracted by the charms of a young dancer.

The prince had the region scoured for jewels and dresses for the object of his adoration.

OFTEN CHANGED HER HOME

One of this dancer's weaknesses was her mania for changing her residence. Every few weeks she would move from one house to another.

People in possession of houses which caught her fancy were forced to move in all haste, for fear of incurring the wrath of the prince.

A whole retinue of paperhangers and decorators was employed in preparing the dancer's new abodes, while, to gratify her extravagant tastes, large numbers of jewelers and dressmakers were constantly employed.

When the prince was recalled his dancer-love was removed to Brussels, as the authorities considered that "she knew too much."

SAY GERMANS STOLE SILVER.

An old woman refugee tells a story of how the church plate confided to her keeping was lost through her trust in a German officer.

In a burst of confidence she told the officer, who was billeted at her house, that she had charge of the plate and some church ornaments.

He advised her to hide them in a certain place in the cellar. Soon after ward he left the district, and the old woman found, on examining the hiding place, that the plate had gone also.

A woman who placed her valuables in a cupboard on the advice of a German officer had a similar experience.

After this man's departure she discovered that he had sawed a hole in the back of the cupboard and removed everything.

Was Anaemic FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. E. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was, good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FOE GIVES UP FIRST LINE POSITIONS

A GERMAN ZEPPELIN IS BROUGHT DOWN

GERMANS ABANDON IMPORTANT SECTIONS OF THEIR LINES

Tremendous Pressure of British Advance East of Messines Results in Enemy Withdrawal Between the River Lys and St. Yves --- Evacuation of Whole Triangle May Be Compelled --- British Make Considerable Progress East of Ploegsteert Woods.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, June 14.—The abandonment of important sections of their first lines between the River Lys and St. Yves by the Germans, because of the tremendous pressure of the British advance east of Messines, was announced by Field Marshal Haig to-day. "Our further advance to the east of Messines, combined with our pressure to the south compelled the enemy to abandon important sections of their first line between Lys and St. Yves," the British Commander-in-Chief asserted. The victory thus gained by the British forces again emphasizes the dominating strength of the Wytschaete-Messines Ridge, taken in last week's great assault. The territory surrendered to the British forces the German retirement still further back in the triangle formed by the River Lys and the Ypres-Lille Canal, the point of which is at Comines, where the two waterways join. The enemy position in this salient is exceedingly precarious due to the river and canal hampering rapid operations on their part, and military observers here to-day expressed the belief that the evacuation of the entire triangle might be foreshadowed by the first line withdrawal reported by Field Marshal Haig. "East of Ploegsteert Wood we followed the enemy closely and considerably progressed. In the neighbourhood of Gapaard we gained ground at night."

PARIS, June 14.—Major-General Pershing lunched to-day at Elysee Palace with President Poincare and other French notables. He was in close conference with French War Office leaders most of the day, and his headquarters in the Hotel Crillon were the scene of constant activity.

PARIS, June 14. — "Utter failure" of small German attacks around Braye, north of Vraconnt, north of Rheims and on the left bank of the Meuse, was reported in to-day's official statement. The assaults followed a general bombardment of these positions. French forces carried out a successful raid cleaning up a German trench east of Navaring Farm and taking ten prisoners.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—"The submarine war grows more barbarous every day. It has now reached the plane of deliberate murder for every ship sunk, and will so continue to the end. It is not the fault of the Germans that every torpedo does not produce a Lusitania massacre." That is the Kaiser's unrestricted submarine warfare, in the words of the man who probably knows more about the human side of the sea tragedy than any other —certainly more than any other American. He is Wesley Frost, American Consul at Queenstown, the port on the southwest coast of Ireland, where all the Atlantic ocean lanes to Britain come together. Off the shores near Queenstown, the thousands of ships which feed Britain pass by day and night. Frost is in Washington for a rest. For over two years he has been in attendance at the funerals of big liners and merchant ships struck down by the underwater terror.

PARIS, June 14.—"Peace is impossible now; we will go on to the bitter end," declared vice-Premier Viviani in the Chamber of Deputies to-day. Premier Ribot, relating to the abdication of King Constantine of Greece, asserted that all the Allies were united in the action taken.

Zeppelin Destroyed by British Airmen

LONDON, June 14.—The German Zeppelin L-31 was destroyed early to-day over the North Sea by British airmen, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons.

The above is the ninth Zeppelin which official statements have announced were destroyed by British forces.

According to the count of unofficial, but apparently reliable listings, published recently by the London Times, the L-31 is really the 35th German dirigible destroyed since the beginning of the war.

The last Zeppelin officially reported destroyed was shot down November 28, 1916, over the Yorkshire coast.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 14. — The national debt is expected to reach twelve hundred millions by the end of 1918. Before the war it was only 337,000,000. Money must be found somewhere to carry this huge obligation. It has been suggested that the Government should tax three hundred and fifty million dollars of domestic loans now exempt, but it is pointed out that it pledged itself not to do so. Another suggestion is that lands held for speculative purposes should be taxed. The railways, especially the wealthy C.P.R., are both holding tremendous areas of lands from production, and a tax on these would undoubtedly produce a substantial revenue.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—America is at war "in defense of our rights as a free people and of our honour as a sovereign government." President Wilson this afternoon thus stated why America is fighting in a speech solemnly vibrant with warning of the blood and suffering the country must endure, but deep with the conviction that the nation fights for the right. The President's address was a reconsecration of flag day. It was a speech that sprang in the bitterness of his arraignment of Germany, not of German people, but of Germany's autocrats. He pictured Germany's "military masters" in a sinister plot of years of incubation reaching out, corrupting, intriguing, scheming to deceive their own people and master the people and powers of other smaller nations, "To throw a broad belt of German military power and political control across the very centre of Europe and beyond the Mediterranean into the heart of Asia."

PARIS, June 14.—The Allies' forced abdication of King Constantine of Greece was not accomplished without some bloodshed, according to delayed advices from Salonika received to-day.

A Greek colonial regiment at Larissas treacherously fired on French cavalry, killing two French officers and four cavalrymen and wounding a score. Sixty Greek soldiers were killed, 51 officers, including a general, taken prisoner and 249 men captured.

BERLIN, via London, June 14.—"Good effects" in "hits" were observed over the "Fort of London" in the German aeroplane raid, yesterday, an official statement to-day declared.

There were a number of additional deaths during last night and this morning from the air raid, the exact number not yet being obtainable.

Wrecked buildings were still smouldering due to intensely inflammatory nature of incendiary bombs whose acid explosives inflicted agony on a number of injured.

YESTERDAY'S AIR RAID WAS MOST DEADLY OF ALL

Many of the Victims Were Women and Children — Injured Are Suffering Terribly from Burns Caused by Acid Fluids Contained in Bombs

NO MILITARY DAMAGE

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, June 14.—For pure fiendishness of purpose, and in the ghastly toll of innocent women, children and old men, Germany's air raid on London of yesterday was the most murderous of all the aerial piracy which England has seen. New destructive and pain making missiles were dropped by the invaders. Most of those injured suffered terribly from acid fluids contained in many of the bombs. Tiny children and women writhed in hospital beds to-day from great burns caused by these murderous missiles. Germany will report "success" in this air raid.

Here is the total of that "success," as compiled from official data to-day: Killed 97; children 28, women 16, men 55, including a score of feeble, aged men and cripples. Injured: Children 94, women 122, men 223. The buildings damaged were of an utterly non-military character. School houses were included in those struck. Tiny bodies were still buried beneath the wreckage to-day, it was believed. The public believes its aerial patrols and anti-aircraft guns drove off the Germans before they could do more killing over the capital city. There was no disposition to criticize the defensive measures. England realizes that the only way to stop the Germans entirely would be to cordon the air with a vast fleet of patrol aeroplanes. But this is exactly what the Germans want. The withdrawal of machines from the front would probably take away England's complete aerial supremacy on the western front, blindfold Field Marshal Haig's "eyes," and maybe seriously hamper the success of his great offensive. Because the public realizes this, it was determined to bear the losses calmly.

"OH! CECIL" HAS A STORY

It Will Be Told at The Grand in Musical Comedy on Monday

From reports to hand, the close of the present theatrical season will have a great finale when "Oh Cecil" the latest London musical comedy is offered at the Grand Opera House on Monday, June 18th. "Oh Cecil" to be presented here by James Dallas (Incp.) has been the big outstanding feature of the London, England successes and even with all the war activities against it, the Gaiety theatre has had, and still continues to do record business.

The comedy has a story.

For once in a long while this can be said truthfully about a musical comedy. Generally they are just a blending of clever songs, dances, pajeants and individual stars.

"Oh! Cecil" is a trifle different to its predecessors.

Cecil Algernon Van der Decker Marchbanks is the younger son of a member of the great "upper ten" and is something of a "silly ass, don'tcherknow." His father decided he is in the way around home and giving him three thousand pounds and a steamship ticket to New York, giving him what appears to be (from a look at Cecil), to be but the start of the [illegible].

Cecil decides to buy a departmental store. Of course, it was one that was "The Busy Bee" store in name only. Everybody is out to trim him, excepting one little saleslady—Well there is something else after that. As Cecil would say: "Take in the show, old top; What!"

Seats on sale to-morrow at the theatre. 'Phone orders for this show can only be held until six o'clock Monday.

The Lady of the House—If you want eggs to keep you must lay them in a cool place. The Celtic Attendant—I'll mintion it to th' hins at wanst, mum.

A GREAT DETECTIVE STORY FOR THE EXAMINER

The Examiner's new Serial Story, "The Postmaster's Daughter," by Louis Tracy, which will begin in Saturday's issue, will be found one of the most entertaining novels in the series of successes published by this paper. There are some most interesting characters, including two unusual Scotland Yard Detectives, and an amusing village "Sleuth." The mystery is well sustained, and the book is fascinating from the opening chapter to the last sentence. No one should miss the first instalment of Louis Tracy's great book on Saturday.

524,735 Available for War Service in First Two Classes

In Ontario Alone There Are 166,959 Single Men Between Ages of 20 and 29 Years According to Figures Announced --- Figures of Ontario and Quebec -- To-day's General Military News

OTTAWA, June 14.—The first three classes which would be called out under the conscription bill are: First, the single men, between twenty and twenty-four, inclusive; second, those between twenty-five and twenty-nine, inclusive, and third, those between thirty and thirty-four inclusive. It is these classes on which the Government will rely for reinforcements under conscription. In class one there are 319,810; in class two, 205,125; in class three, 112,011, making an aggregate of 636,746. This total might be regarded as Canada's potential army of single men between twenty and thirty-five years of age which could still be drawn upon, but, of course, allowance must be made for the physically unfits and those engaged in munitions work or agriculture, or other essential occupations.

Failing a complete and compulsory registration of all males, the Government can only proceed upon estimates as to the number of men practically available. Comparative figures for Quebec and Ontario may be given as ground work for a line of discussion which will probably develop over the bill, but in this case too, it is well to note that the figures in view of recruiting and other conditions, are likely to be misleading.

Figures for Ontario and Quebec.

For Ontario, the total population for class one (namely, single persons between twenty and twenty-four years inclusive) is 104,245. Of these, 75,473 are Canadian-born, 17,118 British-born, and 11,654 foreign-born. In Quebec, for the same class, the total is 76,692, of whom 68,390 are Canadian-born, 3,317 British-born, and 4,115 foreign-born.

In class two the figures are for Ontario: Total 82,714, of whom 41,504 are Canadian-born, 12,801 British-born, and 6,409 foreign-born. In Quebec, for the same class, the total is 34,028, of whom 28,448 are Canadian born, 2,738 British-born and 2,842 foreign born.

In class three the figures are for Ontario: Total 34,441, of whom 23,686 are Canadian-born, 6,874 British-born, and 4,071 foreign-born. In Quebec for the same class, the total an-born, 1,538 British born, and 1,866 foreign-born.

The total population for the three classes in Ontario is 201,400, and in Quebec 123,631.

The Kingston Whig says: Writing to a friend in the city, G. E. Marshall, who was secretary of the Arts Society at Queen's University last session, and now overseas with the Divisional Ammunition Column, says: "One night we gave the Queen's yell and by doing so met several Queen's men, all officers from Orts. but not stationed in any unit now. Among those who came were E. W. Pilgrim, who went over seas with the Queen's Battery, B. McKenzie, Robert Chown, "Jimmy" O'Dell and Troop of Arts '17. I also met 'Bill' Hughson, president of the A.M.S., P. Young and Exio May, but they soon moved away.

"On Thursday, May 17th, our bandoliers and spurs were demanded, and we were notified that all the artillery and most of the C.A.S.C. had been transferred to the infantry. We were not given a chance to choose the battalions we preferred to go into. Now the Divisional Ammunition Column, 73rd, 74th and 75th batteries are "C" and "D" companies of the 7th Reserve Battalion to reinforce the Princess Pats and the 38th battalion."

The Toronto News says:

Canadian soldier athletes are covering themselves with glory in the Old Country not only in the ring, but on the field. A few days ago boxers wearing the Maple Leaf, won every final in the soldiers' tournament confined to Australia and Canada and most of the preliminary events. At the big athlete meet held at Stamford Bridge the latter part of May the Canadian relay team, composed of Jack Tressiden, former half mile title holder, Charlie Kelly of the Toronto Central; Hector Phillip and Captain Campbell, of the West End Y.M.C.A., won from teams representing France, Italy and different British Battalions. Major Fred Smith, the well known physical instructor, writes in this connection that it "would have done your heart good to see the way in which the boys performed." Tressider, in the 100 yard event, defeated Donaldson, the crack sprinter, by four yards. The relay team in the Meds won from the British and South African infantry. There were 115 starters in the one mile handicap, won by Sergt. C. A. Thorpe, C.F.A. team from the 108 yard mark. Thorpe hails from Peterborough. On Victoria Day the Canadian troops held no fewer than nine meets and Tressider won four firsts.

By the employment of an average struck from the 1911 Dominion census and using the 1916 population figures for the Province, it is estimated that there are 464,092 eligibles in Ontario under the classes of the Conscription Act.

The total population of Ontario in 1916, according to the reports of the clerks of the different centres in their returns to the Provincial Government, was 2,579,864. These were divided as follows:

Townships and villages	1,194,257
Towns	385,970
Cities	1,019,637

The 1911 census gave the number of people resident in the Dominion in classes according to their age. Applying the conscription classes to the cities there would be 25 per cent. eligible for military service, Towns 18 per cent., and townships and villages 12 per cent. The discrepancy, in favour of the cities being no doubt due to the rush of the farmers' sons to the large cities as soon as they become of age. These averages applied to the 1916 population figures of the Province show the following elegibles.

Townships and villages	143,310
Towns	65,875
Cities	254,907
Totals	464,092

OTTAWA, June 13. — Sir Edward Kemp laid on the table of the House this afternoon figures showing the number of men in Canada available from the ages of twenty to forty-five, according to the 1911 census. Widowers and divorced men are included as single, and those whose conjugal condition is unknown are classified as married.

It is estimated by the Government that the increase in the male population between the ages mentioned since 1911 is between three and four hundred thousand. As approximately this number has been already recruited, the figures of 1911, it is thought, reflect rather closely present conditions as a whole, though changes have undoubtedly occurred in individual Provinces.

Between the ages of 20 and 45 there were 760,453 single men and

CANADIANS STOP GERMAN ATTACKS

Assault Preceded by a Heavy Barrage Broke Down Completely Under Canadian Artillery and Lewis Gun Fire

FOE'S LOSSES HEAVY

(By Stewart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press.

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, June 13.—The activity on the Canadian front, which is still continued, is still confined to the northern sector, in the region of Souches River. His loss of several strong points during the past few days has stirred the enemy up to vigorous action. Last night he counter-attacked in the hope of recovering the machine gun positions from which a dozen German machine guns have been removed during the past few days and the Canadian Lewis guns substituted. The attack was preceded by a heavy barrage, but it broke down completely under the Canadian artillery and machine gun fire. The assaulting party retired in the direction of Lens, after sustaining material losses.

TEUTON LOSSES SEVERE.

How costly to the enemy the continuous activity in the Souches region it has been conclusively established by documentary evidence. The company roll in one of the enemy battalions in the line only two days shows that during these two days twenty-five out of a total strength of 114 were killed or wounded. On the third day seventeen were captured, making a total loss of 42. Other companies and battalions in the area must have lost men in about the same proportion. Some were subjected to gas in perhaps a higher ratio. It is extremely useful occasionally to be able to check up in this exact way statements of a more general sort that the enemy suffers severely as a result of our never-ending shelling.

YPRES SITUATION REVERSED

A veteran officer, who passed through the worst phases of the defence of the Ypres salient, says the conditions now are exactly the reverse of those of a year ago, so well remembered by thousands of men now mustered out who took part in the great events of June, 1916. The Canadians then had endured the enemy's concentrated fire from commanding positions. Now the Germans suffer greater losses daily from Canadian guns that are posted on even more advantageous ground than the enemy then occupied.

When the reader is told that there is nothing but artillery activity on the front, he should remember that, in the long run, the guns cause more loss and more seriously lower the morale of the enemy than rifles or bombs. Only well-placed machine guns rival the artillery as a means of winning the war. The German artillery is no longer a match for the guns available for use by the allies on the West front—reinforced though as the enemy is believed to have been, by many heavy guns from the Russian and Roumanian fronts. Instructions to the enemy gunners to use their ammunition sparingly are also increasingly frequent. This is indisputable evidence of the enemy's stress.

MANY SPORTING EVENTS.

Behind our front, in rest billets, young Canada is having a great time with a fine equipment in sporting material supplied by friends at home. Baseball and soccer football are the prime favourites in the line of sport, with cricket rather a poor third. Besides cinemas there are also crowded horse shows, which give both officers and men a chance of proving their skill at horsemanship. One of the finest horsemen in the corps had a nasty fall the other day while riding, but he is now recovering rapidly.

Car Owners Are Invited

Every car owner in Peterborough is invited to join in the big motor parade on July 2nd, whether a member of the Auto Association or not. The cars will be decorated with flags and bunting.

MR. BURNHAM IS READY NOW TO SUPPORT THE BILL

"Government Put Its Ear to the Ground None Too Soon To Please the Majority of the Electors," Says Ottawa Journal

LA PATRIE'S COMMENT

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., June 14.—The Evening Journal will say editorially today: "The further development of the government policy looking to conscription of wealth, fully satisfied Mr. Burnham, the member for West Peterborough, who will give his hearty support to the Borden bill. It cannot be denied that the government put its ear to the ground none too soon to please the majority of the electors."

LA PATRIE'S OPINION.

MONTREAL, June 14.—La Patrie, under the caption, "Conscription of Wealth," says editorially: "Mr. Burnham, member for Peterborough, acted perhaps with too much haste in breaking with his party in order to assert the demand that the government impose conscription of wealth, as well as of blood. According to advices we have received from Ottawa conscription of wealth might come far more quickly than some people think. In truth the government from now on impose that form of conscription in two ways, by exactly the making over of titles and bonds in sufficient quantity to guarantee the war loans contracted abroad, as has been done in France and England and by creating an income tax.

"Public opinion seems to rally to the idea of exacting the greatest sacrifices of war from the rich and the government should be led to yield to this pressure by the increasing cost of our share in the war."

AFTER GENERAL WILSON'S SCALP

Le Canada Wants Him Removed from Command in Montreal

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, June 14. —In black two column type Le Canada criticizes one of Sir Sam Hughes' appointments, General E. W. Wilson, and says: "Send away General Wilson and give us Fages or Lessard" as district military commander. It can be understood that a city of the importance of Montreal has the right to have at head of the military staff a man who speaks the language of the majority. "General" Wilson is only a parade "General," and the only "General" about him is his title of general manager of the Canada Life Insurance Co. General Wilson's only qualification to fill the high office he has been given is his friendship with the ex-Minister of Militia, Sir Sam Hughes, of loud sounding memory."

THE FUNERAL OF PETER McAULIFFE

The remains of the late Mr. Peter McAuliffe were laid at rest this morning at Ennismore. The pallbearers were: Messrs. Patrick and Martin McAuliffe, E. Maloney, Ennismore: Neil Murray, Emily; Neil Powers, Lindsay; James Guiry, Emily. A service was held at St. Peter's Cathedral at 8 o'clock before leaving for Ennismore.

FUEL AND FOOD CONTROL.

In the thirty-fourth month of the war, the government has appointed a food commissioner, who will have complete control of the fuel supplies of Canada, their distribution and prices at various centres throughout the country. The measure is regarded by many as too long delayed, but better late than never. The new commissioner, Mr. C. A. McGrath, chairman of the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission, is held to be a good man for the position. We don't know how far the government's action was influenced by the precedent of doing something set by the city council of Peterborough, in establishing and preparing for stocking, a municipal coal yard, but it is a timely, if tardy action.

If the government shows as much good intention in dealing with the food supply as with the fuel, we may manage to get enough food to use the fuel to cook it with. People with money, who are buying what they want with little regard for the cost, don't feel the pinch of prices, like the man or housewife of limited means, who has to buy less or of inferior quality in order to make both ends meet. We want an energetic food controller, like they have in England, where the food scarcity and necessity of economy are illustrated by the fact that even starch in laundried articles is forbidden and standing collars and starched shirt fronts are a taboed luxury. The food controller says that starch—a food—shall be more wisely used for internal than for external use. This extreme measure indicates to what strong measures the British people submit in order to conserve the food supply. We want something like this in Canada to deal with food conditions and especially to furnish an explanation of high prices; to furnish an explanation of why bread can be bought and sold, and is bought and sold, more cheaply in England than in Canada, when we grow the wheat the British bread is made from.

and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy."

FISH AS FOOD.

In the House of Commons last week during the discussion of a motion to establish a department of fisheries, some interesting information was brought out. It was claimed that the fisheries interest was important enough to have a department of its own. It was held that the industry was not developing rapidly enough, though the output of Canada's fisheries had increased in value from 20 millions in 1896 to 35 millions in 1916. Mr. Jameson of Digby, said that with proper attention the output in 1916 should have had a value of 60 millions, and in five years this could be increased to 100 millions. One way to develop our fisheries is to promote the eating of more fish, and the Ontario Organization of Resources Committee is working on the utilization of Ontario fish as a means of reducing the high cost of living. As a first step in this campaign the committee has issued a booklet which aims to popularize fish-eating by giving photographs of our chief fish and instructions as to how to cook them. As to the food value of fish there is no doubt, and for many of us important interest lies in the fact that in addition to the general alimentary value of fish as a food, its brain developing and stimulating quality is recognized. We don't know how much of the pabulum of the people of the Maritime Provinces is composed of fish, but we do know that in proportion to population the Maritime Provinces furnish more men that become conspicuous in all walks of public life than any other area. If fish improve our brains give us more fish, for we need all the wisdom possible to help us do our duty at this time of crisis, and prepare for the even harder duty that will confront us after the war is over and the time of reconstruction comes. At present, however, our duty is to help win the war; and in this duty the problem of food supply largely enters. We need to conserve food that we may supply more to the allied countries, especially the Mother Country. If we eat more fish we shall save other forms of food, and thus help the shortage that is, in part, the cause of the high prices that afflict us. We need fish to give us brains enough to deal with the influences that gamble with our food supply largely enters. We need ing a temporary and artificial scarcity that is an excuse for exorbitant prices. The people of Canada are making big sacrifices to help in the war and our government should not penalise them by permitting onerous exploitation of the people's bread and butter.

Next Saturday fishing becomes lawful.

DEMOCRACY AND TITLES.

The Toronto Star, in an article dealing with the responsibility for the planting of a hereditary aristocracy in Canada, asks who is responsible; and pertinently inquires if this can be done without the advice and consent of the government of Canada, or "is it possible that it is done without their advice and consent?" No, the latter is hardly possible; the British government through the King would not so outrage the autonomy of Canada. It is probable, and morally certain, that it is done by the government of Canada, which recommends the candidates for decoration. In this action the government is going contrary to the sentiments of sensible Canadians and contrary to the democratic spirit for which the allies and Canada are fighting, and in which interest Sir Robert Borden is imposing the lamentable necessity of conscription, which, in one way, is also contray to popular sentiment, in that it spares the wealth on which titles are founded, and expends its full force upon Canadian manhood. The government in recomemnding hereditary titles, also attends it with another wrong. It makes partisan use of the power given it to be exercised impartially in the interests of the people of both parties. No Canadian, as a rule, no matter how distinguished for character and public service is chosen who is not of a political stripe to match the party shade of the government. Thus recommendation of Knighthood is made a sort of social "graft"—an appanage of paritsanship. Hereditary aristocracy is a weed in the soil of Canada. Aristocracy etymologically means the "rule of the best;" and the best are not those who make money and command the influence that money gives An aristocracy founded on wheat or tin-ware or beef or pork or stock gambling is not the genuine article. Hereditary titles are an anachronism. This war is shaking the foundations of aristocracy; and the Countess of Warwick of long aristocratic lineage, is demanding the taking of the lands of hereditary aristocrats in England, and dividing them for access and use by the people. We are fighting this war for something more important than tinsel titles; fighting in the interests of the people, in the interests of manhood—something so great that Sir Robert Borden thinks it is the only thing worth conscripting.

Sir William Macdonald's tobacco has gone up in smoke; but over two millions of the money it made has gone up in the shape of the walls of schools and colleges and hospitals.

WILLIAM REDMOND

A very noble figure has passed away in William Redmond, a champion of humanity. Irishman, gentleman in the finest sense of the word, Home Ruler, statesman, soldier, not from liking, but from high principles, he was a man who, take him all in all, the world does not look upon many of his life. He was an honour to Ireland; he was an honour to the British army and to the British Empire. He did not live to see the achievement of that home rule for Ireland which was the dear wish of his heart, but being dead he yet speaks for it. May the message he leaves reach Irish hearts that have hitherto been obdurate to the cause of Irish union. May the message which beyond that he leaves of the finest bravery and the highest loyalty—loyalty to humanity—have value for all of us.—Ottawa Journal-Press.

NEW BRIDGE NAMED "THE C. P. R. FOOTBRIDGE"

Alderman McIntyre Held Out for "The Edgar" Footbridge — Board of Works Meet — General Business

The annual inspection of the streets, bridges and sidewalks by the Board of Works Committee of the City Council was accomplished yesterday despite the absence of several of the Aldermen who probably are not in accord with the time-worn custom that had its inception when Adam was a Boy Scout. At the close of a lug day the committee met in the City Hall and in the space of a couple of hours disposed of a slateful of business. That the aldermen were in no mood for frivolity was indicated when the matter of naming three new bridges came up for discussion. As a result of the committee's deliberations the new bridge to be erected over the Hydraulic Company's dam, at London street, will be known as the "Hazlitt street bridge," he new overhead bridge to be erected on Hunter street, will be known as the "Hunter street bridge" while the new foot-bridge will be officially known as the C. P. R. bridge," the new overhead bridge to been named Ald. McIntyre returned to the meeting, having been called away to attend a meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee. He insisted on having the new footbridge called the "Edgar foot-bridge." To prove his sincerity in the matter the North Ward representative moved a motion re-naming the bridge "The Edgar foot-bridge." This was seconded by his right bower, Ald. Stratton. It only needed the vote of the Committee to convince the two aldermen that the majority of the members were not in accord with the suggestion of Ald. McInyre and the prospective labour candidate.

TWO ELM TREES.

A letter was read from J. W. Taylor, asking permission to cut down two elm trees at the corner of Bethune and Smith street. The request was granted, the work to be done under the supervision of City Engineer Parsons.

SANITARY CONDITIONS.

A letter was read from Henry Hope and Sons, regarding sanitary conditions at their factory. The matter was referred to the City Engineer with instructions to bring in a report.

The Utilities Commission was granted permission to erect a number of poles for the extension of their service.

REPAIRS TO PAVEMENTS.

A report was read from the City Engineer regarding the repairing of cuts in the asphalt pavements made by the Utilities Commission and Gas Company. The Standard Paving Co. suggested that the city have the concrete base put in and they would send a man to repair the asphalt surface. The City Engineer was instructed to have the reparis made.

A letter was read from the Henr Hope and Sons regarding a sidewalk to their factory. The Company will be informed that the walk is on the list of new sidewalks to be constructed this year.

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSION

A letter was read from the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, regarding extensions asked for in connection with the Street Railway and stating that owing to abnormal conditions they must be postponed. The commission expressed its willingness to proceed with the extension on Monaghan Road, providing the street is properly graded. It was stated that arrangements had been made between the city and the North Monaghan Council to grade the road. This arrangement will be reported to the Commission.

MOVE SPUR LINE.

The Quaker Oats Company will be requested to move the spur line track on Driscoll Terrace at the corner of Douro street, ten feet to the west and the Utilities Commission will be requested to remove the pole at the south-east corner of Driscoll Terrace and Douro street to a position to be designated by the City Engineer.

A request for a sewer on Gilchrist street was referred to the Board of Health.

BUSINESS ENLARGING.

Permission was granted to the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, to put a step at their office on Water street. The work will be done under the direction of the City Engineer.

OLIVE AVENUE.

A letter was read from Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, saying that as Olive Avenue was less than 66 feet in width it would be necessary to make an application to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board before the Council could take it over. The City Engineer was instructed to ascertain and report as to the cost of extending Olive Avenue to Rink street and as to whether the property owners would give property to widen the present street.

Not Wanted.

Mrs. Winslow of Millbrook, will be informed that the city is not in the market for a watering cart, which she offered to sell to the city for $200.

H. W. Morgan was granted permission to connect two houses on Robinson street to the sewer with one six-inch connection.

Accounts Passed.

A number of accounts were ordered to be paid, including one to Ephgrave and Barrett, and two to R. J. G. Sutherland. In recommending the payment of the last two accounts, the committee made it clear that the plumbers of the city be notified that in future the city will not pay for repairing sewer connections except in cases where the property owners sign the agreement previously ordered by the Council to be signed in such cases and then only in accordance with that agreement. A resolution to this effect was adopted by the committee.

Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board of Works, and City Engineer Parsons were instructed to secure a steam pile hammer for use on sewer construction.

EAT FISH AND HELP WIN THE WAR

Nature has stored the waters of Ontario with fish of many kinds. On the one hand we have bass and brook trout to delight the angler, and on the other whitefish, salmon trout and many others to feed millions as the fish of commerce. This rich heritage costs man nothing to feed and bring to maturity—it waits only to be harvested. It is our duty to-day in this time of food shortage to eat fish in order that meat and grain may be saved for export. Fish is waiting to be caught—it takes both time and money to raise meat and grain, and these are needed at once by our soldiers and kinsmen overseas.

Fish is a Good Food.—The food value of anything depends upon its chemical make up and its digestibility. In both respects fish stands very high. It contains both protein, the body building compound, and fat, the fuel or energising compound, in excellent proportions, and it is more easily digested and more readily assimilated to the bodily needs than meat.

The more machines of one kind a factory turns out the less each will cost; so the more fish we eat the less it will cost a pound to supply it to us. A certain amount of machinery is required to catch and distribute fish, but once there is machinery—the fisherman, the railway, the distributor, the retail merchant—to get fish to us at all, it can supply ten times the quantity for about the same overhead cost. If therefore we assure our fish merchants of a regular and increasing demand they can afford to reduce the cost per pound, and at the same time give a much better service to their customers.

Everyone knows whitefish and salmon trout and herring, and they are much in demand for food. It is, however, too often overlooked that pickerel, pike, burbot, carp, perch, catfish and eels are just about as good food and quite as palatable when properly cooked. Moreover, they cost far less. To reduce the cost of living ask for these cheaper fish. You should get them for 10 cents a pound or less.

Ontario's citizens can help to win the war by eating fish, and particularly by eating the cheaper, though scarcely poorer, kinds of fish. Our soldiers and kinsmen overseas need every pound of fish we can send them and the purest patriotism would suggest that we should eat the food which we cannot possibly export in preference to that which can be exported and upon which our allies rely. Eat fish because it is a wholesome, palatable food. Eat fish and reduce the cost of living. Eat fish as a patriotic duty.—Ontario Organisation.

CHICAGO, June 14.—Judgment for $18,000, obtained in the Circuit Court by the widow of Frank Parks, who was killed while employed as a switchman for the Grand Trunk Western Railway Company, was sustained by the Appellate Court yesterday. The increase in the amount of the judgment is thus commented on by three judges of the Appellate Court: "We cannot be unmindful of the fact that the money value of life and health is appreciating and that the earning capacity of money is steadily diminishing during recent years."

NORWEGIANS BITTER OVER TORPEDOINGS

Outburst in Press Against a Nickel Syndicate Exporting to Germany

SPY DANGER ALSO AGITATED.

RUMORS THAT HIDDEN RADIO STATIONS SEND THE SUBMARINE NEWS OF THEIR QUARRY.

CHRISTIANA, Norway. — Several recent happenings have served to emphasize the anti-German feeling which manifests itself prominently these days in the press and in public expression in Norway.

One of these was the widespread demand for the cancellation of the engagement of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra (under Arthur Nikisch) to play here on May 11. Even the newspaper Morgenbladet, which hitherto had been friendly in its attitude towards Germany, protested in a very satirical article against a German institution like this intruding upon Norwegian hospitality at a time when Norwegian ships were being torpedoed by the hundreds and Norwegian sailors engaged in their country's trade, were being killed by the Germans.

Other newspapers and public men were even more caustic and energetic in their demand for the cancellation of the concert.

This free expression of opinion followed shortly the defeat of a bill imposing a very strict censorship upon the press, with heavy penalties of imprisonment and fine for papers publishing anything likely to disturb Norway's "friendly" relations with another country. The Minister of Justice, M. Amberahamsen, had to quit the Cabinet on this defeat. A general rumour that this bill had been inspired from Germany drew forth a public denial by the Cabinet.

Anti-German feeling also caused an outburst in the press against a Norwegian nickel syndicate, which, from a period before the war, had contracts with Germany for the export of refined nickel ore mined in the vicinity of Christiansand. This export had been greatly increased during the war, being one of the few sources from which Germany was able to get nickel. It was said here that without this Norwegian supply the manufacture of torpedoes in Germany would be greatly crippled.

Norway, it has been pointed out, gets this nickel back again in the form of German torpedoes, which sink its vessels and kill its sailors. The company has been severely criticised in the press and in private for in this way indirectly profiting at the expense of Norway's ships and men, but it pleaded inability to break its contracts, declaring it was a governmental function to decide regarding exports and imports.

During this discussion in the press part of the melting plant burned down the other day, and for want of special machinery, it is said, rebuilding will be impossible in the near future. By this means the export of nickel may be stopped for a while and the Government relieved of the necessity of passing upon the question of prohibiting it. An affirmative decision, it is considered, would have been likely to lead to German measures of reprisal.

The spy question has been another one widely agitated, in view of the messages said to be reaching German submarines giving information as to the movements of Norwegian vessels. It has been asserted that the Germans have established wireless plants at secret places along the Norwegian coast, as it has been shown that German U-boats have been lying in wait for Norwegian ships just outside territorial waters within a couple of hours after the ships had left port.

In one case the submarine officer is quoted as having scored the Norwegian commander for being "overdue," as he ought to have been in the particular spot in question two hours previously, the U-boat Captain informed him.

The Norwegian authorities declare the operation of a wireless station is impossible without their knowledge, but the recent discovery of a small wireless plant on an island outside of Bergen—the property of a schoolboy, who was operating it experimentally, not knowing that it was illegal—casts doubts upon this statement.

Private interests, chief among which are shipowners, have offered high rewards for the detection of spies promising $2,500 for the first one caught and proved guilty, and $250 for each one in addition.

INTERESTING SUBJECTS FROM RECENT CONVENTION OF DOCTORS

SAYS MAN IS BUT A CIVILIZED CHUMP.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, State Health Commission of Indiana, speaking in New York recently, said that man was to blame for many of his fancied ills.

"What a chump civilized man is to do so many things to make himself weak and sick," he said. "To make sure of sickness and weakness he begins with infancy. He will not give his child enough air, he will not take care of his children's teeth. If his child has a running ear he will let it run. He assaults his child's stomach with awful food. He gives his baby soothing syrups. He deforms his child's body with ill-fitting seats in school. He supplies his child with drinking water which is polluted with sewerage, and when the innocent one dies of typhoid he rolls his eyes toward heaven and says, 'The Lord has taken away.'"

BAD TEETH CAUSE CANCER.

Speaking before the Section on Stomatology at the Waldorf-Astoria, Dr. L. Duncan Bulkley of New York, said that many cases of cancer of the mouth were caused by bad teeth.

"The dentist," he said, "has a great responsibility concerning cancer of the oral cavity, for he of all others is most likely to see the beginning of the disease, and an early warning followed by proper treatment lessens the prospect of an unfavorable termination; for the end results of cancer in this locality are commonly very discouraging. It is particularly desirable that the dentist should attend most carefully to the condition of the teeth, for rough, broken and decayed teeth play a not inconsiderable part in the production of cancer of the mouth."

TOO MUCH KNIFING.

The Section on Surgery of the Association, including practically all the leading surgeons of the United States started a movement yesterday to halt the performing of unnecessary operations by incompetent surgeons. A committee of ten to consider ways and means to this end was named after a strong address by Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan of Chicago, in which he decried the large number of operations performed where the patient did not need an operation. He blamed this on ignorance, incompetency, and dishonesty. The three essentials of safe surgery, he said, were honesty, good judgment and scientific training. He said surgeons should frankly admit to the public that there was such a problem and that it could be eliminated only through education, criticism and publicity.

CATS CAUSE ASTHMA.

The ancient assertion of asthmatic patients that their trouble was due to cats or dogs was upheld in an address before the section on the Practice of Medicine by Dr. I. Chandler Walker of Boston. By means of a skin test, which consisted in placing a small amount of the substance to be tested on a little scratch in the skin of the patients, the cause of asthma was determined in 55 per cent. of a given number of patients. In 20 per cent. of these cases horse hair or dandruff was the cause of asthma; in 5 per cent. cat hair was the cause; in 18 per cent. bacteria were the cause; in 15 per cent. wheat flour was the cause; in 25 per cent. the pollen of plants; in 7 per cent.. common foods, such as eggs, milk, or chicken meat; and in 10 per cent. a combination of these causes. The horse and cat hair asthmatics were relieved by treatment with proteins found in the hair; the bacterial asthmatics were relieved by vaccines, and the pollen asthmatics by treatment with the pollen causing the disorder.

A new operation for the cure of paralysis resulting from infantile paralysis was revealed to the members of the Orthopedic Survey Section of the American Medical Association at the Waldorf-Astoria by Dr. John Joseph Nutt of New York. He explained that the paralyzed muscles and a neighboring sound muscle are exposed lengthwise and the surfaces sutured together, the nerves and vessels from the sound muscle thus growing into and functioning for the paralyzed muscle. He demonstrated by lantern slides of a case taken at frequent intervals that the nerve growth did actually take place. He said he had operated on 18 muscles in 13 children and that 11 of the patients showed return of the use of their paralyzed muscles. Dr. Nutt said that as the operation is not destructive of muscle, nerve or other tissue, and cannot make the condition of the patient worse, it should be recommended for every available case.

OTHER TOPICS.

The value of blood transfusion by the use of sodium citrate as an anticoagulant in the treatment of wounded soldiers was brought out in the discussion of a paper by Dr. Bertram M. Bernheim of Baltimore before the Section on Surgery. Dr. Bernheim pointed out blood could be transported over great distances in flasks without coagulating. He said that the only disadvantage was a slight chill not observed when the blood was transfused directly. George I. Miller of Brooklyn exhibited apparatus for transfusing blood under conditions that might be otherwise difficult, such as in trenches.

Following on the call of Dr. Chas. H. Mayo, the new president of the association, for national prohibition, Dr. Charles C. Leib of New York, told the members of the Section on Pharmacology at the Hotel Manhattan that the popular belief that alcohol was a heart stimulant was false. He said that experiments in the hearts of rabbits and cats showed that the heart was capable of utilizing alcohol. He said that the animals' hearts after injections of alcohol, gave a few quick beats and then subsided to a point below that before the injection.

In an address in the afternoon before the Section on Stomatology, Dr. Joseph M. Levy gave the results of an investigation of the relations between dental and eye diseases. As the result of dental treatment 14.1 per cent. of a series of eye infections were cured; 36.85 per cent. were materially benefited and 49 per cent. showed no improvement.

Why Women Feel Benefit

Nature's best handiwork never was intended to be handicapped by illness as so many women are. Nature's intention never was that women should be less capable, as women, than men are as men. Yet how frequently young girls, business women, housewives and mothers complain of feeling unfit. What makes the growing girl so often depressed, the housewife and mother so often overwhelmed with worries and cares. What gives rise to the headaches, the backaches and weakness that unfit women for life's joys and duties? The answer is Bloodlessness.

Girls grow into unfit women if they lack the help of new blood during their teens. Business girls become bloodless from too much indoor occupation, hasty meals and lack of exercise. Housewives overtax their blood by overwork, over-anxiety, nursing, neglecting the need of sufficient sleep, regular meals and fresh air relaxation. Hence the blood becomes watery and impure.

But women who keep their blood rich and red never need feel illness. Wholesome food, sufficient rest, out-of-door relaxation and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will keep every woman's health right. These pills alone have proved a priceless boon to weak anaemic women, because of the new rich red blood which every dose helps to make. Every girl and every woman should occasionally take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to keep her blood rich and pure, and every weak and ailing girl and woman should take them without delay.

You can obtain these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHAT THE HUNS WANT NOW

By Henry Daley

According to the Bavarian Staats-Zeitung, the official organ of the Bavarian government, and therefore presumably read by more Junkers than any other paper in the world, Germany does not expect any war indemnities—and in this regard she is not likely to be disappointed. At present her modest requirements are:

An agreement with her enemies to obtain raw materials;

Protection of German interests in foreign countries;

Permission for foreign trade to her utmost capacity;

Return of all captive ships;

Return of all captured colonies.

The time may come some day when any one of the Allies will, if Germans show signs of becoming humanized, consent to supply to them raw materials upon terms to their mutual advantage. That all of the Allied Powers or any one will submit to any dictation upon the subject as to the price of peace is perfectly preposterous. They are fighting for freedom and would not give a buton for freedom with their hands tied.

The demand for the protection of German interests in foreign countries is of the same character. "German interests in foreign countries may cover a multitude of sins. The phrase would presumably include the recognition of German espionage as one of the privileges of German diplomacy. It might cover the right to blow up factories and bridges. It certainly would give the German government the right to insist upon most favoured nation treatment in the commercial treaties between non-German nations.

The Allies will certainly, as a matter of justice concede to Germany the right of foreign trade to its utmost capacity, provided that the exercise of this right does not interfere with anybody else's rights.

The return of all captured ships is a matter that will have to be considered in connection with the question of the indemnities that will have to be paid by Germany.

The return of the captured colonies is something that may as well be forgotten by the Germans. They make atrociously bad neighbors. It would be nice return to the Australians and New Zealanders to compel them to give up the German colonies in the South Pacific which they captured. As colonies they are of absolutely no value to the Germans who are utterly destitute of the instinct of colonization. As a constant menace to Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines and Japan they might serve a useful purpose to the Huns, in a way that it is not our province to encourage.

DICKENS A GREAT WALKER.

Herbert Spencer, while Homesick, Made 48 Miles in One Day.

Charles Dickens was a great walker. "Twelve, fifteen, even twenty miles a day, were none too much for Dickens." Sir Walter Scott, too, "walked twenty to thirty miles without fatigue, notwithstanding his limp." Browning, when past seventy, could take long walks, and Wordsworth could walk twenty miles a day after he has passed sixty years of age.

De Quincey considered fourteen miles a day necessary for his health, and Lamb, notwithstanding his "almost immaterial legs," could walk well. Beethoven always took his daily walks of five or more miles in all manner of weather, while Turner travelled twenty miles a day sketching as he walked.

Herbert Spencer, at thirteen, in a fit of homesickness, walked forty-eight miles one day, and forty-seven the next; and it is claimed that Tolstoy at fifty-five, walked 130 miles in three days.

Shall I Put Rubber Heels on Your Shoes?

"Rubber heels last longer and keep the shoe in better shape."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

PRIVATE F. NEWTON DIED OF HIS WOUNDS IN AN ENGLISH WAR HOSPITAL

His Father Receives Particulars of Passing Away of Local Soldiers Who Went Overseas with the 136th Battalion

A MILITARY FUNERAL

Mr. John Newton of Cavan has received the following letter in regard to the death of his son, Pte. F. Newton, who went overseas with the 136th Battalion, and who formerly lived on Park street:

Cullen House, Regent street,
Lake-on-Trent, April 30, 1917.

My Dear Sir,—You will probably have heard from other sources of the death from wounds of your gallant son, Pte. F. Newton of the 87th Canadians.

It may be a comfort to you to know that I am a Wesley Methodist minister, and that I visited your son several times during his sickness, and found him bright and confident in his Christian faith. It was my custom to sit by his bedside and quote to him old Methodist hymns, such as "How Sweet the Name of Jesus sounds in a Believer's Ear," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul, Let Me to His Bosom Fly." He listened eagerly, and his face lit up with a smile. I am sure he was gloriously ready for the call of Christ to the Heavenly world.

I shall never forget his triumphant countenance and I rank it a high privilege to have known him. I have officiated at his funeral to-day. The scene was very impressive. A number of wounded soldiers followed him to his resting place in a beautiful cemetery overlooking fields and trees. After we had committed his body to the ground in sure and certain hope of the resurrection to eternal life, a firing party fired three volleys over his grave, and a bugler sounded "The Last Post." Another British comrade was laid to rest in a grave near by, a few minutes later.

I thought you might like to possess a copy of the entry of his death, and so enclosed one in my letter.

I understand that Pte. Newton's wife has preceded him into the eternal world, and that there are now two orphan children. "God bless the children." They will learn of the gallant deeds and brave death of their father, and will grow up to think of him with pride, and to love and revere his memory. I pray that the loving Father may have them in His care.

My sympathies are with you, and with all other grieving friends. May the God of all grace give you consolation and in due time, happy reunion.

I am, dear sir,
Yours very sincerely,
J. SADLER REECE.

P.S.—A number of very beautiful wreaths were placed on your son's grave. The devotion of the Canadian troops to our great cause touches those of us in the old Mother Country very deeply.

Pitfield House,
May 10, 1917.

Dear Mr. Newton,—Before you get this letter you will have heard, officially, that your son, Pte. F. Newton, 806701, died in the Stoke-on-Trent Military Hospital, on April 25, and he was buried on April 30, in the cemetery at Hartshill, Stoke-on-Trent.

As I am the visitor at the hospital for the Canadian Red Cross Society, I visited your son, and also, with my husband, attended his funeral; so I thought you might like a letter with a few particulars which, perhaps are not contained in any official notice. Your son came into the hospital with a large convoy of wounded after the Vimy Ridge battle; sixty-six Canadians came in with that convoy, and your son was one of them. He was wounded in one thigh and one arm, and seemed to be suffering considerably from shock, and he had also two or three attacks of hemorrhage. But it was blood poisoning from which he died. I believe something in a wound caused this, and that it was impossible to operate to remove it. Everything that could be done, was done, and the Sister in charge of the ward where he was, was much distressed that they could not save him. I believe that many times during his last days he was thinking of his dear ones, and mentioning names. I trust it will be some comfort to you to know that he died among friends—for the nurses and the men in his ward were most kind and sympathetic. A number of men who were well enough went to the funeral, and from the nurses and patients in his ward two wreaths were sent—one of fresh flowers and one artificial one, which will last and remain to mark his grave. My husband and I also sent a wreath, and I put on the following inscription: "Sent by Mr. and Mrs. Rathbone Edge, in kindest memory of Pte. F. Newton of Ontario, Canada, in the cause of truth and righteousness." He had a military funeral and it was a double one, for another soldier (an Englishman) had also died in the hospital, and they were buried together. The service in the cemetery chapel was conducted by the Hospital Chaplin (a clergyman) and the Rev. Sadler Reece, the Wesleyan Minister from Stoke-on-Trent, Forietty, and your son, being a Methodist, the committal sentences were read over his grave by Mr. Reece.

The grave is in a very nice part of the cemetery, in a plot specially reserved for Canadian soldiers dying here.

If there is anything else you would like to know, or anyhing I can do for you, do not hesitate to ask me.

With all kind thoughts and sympathy, I remain,
Yours truly,
E. M. EDGE.

GRAND JURY PRAISES THE CITY HOSPITALS

Institutions Are A Credit to the City—Inmates of the House of Refuge Pleased with the Superintendent and Matron—The Jury's Presentment

The Grand Jury, in connection with the June sittings of the County Court have made the following presentment:

To His Honour Judge Huycke,—We, the Grand Jury for the County Sessions of the County of Peterborough, called for June, 1917, beg leave to submit to your Honour the following:

We appreciate your words of welcome and following your directions, have endeavoured to fulfil the duties that devolved upon us.

We also would extend to the Mayor and City Council our recognition of the accommodation supplied to hold courts as a result of the fire at the Court House. We also recommend and feel assured that the County Council will provide, in reconstruction, a building suitable and consistent with the requirements for the conducto of affairs.

We unanimously concur with your Honour in encouraging a more united Canada in the prosecution of the great war that is now raging and earnestly trust that all energies and resources possible will be brought into requistion to accomplish the desired end.

We have endeavoured to comply with your suggestion inasmuch as all haste consistent with some measure of proper attention to duties has been exercised and the Jury liberated as quickly as possible.

We visited the County House of Refuge and found some forty inmates all happy and upon enquiry elicited from them expressions of delight with the new Superintendent and Matron. Since the report made by the last Grand Jury earlier in the season or during the present month the attention of the Board of Management has been drawn to unsanitary conditions as a result of plumbing and sewage disposal being out of order, and the plumbers are now at work remedying the same as well as the inadequate supply of water due to the system being out of order and no doubt in a few days the same conditions will prevail as when reported on by the former Grand Juries.

We found at the Nicholls Hospital conditions similar to those reported by the former Grand Jury and can only repeat such report.

At the St. Joseph's Hospital our visit was an opportunity to witness provisions for such institutions in every way modern, the system of X-ray as well as other appliances having been installed regardless of expense; in fact, the hospitals of the city are a credit to all concerned.

We also visited the gaol, which we found not in any way damaged by the fire, although the officials have to contend with may inconveniences due to such fire. There are only six inmates, three female and three male, and no better services could be desired than those rendered by the gaoler and other officials who are entrusted with the conduct of the gaol.

We again thank you for your kind and encouraging reference to the Jury, and trust that you may long be spared to occupy the exalted position of County Judge of which you are so worthy.

John Young,
Foreman.

Peterborough, June 14, 1917.

His Honour, in dismissing the Grand Jury from their duties, thanked them for the prompt attention they had given the discharge of their duties and, referring to the presentment, congratulated the city and county upon the possession of two well-equipped and administered hospitals.

Japanese Fete A Great Success

Countless novel attractions, a perfect evening, beautiful grounds and splendid music made the Japanese garden party, given by St. Paul's choir last night at Mr. Logan's residence, 14 Murray street, quite the fete of the season.

Outdoors Attractions.

The beautiful grounds, splendidly illuminated and decorated with pennants, presented the effect of a huge living kaleidoscope with the dainty little Japan girls in their charming Japanese costumes, ever busy waiting on their respective tables. The refreshment booth, to which these little Japs, the Misses Betty Mowatt, Olive Johnson, O. Mulligan, Mather, Ferguson, Coombe, Byers, May and Wilma Nelson, Lillian Moore, Meta Richardson and A. Hall belonged, was in charge of Miss Gurnow and Mrs. Allen, assisted by Mrs. Brodigan, Mrs. Main, Mrs. McEwen and Miss Lloyd.

The tireless wizards, the Messrs. John MacKee, Harry Taylor and Roy Byers, shared honours for popularity with Mrs. Goodwill and Miss Maisie Armstrong, who, by their marvellous revelations of what the future held, saved many a heart from the depths of despondency, especially the lovely young things who found their khaki clad heroes 'out somewhere' were true.

The candy booth, always a lively spot, kept Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Moir, Mrs. McDermid, Mrs. John Birnie and Miss McWilliams busy.

Rev. Pogue Wins Prize.

In the house, Rev. Mr. Pogue and the Messrs. McDermid, Anderson, Douglas, Carlisle, P. Trebilcock, D. Moore, Kyle, Harstone, Walter Stocker, Hal Crane and Corporal Lightheart entered into new fields, and the deftness of their handling of messiline, ninon and tulle in trimming hats, was convincing proof of their close observation of the ladies' styles. Rev. Mr. Pogue carried all before him in the stylish simplicity, the keynote of this season's styles, of his creation.

The Pierrot concert, composed of the Misses Dorothy Allen, Byers, Stone and Lynn, and Messrs. O. Steer, C. Clarke, Nelson, Carlisle and Milton, was a big attraction, and Piper Yeaman had little trouble in enticing the crowd to the house to the succession of brilliant performances given by them.

The Fish Pond.

No garden party was ever complete without a fish pond, and the one last night with its crowds of tiny devotees and real presents was a great drawing card.

Evening Successful.

And to say the whole evening was a great success is putting it mildly. Hundreds came and each was loud in praise of the entire entertainment and went home happy in the thought that whilst spending a perfect evening they had helped to erect a monument to the heroes who have gone overseas from St. Paul's. Too much cannot be said of the wonderful work accomplished by the ladies.

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Mothers who have once used Baby's Own Tablets for their little ones are always strong in their praise of this medicine. Among them is Mrs. Marcelle Boureau, Misonette, N.B., who writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine I know of for little ones. I am very thankful for what they have done for my children." The Tablets regulate the bowels and stomach; cure constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers; in fact they cure all the minor ills of little ones. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

His Youngest Brother, a Member of South Africa Forces, Dies on Transport

News from England by mail yesterday informed Mr. R. J. Devey of the death of his youngest brother, William Wallace Devey of the South African Forces. His last letter contained the news that he was leaving South Africa for France, via Umtali and Cape Town. On May 24th a letter received from the Chaplain on board a transport stated that Wallace Devey was dead from an attack of malarial fever and had been buried at sea on April 12th. The late Mr. W. W. Devey had been a resident in Rhodesia for about sixteen years, and is survived by his wife and two children.

HUNS VOTE KILLED AUSTRALIAN CONSCRIPTION

LONDON, June 14.—The votes of Germans and Austrians polled in Australia not long ago helped to defeat conscription in that country. That is what The Telegram's representative was told by officials at the Australian government offices here.

"Yes, naturalized Germans and Austrians still have the franchise in Australia," replied a representative of that dominion when queried. "And in the districts where they were in the majority the vote against conscription was strongest."

Such is Australia's experience with the Huns she has taken into her bosom. Enjoying all the freedom and prosperity of British rule, these people yet retain the rotten virus of Prussianism in their blood. They bask in the sunshine of democracy, amass wealth, live lives free from the tyranny and vexations of their native land, and yet turn again like the dog of Scripture to its vomit and hanker for the "kultur" of Bocheland.

DON'T APPRECIATE POSITION.

These Germans bite the hand that feeds them, turn against the land which they are sworn—bound by every obligation of decency and honour, of common gratitude—to stand by, and side with the Hun. These incomprehensible people, most of whom were mere dirt on the road in their native Germany, treated like cattle by the swaggering upper classes, would seemingly like to see Prussian rule established in place of the government they now enjoy. Once more they would like to live in a land swarming with soldiers, in a land where the herr lieutenant can turn civilians away from a restaurant table whenever he likes, can shove ordinary folk into the gutter, kick and cuff the soldiers under him with impunity, insult women and use abusive language towards all his inferiors.

REPRESENT THE KAISER.

And by inferior is meant everyone not an officer in the army or navy, a functionary in the Government, scion of a junker family, or other member of the upper crust. The German lieutenant is taught that everyone beneath his class is a swine, and must be treated with contempt. For does he not represent the All-Highest War Lord?

And no one dare resent the insults of these swashbucklers. The police with which Germany swarms are part and parcel of the army, subservient as the veriest private to these officers. Everyone must defer to the officers, for has not the Kaiser said so? Nothing short of the most flagran offence can call them to account.

CONTINUAL ESPIONAGE.

A land where police darken every doorstep, where secret service men are lying constantly in wait, where espionage is in the very air, where Governmental regulation and interference restricts all private enterprise, where no one is free from surveillance, secret and open; where the chance word may be taken up and used against one; where penalties await the slightest infraction of irksome laws, where even the railway station masters are military officers who must be approached politely by passengers, hat in hand, and asked deferentially about the train, and who even then are as like as not to answer rudely, if at all. A land where manhood suffrage is unknown, where every member of their so-called parliaments represents so many constituents, thus giving a handful of millionaires more members than millions of the poor.

CHILDREN'S TRAINING.

A land where class distinctions are as sharply defined as in the east, where caste prevails with ultra-snobbishness, each stickling for his right and privilege, scorning and trampling on those beneath him, fawning on those above, right from the lowest peasant and worker to the insufferable military aristocrats on top. A land where children are trained from infancy to be sneaks, brought up to think that cheating at school is all right if you don't get caught; rewarded for informing teacher of the doings of their fellow-pupils.

"VERBOTEN."

A country where that accursed word, "Verboten," sticks out everywhere, warning the populace that this or that must not be done under pains and penalties, and where the unwitting walker on forbidden grass may be sure that some tattle-tale will rush off and inform the police of his awful crime. A country where all individualism is crushed out, and where, herded like sheep from childhood to old age, the mass of the people, having no say in anything, blindly obey the orders of the most brutal, despotic government the world had ever seen.

THE QUESTION FOR CANADA

Such is the state of affairs to which these Hun "citizens" of Australia would seemingly like to return. That was their dictum at the polls when they killed conscription.

Canada still allows naturalized Germans and Austrians and Bulgars the franchise.

SPY ELEMENT STILL PRESENT IN UNITED STATES

Editor of Providence Journal Says Germans Burnt Canadian Parliament Buildings and Got Our Nickel

TORONTO, June 14.—Toronto united with the Canadian Press Association yesterday to welcome to the city Mr. John R. Rathom, editor and publisher of the Providence Journal, which has become famous throughout the world for its fearless exposure and defeat of the plots of German spies and propagandists in the United States.

"Did the Secret Service men of Great Britain associate themselves with you in unearthing German plots in the United States?" Is that the idea?"

The question was put direct to Mr. John A. Rathom, editor of the Providence Journal, as he stepped into Toronto to-day. The Journal has "pulled off more big scoops" and unearthed more German plots since the war began than any other newspaper in the world.

"No," replied Mr. Rathom emphatically, "that's not the idea at all."

"Then you were working independently of the police agents on secret service for the Government."

"Simply as newspaper people."

BURNT OTTAWA BUILDINGS

"Did the Germans burn the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa?"

"We had information that they would do so, and warned the authorities three weeks before it happened. Of course, it was difficult for us to prove that it was going to happen."

"Did the Deutschland really take Canadian nickel?"

TRACED CANADIAN NICKEL

"We traced the nickel to the Deutschland," said the editor. "It had been shipped into the United States from Canada two years before. We traced its movements back and forth, as published in the Journal.

"Now that the German Ambassador has gone, has German plotting ceased?"

"It has quieted down, but the elements are still there," replied Mr. Rathom.

REPORTERS DID IT.

"I don't want to take up your time now," said the famous editor. "But I want to say one thing. We have accomplished what we have accomplished, not by aid of pipe lines, or card reading or secret service men. We have accomplished it by the best people on the earth—when they are good—the newspaper reporters."

FINANCIAL SHIRKERS

Government War Savings Certificates Are Looking for Purchasers

Financial shirkers should be condemned in every community. People who indulge in extravagance, who are guilty of wastefulness, who persist in living in luxury and unworthy of the Dominion and deliberately betraying the men who are fighting for them at the front. Canada has a glorious war record. Those who are not in the firing trenches should be in the financial trenches. Study your expenditures. Be sure that you are not spending unnecessarily before you buy. There never was greater national need for thrift and economy. Some new things must be bought but be certain first that the old thing will not do for another year or another month. Do not spend a cent needlessly. Save your dollars to help the army fight its battles. Money provides the supplies of war. Are you doing anything to supply the Canadian division? Do not be extreme. There is a false economy which wastes instead of saving. But practise the true economy and put every possible dollar into War Savings Certificates which can be purchased at your nearest Money Order Post Office or Bank. B-3.

PLAN TO ENLIST 18 MILLION FROM SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Men, Women and Children will do Part to Aid Country.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—One hundred and fifty thousand Sunday schools, with an aggregate membership of 18,000,000 men, women and children will be enlisted for war service if a programme planned by the executive committee of the Sunday School Council is adopted by the various denominational bodies.

At a meeting of the Council in the Roger Williams building indorsement was given to President Wilson's suggestion that July 1 be observed by Sunday schools of the nation as Patriotic Sunday, with special contributions to the American Red Cross "for the alleviation of the suffering entailed by the prosecution of the present war." The executive council represents thirty denominations.

A committee on national Sunday School patriotic service was appointed to arrange a conference with the various war relief agencies and determine what the 160,000 Sunday schools of the country can contribute in the way of effective war service. The Rev. Edgar Blake, secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School Board of Chicago, was appointed chairman, and associated with him are W. C. Pearce of Chicago, John L. Alexander of Chicago, the Rev. Lester Bradner of New York, and John M. Somerndike of this city. The Rev. Mr. Bradner, who is a Protestant Episcopal clergyman, presided at the meeting.

In connection with the "Patriotic day" observance the International Sunday School association has planned an ambitious programme for the 18,000,000 Sunday School pupils, including the following features:

Enrollment as members of the Red Cross society of officers, teachers, and pupils.

An offering from each school for the Red Cross, the Army Y.M.C.A. and other war relief agencies.

Young men will be urged to enlist in the army or navy and young women will be asked to go into the Red Cross.

Patriotic messages from Washington, Lincoln, and Woodrow Wilson will be read at the services.

Veterans of the civil war and of the Spanish-American war will have seats on the platforms.

Flag raisings and flag salutes will be features of the programme.

INVEST NURSES WITH POWER IS RED CROSS PLEA

Those in the Canadian Army have Rank.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—In Canada Red Cross nurses join the army with the rank of lieutenant, and may achieve the rank of captain later on. In the British forces nurses are next in authority to the officers of the medical corps. But in the United States army a trained nurse has literally no authority or position whatever. She is ranked beneath an orderly, who may have only a few weeks of training. She may have spent years in learning her profession, but it makes no difference. He is her superior.

This is the condition in the United States hospital service that is already bringing a shower of protesting telegrams down upon the War Department from all parts of the country. Nurses who have joined the service are beginning to object.

Some Held Back.

Others who have considered offering their aid to the government are holding back, as they learn of the conditions which they will be obliged to face. Hospitals and private citizens from coast to coast are becoming aroused and demanding that a nurse in the service of the government be accorded the authority which she enjoys in a civil hospital.

The Red Cross had pledged itself to furnish the government with 300 trained nurses a month. It has been hoped that these will be women of intelligence and long experience in their profession. If (however, they are to be treated as the merest probationists in a nurses' training school, instead of as capable women, with authority, it is going to be hard for the Red Cross to get the proper material.

Urge Reform.

Those familiar with army medical matters are urging that legislation be introduced into congress at once which will bestow upon trained nurses the authority which they should exercise.

Only a short time ago an incident occurred which demonstrated how inefficient and hampered by red tape the hospital service is. A trained nurse of five years' standing had charge of a hospital ward, under the direction of an orderly who had enjoyed a month of training before coming to the hospital.

PROMPT ACTION BY M. JONNART

French Senator Lost No Time in Taking Drastic Action at Athens

PARIS, June 13.—The vigor with which the French Senator, M. Jonnart, on special mission to Athens as the representative of France, Great Britain and Russia, has begun the difficult task of settling the Greek problem has caused the liveliest satisfaction here. Before he sailed, ten days ago, he obtained absolute authority to act as he considered best. His high character and abilities, his fine record as a diplomat and administrator, and the free hand given him led French opinion to expect effective action, but that he should have so rapidly and easily eliminated the chief stumbling block of the Entente allies in the Levant came as a most agreeable surprise. That he will succeed in helping Greece to get on her feet again in the shortest possible time, notwithstanding many difficulties which still remain, is the unanimous opinion.

The Saloniki expedition has been attacked by many in France as useless, but everyone is agreed that the force once there ought to be given every opportunity to accomplish its purpose. It was admitted that with the perpetual menace of a stab in the back from the Greek royalist army that the expeditionary force was doomed to partial inaction. Encouraged by the moderation of the Entente allies, whose over-patient policy was attributed largely here to the opposition of the late Russian regime to strong measures, Constantine eluded most of the guarantees extracted from him during June and December of last year, and continued his intrigue with Germany. The blockade alone kept him from active hostility.

M. Jonnart, after a series of rapid consultations with the Entente allied Ministers and with the Greek Premier, Zaimis, decided upon quick and drastic action, and proceeded to Saloniki where he arranged with Gen Sarrail for military assistance.

Present Day Manifestations of the Spirit of the Elder Brother of the Prodigal Son

Subject of Interesring Address Delivered by Rev, T. T. Shields at Park Street Church Last Night.

THANKS PETERBORO HOSTS

Sermons based on the parable of the prodigal son almost invariably deal with the affecting experiences of the central figure of this primitive drama. The consoling message of God's mercy and love, expressed so lucidly and impressively, is the theme usually emphasized from the pulpit. In the persons of the father and the younger son are presented types that are readily recognized. The older son apepars almost as a supernumerary, entering the action towards its close and, in a sense, as a foil to his repentent brother. Hence, the choice of the character of the older son as the subject of Rev. Dr. T. T. Shield's address at Park Street church at last night's session of the convention of the Peterborough Baptist Association aroused the large congregation with an interest that was sustained to the very end.

Sonship without brotherhood was the first thought to be unfolded. Dr. Shields imagined the older son as a man who bore his father's name with pride. The father lovingly called him "my son and heir," but the son failed to discover that the privileges of sonship entailed corresponding obligations of brotherhood. Here was a man untroubled by the empty chair at his father's board. He seemed to me unaware that it was his father's desire that it should be occupied. There was plenty of room, but the son was not in the least disturbed. By analogy, Dr. Shields adverted throughout his address to the church and the older son characters found therein. "Have you not seen people," he observed, "who are not disturbed by the empty seat in the house of the Lord." This son might have asked himself why there was so much bread to spare on the table, such plenty in the house. "Was it intended that I should be the only heir to all this?" he might have asked. This man never talked with his father about his absent brother. "I am sure" Dr. Shields said, "that he never broke the silence or that he wondered where his brother was ,if he was hungry, or if he had any rfiends in that far country. Nor did he express the wish that he might leave the plowing for a time to take the long road in search of his brother."

Have you not received a commission to try to find the absent ones, Dr. Shields asked. The spirit of the elder brother possessed far too many people. Men were living only for themselves. Millions of professed disciples of Jesus were living for themselves alone, and this was true of every one of us to some extent.

SERVICE WITHOUT FELLOWSHIP.

The elder brother was no idler in his father's house. He did not dissipate his heritage. His outward life was perfectly circumspect. In the community his character was doubtless admired, and the father was congratulated in having such a dutiful son. He was busy all the time, but there was no fellowship with his father. He probably came in from the fields and talked crop prospects and urged the need of larger barns. And the father doubtless mentioned his satisfaction that things were going so well. Dr. Shields imagined the elder brother saying, "I don't quite understand why any father doesn't share my enthusiasm. I have lately noticed a faraway look in his eye as if he were not bothering about these things."

Was there ever a day, Dr. Shields interposed, when the church of Christ was busier than to-day? Was there ever a day when there were fewer evidences of the outgoing of the grace of God. "I believe," he added, "that even the pulpit may be occupied by some elder sons." He emphasized the need of fellowship with service, urging it in every aspect of church work. Ministers should not fail to show that the fundamental to all human hope for the future was the cross of Christ. They had no right to preach without recognising the need of the cleansing blood of Christ. Everything we do for God should be shot through with the spirit of the love for God and the passion of it. The church was God's agency. Through it He expressed Himself, and every worker had as noble a ministry as that of publicly proclaiming the glories of His word.

HEIRSHIP WITHOUT HAPPINESS.

The elder son coming in from the fields on the day of his brother's return felt like an outsider. He called one of the servants and asked the meaning of the merriment and festivity. He was surly and grouchy when his father spoke to him and refused to go inside. Similarly there were men who remained outside the church. The elder son complained that he had been worked faithfully all the time, but there had never been merry-making for him. "If we haven't made happy with our friends, it is perhaps because we had no friends. If we have not had a good time, perhaps there was no occasion for it." Hundreds in the churches do not enjoy their religion. Some love pleasure more than God, and the majority of people find their pleasures outside the house of God. They were worshipping alone instead of enjoying the happiness of closer communion with others.

"PREPAREDNESS."

Rev. N. S. McKechnie, B.A., of McMaster University made a plea for the support of McMaster, Woodstock and Moulton Colleges. He asked for their prayers, their financial assistance and their children. The world was being educated to materialism. At the Baptist educational institutions the ideal of service was accentuated rather than that of self-aggrandisement. They sought to prepare young men and women to meet life, and to overcome the material drift that influences the world. The courses given were of the best and McMaster graduates were thoroughly equipped for the vocations in which they were trained.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

A resolution moved by Rev. A. A. Trembert and seconded by Rev. Mr. McKechnie was passed by the Association expressing their appreciation and thanks to the pastor and members of Park street and the friends of Murray street who had assisted them for the bounteous hospitality. Rev. Dougal Brown acknowledged the thanks of the visitors and hoped they would return.

BLOODSHED IS FEARED

J. H. Rainville, M. P., Appeals to Quebec Priests for Assistance

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, June 14.—J. H. Rainville, M.P. for Chambly-Vercheres, and Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, has addressed a letter to each of the parish priests of the united counties, in which he states he apprehends that unless better counsel prevails the crisis brought about by the announcement of conscription will result in bloodshed.

Splendid Pictures of Two War Heroes

Two magnificent photographs that bring home the war to Peterborough are shown in the display windows of the Roy Studio. The pictures are those of Capt. Harold F. Hill, son of Mr. W. H. Hill, killed in action at Vimy Ridge, April 9th, and Capt. R. E. Picard, son of Mr. Joseph Picard, killed in action at Fresnoy on May 3rd. The photographs, which are splendid likenesses, are to be hung in the Collegiate Institute, where so many pictures of Collegiate boys who have made the supreme sacrifice, are already shown.

BANK MANAGER FOUND DEAD IN AN AUTOMOBILE

TORONTO, June 14. — Sitting in his motor car his body leaning slightly to one side, his hand on the wheel, Harold Morris, aged 42, manager of a local branch of the Dominion Bank, was found dead this morning at seven o'clock near the garage at the rear of 20 Howard street. He was in a dress-suit, and it is thought he had come from a social gathering when he was stricken with heart disease. The body remained there in the car all night apparently.

Another Resolution for Technical Schools

The Industrial and Labour committee of the Greater Peterborough Association held a most successful meeting last night in the City Clerk's Office. The chairman, Mr. Breyfogle, brought in a very satisfactory report as to the progress of the housing problem. The question of a Technical school for Peterborough was taken up and the following resolution was moved by Mr. W. H. Denham and seconded by Mr. J. Begley and adopted.

"That the question of a Technical school for Peterborough, for the future development of the young men and women is of vital importance to every citizen of the city, and it is the consensus of opinion of the committee that every effort should be made to secure a Technical school for Peterborough."

A copy of the above along with a letter tendering the committee's assistance and co-operation was forwarded, to Mr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Board of Education.

Mr. J. J. Hartley also spoke very strongly in support of the movement to secure a Technical school as it would prove to be a determining factor in the lives of the children of Peterborough.

FOUND GUILTY.

Minnie Burns Was Charged With Forging Mail Receipt Book.

Minnie Burns, of Marmora, was found guilty by a jury this morning of forging a registered mail receipt book at Norwood, and remanded for sentence by His Honour Judge Hoyche. The evidence showed that the defendant had received a registered letter posted to Mrs. M. Arnold, a soldier's wife, whose name she forged and whose cheques she had cashed.

Conservatives in Caucus Talk Railways

Other Things Were Also Discussed at Gathering This Morning

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 14.—At the conclusion of a lengthy Conservative caucus this morning the Prime Minister announced to the press that the assembly had discussed railway problems and other matters.

The question of relieving the railway situation is growing acute as the interest paying periods draw near. It is understood that the caucus discussed the question as to whether the situation might be met by further grants to the two suppliant systems or by giving effect to the finds of the Drayton-Acworth report, which favours nationalization.

The "other matters" discussed will not for obvious reasons be made public.

The Liberals have not yet held their adjourned caucus on the conscription bill, but a number were in consultation with Sir Wilfrid Laurier during the morning, probably on this issue.

These included Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Messrs. Robert Gruise of Dauphin, Sir Lewi Thompson of Qu'Appelle, and E. M. Macdonald of Pictou.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM HAS WITHDRAWN HIS RESIGNATION

Government Proposes To Provide A Measure of Conscription of Wealth in Accordance with His Demands

It was learned to-day that Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has withdrawn the resignation of his candidacy recently submitted to the West Peterborough Conservative Association because of his disapproval and objection to the lack of provision for the conscription of wealth in the Government's compulsory service bill. This return to the status quo ante or antic, as the local Conservative paper satirized Mr. Burnham's temporary bolt, is accepted by a majority of the executive of the Association, according to the statement of one of the most prominent members this afternoon. The Government, it was admitted, had seen the wisdom of Mr. Burnham's adverse criticism of the limitations of the militare bill, and had hastened to assure Mr. Burnham that the deficiency he had indicated would be supplied in a clause that would be interpolated during the next reading. In other words the Government promises to readjust its outlook, broadening and raising it to the more sweeping proportions demanded by Mr. Burnham in any conscription measure the Government produced.

Thus the ripple on the party surface seems to have all but spent itself to-day, but at Tuesday night's meeting there is a likelihood that the recent commotion will not subside so smoothly. Mr. Burnham's resignation to the Association was the natural result of his inability to support a conscription bill that demanded men while it failed to call up money and resources that he felt should also be used to win the war. Mr. Burnham had no opportunity of sounding the opinions of the executive of the Conservative Association, hence he resigned his candidacy.

Mr. Burnham's spectacular, and doubtless sincere action, leaves the impression that he feels strongly on this question of the conscription of wealth. Hence it may be expected that he will not be content with any halting or inadequate measure. Having committed himself so forcibly, he will surely demand a bill that will be really effectual in its conscription of wealth. It will be interesting to learn the scope of the Government amendment that has so completely placated the local member.

Conceding the acceptance of Mr. Burnham's withdrawal of his resignation on Tuesday night, the local Association practically endorses Mr. Burnham's demand on the Government, and commits itself to the growing agitation for the conscription of wealth. Some of the executive stand united with the member in his present attitude, but it is likely that the Association will desire the fullest particulars before involving themselves to the extent Mr. Burnham wants the Government to go.

In any event his proposition finds many supporters in and out of the Conservative Association's executive, and some of its members are smiling at the extreme language of its "party organ" that had dismissed Mr. Burnham, scarcely before the wires had communicated his resignation.

Manufacturer's Committee Recommend Expenditure of $690 for Advertising Purposes

Three Publications Selected To Extoll Local Advantages — No Cancellation Stamp

At a meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council, held last evening, it was decided to recommend the expenditure of $690 for advertising Peterborough in the following publications: "Industrial Canada," one-quarter page every month, $150; "Factory," two and a half inches deep by two columns wide, every other month, for $165, and the "System," two inches double column every other month for $403. The figures were submitted by A. McKim, Limited, Toronto.

Cannot Provide Stamp.

A letter was received from the Post Office Department at Ottawa, setting forth reasons why a cancellation stamp advertising Peterborough could not be used in the local post offices. The letter points out that such a stamp can only be used when the purpose is of general benefit to the country, such as the Toronto Exhibition, which is national in scope, and the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives.

Mothers' Club Met at the Y.M.C.A

Interesting Address by Rev. Dr. Wilson Was Feature

The regular monthly meeting of the Mothers' Club was held Wednesday in the Y.M.C.A. at 3 p.m., the President in the chair. The committee for the concert reported $3.38 clear after expenses, which will be to buy wool. The thanks of the Club were extended to J. J. Turner for flags; also Mr. Williamson, of the Peterborough Floral Co., for plants loaned for concert.

Owing to so many members being away for the months of July and August, it was decided not to meet for sewing until September, but the knitting will still go on.

The Club intends to collect papers at the end of June. Save your papers and watch for the date.

At 3.30 the Rev. J. P. Wilson of Trinity Church spoke to the Club on "Motherhood." His talk was very interesting and was very much enjoyed by those present.

A standing vote of thanks was given Mr. Wilson for his talk. Then the ladies served tea and a social hour was spent.

FAMOUS HORSE HAS RETURNED FROM FRONT

MONTREAL, June 13.—Steve Lane, the famous old steeplechaser, who left Canada a couple of years ago is charged for Col. Farquhar commanding officer of the Princess Patricians, is back in Quebec, turned out, to pass his remaining days at Mr. Colin Campbell's place, Manor House, St. Hilaire, Que. Steve Lane saw 18 months' active service, and had some miraculous escapes. Of the 1,200 which made up the Princess Pats there are but 75 survivors, and Steve Lane is the only charger to come through safely. After Col. Farquhar was killed astride of him, Steve Lane was presented to Major Hamilton Gault, the gentleman who donated $500,000 to finance the Princess Pats. In one of the famous battles some few months ago, while riding the old steeplechaser, Major Gault was wounded in both legs and incapacitated for further service. When he was ordered back home he decided to bring old Steve Lane back with him, and of the thousands of horses that have been sent overseas since the outbreak of the war he is the only horse to return. Steve Lane won many steeplechases in Canada, among them the William Hendrie Memorial Steeplechase, which calls for a journey over the three-mile course.

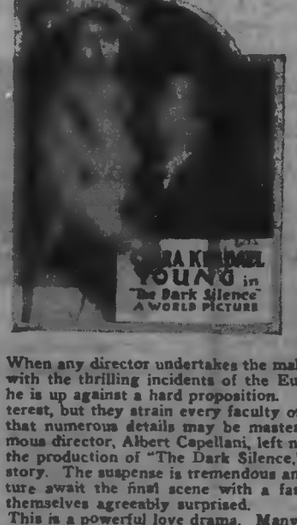
EMPIRE THEATRE JUNE 14-15-16



William A. Brady presents

Clara Kimball Young in "THE DARK SILENCE"

When any director undertakes the making of a love story combined with the thrilling incidents of the European War, he realizes that he is up against a hard proposition. Such pictures do not lack interest, but they strain every faculty of the director's mind in order that numerous details may be mastered above criticism. The famous director, Albert Capellani, left nothing for the imagination in the production of "The Dark Silence," leat it be the ending of the story. The suspense is tremendous and those who first see the picture await the final scene with a fast-beating pulse only to find themselves agreeably surprised.

This is a powerful love drama. Many of the scenes were taken behind the firing lines of the great European armies.

However, "The Dark Silence" with its war scenes never impresses you as a war story; the thread of romance is too strong. Photography is unexcelled, settings rich, and Clara Kimball Young's personality dominates every minute of the play.

If you have become tired from seeing pictures with the similarity of plot and circumstance, this is an opportunity to refresh your mind with something new.

Crop Prospects at Kinmount Very Good

Red Cross Society Has Been Busy Other News Paragraphs

KINMOUNT.—In spite of the rough weather this spring, everything in garden and field is looking fine. Some time ago it was thought by the farmers that the hay crop would be a failure, but this weather and the continued absence of frost, is improving the outlook.

The Ladies' Home Mission in connection with the Presbyterian Church met Wednesday last in the church. The renovating of the Manse was the most particular business transacted.

The Red Cross Society met on Friday, June 8th, at the home of Mrs. Harry Hopkins. The Red Cross Workers of Kinmount, on May 28th, shipped the following, viz.:

20 Property bags.
13 Towels.
28 Pillow cases.
16 Wash cloths.
17 Pairs of Socks, and
$25 in cash.

A sale of home-made cooking will be held here on Saturday, June 23, in the sample room of Herlihey's, and every one is invited to contribute. Ice cream will be served.

Williams officiated at the grave. The parents have the sincere sympathy of their friends in the loss of their little boy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Molyneaux and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Molyneaux, on Sunday afternoon, motored to Burnt River to visit Mrs. J. Jones, their daughter and sister, who is ill.

Everywhere that potatoes can be planted it is being done. Some who did not take the trouble of growing potatoes before, and thought it was easier to buy them in the days when they were not $3.00 and $4.00 per bushel, are finding places for them this year. Many thought that because the seed was so high in price, there would be fewer potatoes planted than usual, but this is not so, for both that vegetable and all others are growing in abundance.

We have been looking forward to the time when our Government would look after the re-arranging of the extremely high prices of living, especially in things which the people cannot control. The members of our Government were chosen by the people to act in the interests of the people and not in the interest of every grasping rogue who wishes to corner all or any of the necessary articles of living. It makes little difference to those who are getting rich through the war, and, therefore, would rather see the war continue than have peace proclaimed. But to the wage-earners and to those of small means and unable to earn, it is of vital importance. I suppose those same men imagine that the wives and families of our soldiers are living in clover on the allowance made them, but let the wives and children of those who are greedy to cruelty be put in their place, and their feelings would be different. Their allowance is only a small moiety compared to the earnings of their husbands and sons when at home at their trades or in business. What could be given to them which would be a right return for the many, many anxious hours and often deepest life-long sorrow which comes to these wives and children. Talk of German cruelty, I think the less said about it the better, while those who, from sheer greed, hold the prices under their control and leave so many to suffer, and are winked at by those in power. I know many men who earn a fair wage and are sober and industrious, men with wives, both competent and willing to live close, and yet the prices of everything from rent and fuel to tea, sugar, and clothes, are so high that it is almost impossible for those hard-working men to have sufficient food of the kind which is necessary to keep up their strength for their strenuous labour, and yet the tyranny goes on. Let us hear less of German cruelty until our own country is free from the oppression of greed.
